REGROUPING ORDERS BLOCK ADJOURNING

DISTRICT TAX RATE IS SLASHED TO $1.50

REALTY OWNER SAVINGS PUT AT 17½ PER CENT

12 Per Cent Reduction on Tangible Personal Property Made.

Reduction of the District tax rate from $1.70 on $100 to $1.50, with estimated savings to Washington taxpayers of $3,804,000, was announced late yesterday by the District Commissioners, following receipt of a comprehensive financial review and forecast by Auditor Daniel J. Donovan.

The 20-cent cut in the tax rate, together with a reduction in realty assessments of $80,000,000 for the fiscal year 1934, as compared with the 1933 figure, will give real estate owners total savings of 17½ per cent, Maj. Donovan pointed out, and in addition owners of tangible personal property will save 12 per cent.

Congress Prevented Cuts.

In releasing the auditor's report and in announcing the new tax rate, Dr. Luther H. Reichelderfer, chairman of the board of Commissioners, called attention to the fact that "the Commissioners have taken advantage of their first opportunity to consider the reduction of the tax rate."

"During the fiscal years between 1930 and 1932, inclusive, Congress has, by legislation, prevented any reduction in the tax rate, notwithstanding the fact that in this period the surplus revenues of the District have at one time amounted to as much as $9,500,000," he added.

After calling attention to the realty tax savings of $3,660,000 and the personal tangible property tax reduction of $144,000, Dr. Reichelderfer pointed out that the "17½ per cent can not be applied to each case or holding since reassessments and equalizations are being made which change the base.

"If the property is assessed at the same value as formerly, the difference will be around 12 per cent. If there is a reduction in the assessed value, then the difference will be greater than 12 per cent."

Maj. Donovan's report reveals that realty tax assessments for 1934 have been cut $79,359,566 from the 1933

Heat Beats Down 150 Boy Marchers

Evanston, Ill., June 10 (A.P.).—Eighteen high school band members were in a hospital here tonight, the most seriously affected of 150 youthful competitors who collapsed in the "marching contest," high point of national high school band contest's final day program.

Fifty of the boys who faltered in the marching under intense heat were carried off the field. One hundred others dropped out of line but were not disabled.

Although the hot sun was blamed for the wilting of most the marchers, police were investigating the food supply for the contestants after receiving complaints from the hospital patients that some of the provisions were not of good quality.

Customs Officers Seize Two Fugitives From Kansas Penitentiary Break.

San Angelo, Tex., June 10 (A.P.).—Billy Woods and Clifford Dopson, who escaped with nine other convicts from the Kansas Penitentiary Memorial Day, were captured by two United States customs officers today while fleeing toward the Mexican border.

Two women and a baby were with the convicts, who were driving a car stolen in Missouri.

Seven of the prisoners who kidnaped Warden Kirk Prather and two guards, and fled over the wall of the Kansas Prison at Lansing, now remain at large.

Lewis Bechtel and Frank Sawyer were captured several days ago in Oklahoma. Sawyer was taken to the Oklahoma Penitentiary, where he already was under a life sentence.

The convicts still at liberty include the leaders of the prison break, Wilbur Underhill, accused of at least three murders, and Harvey Bailey, notorious bank robber.

Woods and Dopson, both under 5 to 15 year sentences in Kansas, were encountered while the customs officers were in search of liquor smugglers.

When the officers stopped the convicts' car and asked to see the bill of sale, Tilley recognized Woods and placed the party under arrest.

MATTERN FLYS LAST LEG ACROSS SIBERIA

Next Hop From Khabarovsk Will Land American on Home Soil.

Moscow, June 10 (A.P.).—When last heard from today Jimmy Mattern, American round-the-world airman, was passing over Rukhlovo, in eastern Siberia, about 725 miles short of Khabarovsk, his next landing point.

That was at 9:15 o'clock this morning, Moscow time (1:15 a. m., Eastern standard time). The chances were that by the time Moscow received news that Mattern had been sighted at Rukhlovo, he already was in Khabarovsk, unless he made an unscheduled stop, as communication with eastern Siberia is very slow.

From Khabarovsk the flier will hop off for the North American continent. There is no expectation here that he will be able to take the round-the-world speed record from Wiley Post and Harold Gatty, the men he started out to beat, but it is assumed that he will go ahead to set a time for a solo flight circling the globe.

Mattern's take-off place today was Beloye, Siberia, which he left at 1:50 a. m., Moscow time (5:50 p. m. Friday, Eastern standard time). Forty minutes later he passed over Irkutsk, about 50 miles to the east.

Reports here indicated that weather conditions were fair all the way from Beloye to Khabarovsk.

Clouds and Wind Break Heat Wave

Cloudiness and gentle winds broke the heat wave yesterday—the thermometer's maximum effort being 86 degrees. Similar conditions today, with thundershowers a possibility, will keep the thermometer below 90, the Weather Bureau believes.

Friday's excessive heat when 100 degrees was recorded took a fourth life. Joseph Francis Madden, 47, of 1518 Gales street northeast, died early yesterday from a heart attack, which physicians at Casualty Hospital said was induced by the heat.

There were no prostrations yesterday and the city breathed easier with the prospect of a relatively cool weekend.

Explosion Injures 4; 2 Firemen Overcome

Atlanta, Ga., June 10 (U.P.).—Four persons were injured, possibly fatally, and two firemen were overcome late today in a sulphur-dioxide explosion at the Loeb-Apte Produce Co.

The chemical was being sprayed on beans.

GOODMAN'S 287 WINS U. S. OPEN BY ONE STROKE

By ALAN GOULD
(Associated Press Sports Writer.)

North Shore Golf Club, Glenview, Ill., June 10 (A.P.).—By the slim margin of a single stroke and a missed 4-foot putt on the home green by his one close pursuer, Johnny Goodman, bronzed, dapper little insurance salesman and 23-year-old amateur "giant killer," of Omaha, Nebr., today climbed on top of the golfing world as the new open champion of the United States.

After a phenomenal outburst of shot-making skill that at one dazzling juncture this afternoon threatened to explode all existing open championship records to bits, Goodman survived a sudden and dangerous slump with just enough of his previously lop-sided margin to stave off the closing rush of Ralph Guldahl, sensational 21-year-old professional of the St. Louis Country Club.

Guldahl Saves Show.

Goodman finished the 72-hole championship struggle with rounds of 75-66-70-76, for a total of 287, that fell only one stroke short of the all-time championship record. Guldahl, 6 strokes behind at the outset of the last 36 holes and 9 behind with only 15 to go, rallied superbly to take second place with 76-71-70-71—288.

Guldahl's dramatic closing challenge was the only thing that saved the tournament from being turned into a rout. He picked up 7 strokes on six holes as he reached the last turn in 35. He needed another 35 to tie Goodman, but he missed a 3-foot putt on the fifteenth to waste the first of his last big opportunities and he failed, finally, to get down a 4-foot putt on the eighteenth green after a remarkable recovery from a trap.

Climax of Struggle.

It was a close call for the Nebraska "game cock," after he had all but shot the tournament to pieces by taking a 6-stroke lead and then opened fire on the last round with a 4—3—2, including an eagle and a birdie. But he pulled himself together after a 6-hole debacle to shoot the closing nine within a single stroke of par. He proved he was as game as they come under pressure. He emerged with a big grin from a cordon of khaki-clad Marines, after Guldahl's finish, to accept the championship cup and gold medal, while the top

Hawaii Bill Killed By Senate Action

(Associated Press.)

President Roosevelt's bill to permit him to appoint a governor for Hawaii from the mainland apparently was killed in the Senate last night by the strenuous opposition of Republican Independents.

Chairman Tydings (Democrat), Maryland, sought to bring the measure up under suspension of the rules after objections had blocked his request for unanimous consent to take up the bill, which already has passed the House.

Senator LaFollette (Republican), Wisconsin, raised a point of order against the motion to suspend the rules, and it was sustained. This automatically prohibited action and means the bill can not be acted upon until Congress reconvenes in January.

Nevada Counties Name Delegations for Repeal

Reno, Nev., June 9 (A.P.).—Forty delegates pledged for repeal of the prohibition law were elected in county conventions today to attend a State convention on September 5, and formally vote Nevada's ratification of the twenty-first amendment.

Not a single dry delegate was elected in the entire State. Nomination and election of antiprohibition delegations were by acclamation in nearly every county and all gatherings were marked by complete harmony.

White House Step Tangles Program; 'Apportionment' Plan Finally Killed; President Sees $25,000,000 Savings

Merger of All Buying For Government Is Proposed.

Consolidation of all Federal purchasing and disbursing facilities, unified control of all Federal property, and the division of the Prohibition Bureau into two parts would be effected by the executive order sent to Congress last night with the design of saving $25,000,000 annually.

In addition to the consolidations, the order abolishes a number of Government boards and agencies. Last night's changes were the first important ones to be made under the reorganization authority of the economy act. Other changes will be made later, but not until the next session of Congress, President Roosevelt declared.

Immediately following issuance of the order there was sharp repercussion on the Senate floor, where Senators Borah, of Idaho; Johnson, of California; Reed, of Pennsylvania (Republicans), and Long, of Louisiana (Democrat), protested vehemently the short notice given Congress by the President.

Branded "Meaningless."

Tearing into the proposed consolidation of Government procurement functions, Senator Reed declared it "threw overboard" years of training and incorruptible service of existing purchasing agencies.

The Pennsylvanian declared the accompanying explanation of the proposed shifts and consolidations was "couched in terms so general that it is utterly meaningless."

"This," he said, "is the crowning travesty in a week that has made a perfect farce of representative government."

Borah Wants Time to Study.

Nome Ready to Receive Mattern From Siberia

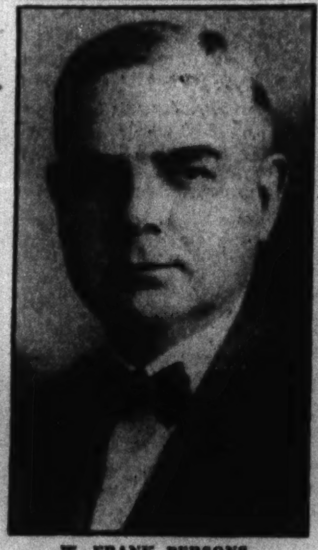
A light rain began to fall late today, with prospects for continued unsettled weather for the next 24 hours, weather observers said. The temperature was 34 degrees. A barometric low centered in this region and similar weather conditions existed over the Bering Sea to the West.

JOBS DIRECTOR



W. FRANK PERSONS, who has been nominated by President Roosevelt as director of the U. S. Employment Service. Mr. Persons lives at 3051 N street northwest. He has handled relief work for both the American Red Cross and the League of Red Cross Societies.

DODD IS APPOINTED ENVOY TO GERMANY

W. Frank Persons, of This City, Is New Director of Employment Service.

Continuing the last-minute rush to plug the remaining gaps in the patronage list, President Roosevelt yesterday chose William E. Dodd, university professor and historian, as Ambassador to Germany, nominated a Washington man for Director of the U. S. Employment Service and selected a new Assistant Secretary of State.

W. Frank Persons, prominent welfare worker, will be the new head of the employment service, while Harry F. Payer, Cleveland attorney, will take the State Department post left vacant by James G. Rogers. John Cudahy, Milwaukee realtor, was named Ambassador to Poland, while Lincoln MacVeage, of Connecticut, will be Minister to Greece.

Mr. Dodd, the new Ambassador to Germany, was born in North Carolina in 1869. He took his Ph. D. at Liepzig and is a German translator and historian, as well as having taught general history in a number of schools. He met the President, it is understood, at the Chicago con-

Conferees Cut Method Of Dismissing U. S. Employes.

Threat of Losing Jobs Hung Over 10,000 in District.

By ROBERT C. ALBRIGHT.

The so-called "apportionment" plan of cutting down Federal personnel by dismissing first employes from States having more than their quota of workers last night was completely eliminated from the independent offices appropriation bill.

The action was taken by House and Senate conferees at a session that lasted until midnight. The step was tentative in the sense that Senate conferees on the measure never were formally apointed by the Vice President.

In the crush toward adjournment, no time had been found to name them. The conference on the measure proceeded, nevertheless, and will be resumed tomorrow, when the Senate conferees will be appointed as a matter of course.

Optional Retirement.

Another far-reaching step taken at last night's preliminary conference was to strike out the Senate's optional retirement amendment, which would have permitted employes in the service of their Government for 30 years to retire at will, on a pension.

The conference group arrived at no decision on the controversial veterans' section, which had been the subject of White House parleys with House members over two days. The issue hinged on whether Senate conferees would accept the compromise agreed to earlier in the evening by the House, placing the burden of proof on the Government in eliminating "presumptive" disability cases from the pay rolls. Under the Connally amendment, adopted by the Senate, all presumptive cases would have been retained on the rolls at a cost to the Government of $170,000,000.

Action of the conferees in striking out the apportionment language, if confirmed by final House and Senate action, removes the threat of early dismissal hanging over the heads of more than 10,000 workers, who entered the service from the District, and would have been the first dismissed.

Nearby States Benefit.

Employes from such "over-quota" States as Virginia, Maryland, Vermont and Iowa, were also removed from immediate danger.

As the House had phrased the clause, "apportionment" would be the principal yard stick set up for de-

Roosevelt Is Seen Rejecting British 10 Cents on $1 Offer

London Ready to Meet Her Obligation Thursday, Cable Declares.

London, June 10 (U.P.).—Great Britain, chief of the 13 nations owing the United States a total of $144,179,674 due on war debts next Thursday, will meet its obligations.

That was clear tonight as the debt situation neared a showdown on the question whether Europe will acknowledge its debt and pay at least a reasonable sum on it.

Most of the other 12 nations indicated that they will not pay next week—especially France, the chief debtor after Great Britain.

Great Britain's determination to make a gesture of good faith as 67 nations gather here for the world economic conference, opening Monday, is attributed chiefly to strong sentiment in favor of guarding the United Kingdom's credit reputation jealously.

The $75,950,000 due from Britain to the United States Thursday prob-

Debt Question Is Expected to Affect Economic Parley Profoundly.

By HAROLD J. T. HORAN.

President Roosevelt has received and replied to a tentative offer for the forthcoming intergovernmental debt payment from Great Britain, it was believed here last night. The British Ambassador, Sir Ronald Lindsay, called yesterday at the State Department to hear from Acting Secretary of State Phillips the President's reaction to what is reported to have been a 10 cents-on-the-dollar debt offer for next Thursday. The rejection of the compromise proposal is believed assured by the President's attitude of mind toward radical revision of the original debt figures.

However, with Congress disbanded and returned to the local centres of the country, the President will find himself in undisputed sway over the debt payments—for a while. Any settlement of the debts will devolve

Two Spain-to-Cuba Fliers Over Ocean

Seville, Spain, June 10 (A.P.).—Capt. Mariano Barberan and Lieut. Joaquin Collar apparently were well over the Atlantic tonight on their flight from Seville to Cuba.

The Spanish airmen, wearing white overalls and white coats, took off from Tablada Airdrome early this morning after receiving reports that they would encounter excellent flying weather.

They were escorted to the coast by several airplanes. Tonight no reports had been received from them, but this occasioned no anxiety as their route did not lie over the heavily-traveled sea lanes.

40 Hurt as Peasants Fight Over Land Title

Bucharest, Roumania, June 10 (A.P.).—Forty persons were seriously injured today in a battle between 200 peasants near Curtea Arges, resulting from differences over the possession of land.

Authorities were unable to separate the opposing groups until reinforcements were brought.

No Word

Forthcoming From White House on Deferring of Adjournment.

(Associated Press.)

Confidently counting on beginning his brief vacation from the strenuous presidential grind next Thursday, President Roosevelt received in silence last night the news that Congress had deferred adjournment of the extra session.

It was a quiet night at the White House as the President awaited the action of congressional leaders to wind up the session.

Informed shortly after 11 o'clock of the decision of the Senate to recess until Monday, Mr. Roosevelt made no comment.

There was a prospect, however, that today he would talk things over with the leaders on Capitol Hill to effect a quick completion of his emergency program.

His program in the hands of Con-

ONLY TWO D.C. BILLS PASSED AT SESSION

Alley Measure Was Among Three Score Failing to Obtain Action.

Only two District measures out of three-score introduced in House and Senate were pressed to enactment in the special session of Congress, the District supply bill and the local beer act, a survey showed last night.

Extraordinary efforts to push through a third, the alley improvement bill, failed yesterday when an early session of the House forced postponement of a meeting of the House District Committee, called to report out the measure, which passed the Senate early last week.

Despite the crush of national legislation, or because of it, enactment of local bills was held down to a minimum. Chairmen of both House and Senate District Committees were in agreement that only District measures of an emergency nature should be given preference.

Although only three District bills were passed by the Senate, that body

Police Arrest Trio; Nab $63,000 Bonds

St. Louis, June 10 (A.P.).—Three men were arrested in a downtown hotel late today, bonds reputed to be worth $63,000 were seized, and a St. Louis attorney later was questioned, as the result of a police tip that an underworld "deal" was in the making.

Police said $33,000 worth of the bonds were in $1,000 denomination of the Board of Education of Wichita, Kans. Officers believed them counterfeit, as similar securities have turned up elsewhere and have been pronounced bogus. A revolver, found in a dresser drawer with the bonds, has been identified as one of 175 stolen in November, 1932, from the National Guard Armory at De Soto, Mo.

Officers said one of the men under arrest is a former convict and that another is reported to be an associate of gangsters. Postoffice inspectors are to cooperate in an inquiry tomorrow.

Macon Will Make Test Flight to World's Fair

Akron, Ohio, June 10 (A.P.).—The U. S. S. Macon will start her 48-hour test flight late tomorrow if the weather is right, Capt. Alger H. Dressel, skipper, said today.

If conditions in the Middle West are right the Macon will fly to the Century of Progress Exposition at Chicago.

Senators Balk at Plan To Change Federal Departments.

Democrat Chiefs Bow To Threats; Recess Is Accepted.

By LAWRENCE SULLIVAN.

The Administration's plan for final adjournment of the special session of Congress collapsed dramatically at 11 o'clock last night when the Senate went into a tantrum over an eleventh-hour series of Executive orders contemplating partial reorganization of the Federal Government.

After a hectic day of shirt-sleeve committee labor looking to final adjournment of the recovery session early today, the Senate rose up in a fit of weary wrath about 8 o'clock, when a special message came in from the White House setting forth 18 consolidations and reallocations of Federal functions. Under the law, these consolidations would become automatically effective 60 days after the Executive order. Republican protests against what was described as an attempted legislative coup de etat, gained several adherents from the Democratic side and at 11 o'clock Senator Harrison, of Mississippi, chairman of the Finance Committee, requested a recess until 11 a. m. Monday.

Veteran Revolt Weathered.

The revolt over veteran reductions had been successfully weathered by the administration forces in the House, where three successive roll calls shortly after 8 p. m. sustained the Roosevelt compromise program by votes of approximately 235 to 160.

Final action also had been obtained in the House upon the conference report on the gigantic industrial recovery bill, keystone of the administration's threee-month program for economic rehabilitation. In both houses the legislative ways had been greased for 13 hours for adjournment, perhaps at 2 a. m. today But when Senators Borah, Johnson, Reed and Long threatened to break up the play unless reorganization were withdrawn, the Democratic leadership capitulated.

ANSELL ASKS PROBE OF LONG IN SENATE

(Associated Press.)

Samuel T. Ansell, former counsel for the Senate committee investigating the election of Senator Overton, of Louisiana, yesterday filed a petition with the Senate for an investigation of the "behavior" of Senator Huey Long and "his qualifications to be a Senator."

Ansell charged that Long, who acted as counsel for Overton in the election probe, attempted to dominate and control the subcommittee making the inquiry last winter by "assertions of senatorial prerogatives, bluster and truculence to the chairman."

Suppressed Truth, Charge.

He asserted Long "manipulated witnesses, suborned perjury, suppressed the truth and otherwise obstructed the investigation."

Ansell described Long's appearance at the hearings and his speech and manner, saying he "was abusive to the chairman and counsel," and that Long on several occasions "alluded, in excuse for such misconduct," to his immediately previous "indulgences."

"The petitioner," Ansell said, "is advised and believes that his (Long's) assuming to act as counsel for the said Overton was inconsistent with his status and prejudicial to his duty as a Senator of the United States."

Uses "Armed Henchmen."

Ansell asserted also that Long had "packed" the hearing room and surrounded the subcommittee and its aids "with his armed, turbulent and intimidating henchmen."

Long told the subcommittee, Ansell said, that he alone was responsible for the conduct and management of the Overton campaign.

Ansell then charged that Long "advised, and supervised the operation of corrupt and fraudulent means and agencies whereby the socalled election of Mr. Overton was corruptly and fraudulently controlled and determined."

Long recently attacked Ansell in a Senate speech and later claimed senatorial immunity when suit was filed by Ansell.

Reformed Presbyterians Plan Merchant Boycott

Winona Lake, Ind., June 10 (A.P.). Members of the Reformed Presbyterian Church of North America were urged by a resolution of their synod, in session here, to boycott merchants who sell "beverage alcohol."

The Synod adopted a resolution forbidding the use of fermented wine in the Lord's Supper, and another "that the members of the church be urged to patronize only those commercial concerns which do not handle beverage alcohol and so far as possible those which do not handle tobacco."

7,000 'Cart-Wheels' Put City on Silver Standard

Fort Wayne, Ind., June 10 (A.P.).—To a notable degree, Fort Wayne went on the silver standard today. Many stores departed abruptly from other standards after 7,000 silver dollars, forwarded by a Salt Lake hardware company as part of its payment for a shipment of household washers, were disbursed in wage envelopes by the Horton Manufacturing Co.

The Salt Lake concern's exploitation of Utah's mineral resources sent more than 400 pounds of the old-fashioned cartwheels jingling into Fort Wayne stores.

2-Day Death Reprieve Granted Boston Youths

Boston, June 10 (U.P.).—Gov. Ely today granted a two-day reprieve to Herman (Red) Snyder and John A. Donnellon, Boston youths condemned to die in the electric chair for killing James Kiley, Somerville filling station attendant, during a robbery.

The men were scheduled to die Monday at State prison and the reprieve was granted so the State Supreme Court, which does not sit until Wednesday, can pass on a petition for a writ of mandamus to estop the execution.

Bandits Take Town; Steal $500 in Safe

Eldorado, Ark., June 10 (A.P.).—Six armed men terrorized the nearby town of Norphlet for four hours last night and early today after locking the night marshal and several citizens in a box car. They looted one store of $500 and escaped in two automobiles.

Night Marshal R. Lee was the first victim of the gang, one of whom forced the officer at the point of a gun into the box car. Five other persons were picked up on the streets and forced into the car.

Four members of the gang patrolled the streets while the remaining pair broke into a drug store, drilled their way into the safe and stole $500.

ROOSEVELT SILENT ON ADJOURNMENT

gress. Mr. Roosevelt spent his day making last minute nominations and talking over the situation with Congressional leaders.

Feeling he could leave the situation in the hands of the Capitol Hill chieftains for conclusion, the President stopped for a plunge in the White House pool before calling it a day.

Mr. Roosevelt has ten days in which to place his signature on the measures enacted at the last minute by Congress. Should his signature not be affixed by that time, however, the bill is declared automatically dead by a pocket veto. The Chief Executive is expected to sign all of the major measures enacted by Thursday, when he hopes to leave on a vacation.

Woman Adds to Accusations Against Huey Long in Suit

Baton Rouge, La., June 10 (A.P.).—Amending and supplementing her recently filed $250,000 damage suit against Senator Huey P. Long, Mrs. Anne Ector Pleasant, wife of former Gov. Ruffin G. Pleasant, today asked a total award of $500,000 on charges of defamation of character and illegal arrest.

The amended petition lodged additional charges against Senator Long in connection with statements imputed to him during the 1932 session of the Leagislature, when, she claims, she was ordered ejected from the State House by the Senator.

In the original suit, Mrs. Pleasant charged Long met her in the office of the State supervisor of public accounts, publicly referred to her as "a drunken, cursing woman" and ordered R. L. Whitman, superintendent of the State bureau of criminal identification, to seize her and put her out of the capitol. The suit alleged she was "held for an appreciable time."

Mrs. Pleasant claimed she was in the supervisor's office to gather tax data in opposition to the administration legislative program. In her supplemental petition she said "the object of the senator was evidently to try to strike terror to your petitioner as a tax opponent through the use of the hostile presence of several of his henchmen, the physicial force of one of them and the threatened violence of all as evidenced by the fact that some persons who intended to speak against the burdensome tax raises were bluffed into silence by administration thugs whom Long dominated, and the waylaying and knocking into insensibility of one Joseph Boudreaux, who was energetically opposing the imposition of more burdensome taxation upon the insolvent, disheartened and oppressed people of the State."

Mrs. Pleasant alleged further that in a purported interview published in a Baton Rouge newspaper Long was quoted as saying he went to the supervisor's office "to keep the officers from putting her (Mrs. Pleasant) in jail."

On these additional allegations, Mrs. Pleasant asked for the additional $250,000 damages.

TESTIMONY CLOSES IN TRIAL OF CLARK

Jury Expected to Be Given His Embezzlement Case Tomorrow.

Testimony in the trial of Berry E. Clark, former clerk to the Montgomery County commissioners, on charges of embezzlement of county funds, was completed yesterday in Montgomery County Circuit Court at Rockville, Md.

The jury was dismissed until tomorrow morning, at 9:30 o'clock, when arguments will begin. It is expected that the arguments of both State's Attorney Stedman Prescott, for the prosecution, and Defense Attorneys Albert M. Bouic, F. Barnard Welch, E. Barrett Prettyman and Thomas L. Dawson will be completed by 4 or 5 o'clock.

Following completion of arguments, the case will be placed in the hands of the jury, and for the third time within the year, Clark will be waiting for a verdict.

The same charge, that of embezzlement of $426 in county money, first of a series of 97 indictments, has been tried twice before in the court and resulted both times in hung juries.

Most of the testimony yesterday was rebuttal offered by the State's attorney to prove that much of the money paid by Clark to the county treasurer to clear his alleged shortage in the sheriff's and building permits accounts, was county money, which he had received from other sources. Part of the money was alleged to have been $502.40, which he had in the bank at the time, $1,160, paid earlier, was alleged to have been receipts from sale of abandoned and confiscated automobiles turned over to Clark by Chief of Police Alvey A. Moxley.

Paul Brunett, an officer of the Montgomery County National Bank, testified that as late as March 21, 1932, Clark had transferred funds from his clerk's account to his personal account.

A number of other witnesses testified to having paid sums to Clark, some of which appeared on his records and of some of which allegedly no record could be found in his office.

Debuchi Reported Leaving Post Here

Tokyo, June 10 (A.P.).—Vernacular newspapers asserted today that Foreign Minister Count Yasuya Uchida has decided to replace Katsuji Debuchi, Japanese Ambassador to Washington, shortly.

The leading candidate for the position is reported to be Kojiro Matsukata, former president of the Kawasaki dockyard and recently a promoter of a Japanese-Russian oil contract.

Yosuke Matsuoka, Japanese peace delegate, who recently led his colleagues from a League of Nations session when a report condemning Japanese policies in Manchuria was adopted, also was mentioned by the newspapers in this connection.

CUMMINGS DECRIES DICTATOR CHARGES

Pledges All Efforts to End Racketeering in High Finances.

Denying that the powers recently given the President constitute a dictatorship or that they were delegated contrary to the Constitution, Attorney General Cummings in a radio address last night outlined the policies of the Department of Justice under the new laws.

"There has not been the slightest fundamental departure from the form or nature of our Government or the established order," Mr. Cummings said. He pointed out that the jury system is still intact and the Constitutional series of checks and balances still exists. All the new emergency laws will cease to exist when the emergency is ended. Far more radical laws were enacted during the World War, but were upheld, he said.

Referring to the criminal work of the Department of Justice, he said: "This department knows neither rich nor poor. As a people we have been troubled far too long by the racketeers of high finance and the racketeers of violence and bloodshed. Both classes are obnoxious to all lovers of free government. So far as lies within my power, no criminal of either high or low estate shall go unscathed. Moreover, it is my hope that in the field of law enforcement and in the detection and prosecution of crime, I may be able to bring about a better coordination of State and Federal activities."

The order against gold hoarding was justified on the grounds that the safety of the Nation was more important than the rights of certain citizens, the Attorney General said. The aim of his office, he declared, would be to make the application and interpretation of these emergency laws fit into the new conditions which they must meet.

Special to The Washington Post.

Clarksburg, W. Va., June 10.—In a formal statement issued today Hetzell Pownall, of Moorfield, W. Va., State commander of the American Legion, declared that 90 per cent of the members in the State favored repeal of the eighteenth amendment. He appealed to them as a whole to "take off your coats and go to work that the legion's contribution toward effecting repeal of this abominable law may be as great as possible."

The statement, which was also published in today's issue of the West Virginia Legionnaire, official legion publication, had reference to the special State lection, June 27

Prieto to Organize New Spanish Rule

Madrid, June 10 (U.P.).—Indalecio Prieto, Socialist leader, who once denounced the American-controlled telephone company here as a "syndicate of Yankee bandits," tonight began forming a new cabinet to replace the ministry headed by Premier Manuel Azana

Prieto, it was understood, will attempt to include the same political parties in the new cabinet as were represented in the old.

The Azana cabinet resigned when President Niceto Alcala-Zamora refused to permit Azana to reorganize without consulting leaders of the republican minority.

Bandits Take $10,000; Employ Market Basket

Canton, Ohio, June 10 (A.P.).—Four men dressed in conventional rural clothes held up the Louisville branch of the George D. Harter Bank of Canton today and escaped with $10,000. The seven persons in the branch were held at bay with revolvers and a sawed-off shotgun.

Three of the men—one of them carrying a market basket over his arm, entered the bank and took the cash from the two tellers' windows. The money was shoved into the basket and they escaped in an automobile.

Young MacDonald Goes To Crime Scene Today

Nashville, Tenn., June 10 (A.P.).—The way was cleared today for return of 17-year-old Balfe MacDonald to Flint, Mich., to face charges of slaying his mother.

A. J. Transou, county prosecutor at Flint, said the party would leave probably today.

MORE BANK PROBES PENDING IN SENATE

Kuhn, Loeb and Dillon, Read Investigations May Be Started at Once.

(Associated Press.)

With reverberations from its investigation of J. P. Morgan & Co. still echoing, the Senate Banking Committee yesterday turned to preparation for inquiries into other private bankers including Kuhn, Loeb & Co. and Dillon, Read & Co.

While Congress sped action on legislative reforms growing out of the inquiry, Senator Neely (Democrat), West Virginia, told the Senate that "36 months of tax dodging" by J. P. Morgan had "shaken the faith of millions in the justice of existing law."

He said the sales of stock to selected Morgan clients was a "brazen attempt to bribe on a Nation-wide scale."

Other Probes Considered.

The investigating committee met in executive session and decided to let a subcommittee determine whether the Kuhn, Loeb and Dillon, Read inquiries should be pursued at once or deferred until fall.

The subcommittee, which has been nominally in charge of the investigation, will confer with Ferdinand Pecora, committee counsel, and map out its future plans Tuesday.

Pecora has informed the committee he is ready to proceed at once and it will be up to the senators to decide whether they want to stay in Washington for hearings now or let them go over to next fall.

In any event, Pecora is ready to keep his staff busy over the summer collecting additional evidence for presentation in the fall on investment trusts and stock market practices, and operations of the Chase National Bank.

Secrecy Is Removed.

As an outgrowth of the Morgan investigation, the Banking Committee voted not to bind its members to secrecy about transactions in executive session.

At virtually every executive session during the Morgan inquiry, members of the committee protested that "leaks" were disclosing every thing it did behind closed doors.

A motion by Senator Glass (Democrat), Virginia, to remove the ban of secrecy was adopted unanimously. The Virginian has been one of the most strenuous objectors to the "leaks."

Neely, speaking in the Senate, said that as a result of its stocks sales to selected clients, "no matter which party wins an election, the House of Morgan wins."

Preferred List Scored.

"Tax dodging is only one of Morgan's breaches of the ethical code that most men consider binding," the West Virginian said.

"The House of Morgan preferred many of its clients, and to these sold so-called securities at prices far below their market values. The lists of such clients reads like a page of 'Who's Who.'

"They included an ex-President, a close associate of another, ambassadors to foreign countries, past and present; Cabinet officers, past, present and prospective, and outstanding figures of both political parties.

Wholesale Bribing Charged.

"They have made it almost impossible for a President to appoint a Cabinet of which every member will be free of Morgan obligations and the influence of Morgan power.

"The naked truth is that, so far as Morgan and his associates are concerned, the giving of millions of dollars in purchase rights is a brazen attempt to bribe on a Nation-wide scale those most influential in the industrial, financial and political life of the Nation."

"In recent years," he said, "the Treasury has obligingly accepted as correct the income tax returns submitted by Morgan and his partners. These pampered Government pets have not been annoyed by inquiring agents."

ONLY TWO DISTRICT MEASURES SUCCEED

found time to order three investigations into local matters. One, the milk inquiry, following close on the heels of the Washington Post's expose, is now well under way. Another, the rent investigation, has been passed on to the Public Utilities Commission until Congress meets again. The third, ordered with a view to reorganization of the District government, is being undertaken by a Senate District subcommittee, which has designated officials of the District government to gather data.

One pending local measure, the much controverted bill to permit the Washington Gas Light Co. to merge with the Georgetown Gas Light Co., is left on both House and Senate calendars, favorably reported by the two local committees. A fight is in store when the Senate decides to take it up. Senator Capper (Republican), Kansas, who dissented from the favorable Senate District Committee report, will seek to have "going concern" excepted as a company valuation.

Mapes' Bills Sidetracked.

The Senate passed one minor measure, on which no action was taken by the House—a bill increasing the number of directors of the Washington Foundlings' Home.

Among the three score measures never even considered by committees during the special session were the revised Mapes tax bills, designed to impose new local levies on incomes, estates, automobiles by weight and gasoline. These bills, although never introduced in the Senate, are now technically before a special subcommittee on fiscal affairs of the Senate District Committee, headed by Senator Copeland (Democrat), New York.

A special subcommittee of the House District Committee, headed by Representative Palmisano (Democrat), Maryland, also has them in hand, but there has never been any formal consideration. The Palmisano subcommittee is extending its inquiry into District affairs, rents and fiscal relations, but has set no definite date for hearings.

MIXED VERDICT ENDS TOILET KITS INQUIRY

Senators Find No Corruption, but Contend Cheaper Ones Would Suffice.

(Associated Press.)

While satisfied the Government paid only a fair price to Be Vier & Co., of New York, for toilet kits for reforestation camp workers, the Senate Military Committee yesterday held cheaper kits should have been supplied.

In a formal report winding up ten days of inquiry into the purchase, the committee asserted "we find no evidence in the record that would sustain a charge of corruption or improper motive on the part of any one."

The investigation resulted from a contention of Army officials they could supply for from 75 cents to 85 cents, articles comparable to those in the Be Vier kit at $1.40 and that the purchase was extravagant and unnecessary.

Questioned in the investigation were Louis McHenry Howe, secretary to President Roosevelt; Lewis W. Douglas, Director of the Budget; Robert Fechner, director of the Civilian Conservation Corps; F. W. Lowery, assistant to Douglas; J. J. McEntee, assistant to Fechner, and Richard B Be Vier, president of Be Vier & Co.

War Department officials protested that the purchase, made without calling for competitive bids, the committee report said, was done only on the representations of Be Vier that his prices and quality were the best available.

"We call attention to the danger inherent in such a situation and believe that steps should be taken to prevent its recurrence," the committee said, recommending that purchases for the Conservation Corps hereafter be made by one agency "possessing adequate experience and organization."

When there is insufficient time to call for bids, the committee recommended that the Comptroller General be directed by Presidential order to pass upon the "reasonableness of the price proposed" before anything is ordered.

EAST'S HEAT WAVE SHIFTS SOUTHWEST

Electrical Storms Break Up Excessive Temperatures Along Seaboard.

New York, June 10 (A.P.).—The excessive heat wave in the East was broken today after electrical storms, but the early summer high temperatures struck southwestern States with renewed intensity.

Although States along the Eastern seaboard were from five to ten degrees cooler, two additional deaths ascribed to the heat were reported—one in Cartaret, N. J., and the second in Delmar, Del. Three other persons died from the heat in St. Paul, Minn.

The wheat belt of Kansas was hardest hit by the stifling heat, Junction City reporting a temperature of 100 degrees. Salina, Kan., reports 105 degrees and a record of 100 was set in Topeka. In Kansas City, Mo., the temperature rose to nearly 100 and in Oklahoma it stayed above 90.

Texas temperatures, described as "about seasonal," ranged from 91 degrees in Dallas to above 100 in some sections. For the tenth straight day Nebraska sweltered under a temperature around 100 and with grain crops damaged there was no rain in sight.

A temperature of 93 degrees was reported in Chicago early in the afternoon and there were indications it would rise.

New York City reported a temperature of 83 degrees, 13 degrees below yesterday's record-breaking 96. In Boston the temperature was 88 early in the afternoon and still rising, but it had dropped in New Haven, Conn., to 84 in Portland, Me., and Providence, R. I., to 81, and in Montpelier, Vt., to 78.

Frost Hurts Orchards As Heat Claims Victims

Metaline Falls, Wash., June 10 (A.P.).—Residents of this region read in today's newspapers of deaths by heat throughout the East and Middle West and stepped outside to find their gardens and orchards badly damaged by frost.

The mercury dropped to 30 degrees last night, causing ice to form on open water.

Receivers Ask $100,000 In Bonding of Insulls

Chicago, June 10 (A.P.).—Suit to recover $100,000 on an employes' liability bond because of alleged defalcation of approximately $7,000,000 by Samuel Insull, sr., and his brother, Martin, was filed today in U. S. District Court on behalf of the receivers of Middle West Utilities Co., $2,000,000 main Insull holding concern.

The defendant company is the New Amsterdam Casualty Co., of New York City, which executed the bond.

Church Set to Preach Pray, Vote and Buy Dry

Hershey, Pa., June 10 (A.P.).—Delegates to the 135th annual conference of the Church of the Brethren today pledged themselves to "pray dry, preach dry, vote dry and buy dry."

The conference decided to protest to President Roosevelt and Congress against any loosening of the prohibition laws for economic purposes. It commended the national administration for its world peace efforts.

EXAMINATIONS NEAR CLOSE AT U. OF MD.

Undergraduates of the University of Maryland virtually completed the year's work with the closing of the regular final examination schedule yesterday. A few special examinations will be given tomorrow morning.

The idea of holding undergraduate examinations after the awarding of senior and graduate school diplomas was tried at the university for the first time this year. Graduation exercises were held last Saturday.

The formal closing of the school's winter term will be in the form of the annual rotary dances, held by the fraternities and sororities tomorrow night. Each house will be open for dancing the entire night. Every student is expected to visit each of the houses.

Dr. Pearson Will Speak.

Before the opening of summer school the university will be host to the sixth annual Maryland Poultry Field Day, Thursday. More than 500 poultrymen from Maryland and nearby States are expected to attend. The day is sponsored by the State and county poultry associations, the Maryland extension service and the Department of Agriculture.

The meeting will begin at 10 a. m. Dr. Raymond A. Pearson, president of the university, will deliver the address of welcome. Other University of Maryland speakers will include Dr. H. J. Patterson, director of the Experiment Station; Dr. T. B. Symons, director of the Extension Service; Dr. Samuel H. DeVault, head of the Department of Agriculture Economics; Wade H. Rice, Extension Service Poultry Specialist, and Dr. E. M. Pickens, in charge of the Livestock Sanitary Laboratory.

Miles H. Fairbank, secretary of the Maryland Farm Bureau, and Reese V. Hicks, executive secretary of the International Baby Chick Association, will also address the group.

Many Entertainment Features.

Beginning June 19, and extending through the entire week, the annual rural women's short course will be held at the university. The course is sponsored by the Maryland Extension Service. Approximately 500 women are expected to attend.

Entertainment features for the week will include musicales on Monday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings. Tuesday night a reception will be held by Dr. and Mrs. Pearson. Friday will be set aside as the day for the presentation of the certificates and a sightseeing trip.

A total of 109 women, the largest number in the history of the course, will be eligible to receive the certificates as a result of having attended the course for four years. Gov. Albert C. Ritchie has been invited to the exercises.

Unique Memorial System To Edison Is Planned Here

Washingtonian Urges World to Join America in Establishing One Light in Every City to Burn Always in Honor of Inventor.

A plan to have every city, town and village in the United States and possibly the world honor the memory of Thomas Alva Edison has been conceived by Dr. Alfredo Warsaw, lecturer, of 1901 Wyoming avenue.

"Universal Memorial Lights" form the basis of Dr. Warsaw's plan to pay homage to the great inventor. The feature of the Warsaw plan is that public contributions are not necessary and the memorials may be erected and maintained at small cost.

Dr. Warsaw says his inspiration came following a dream in which he saw a great beam of light from which emerged the face of Edison. Dr. Warsaw never was personally acquainted with the inventor, but had always had the highest admiration for his genius.

As a result of the dream Dr. Warsaw began to plan for Edison memorials. He did not want to plan anything which would require enormous expenditures such as memorial buildings, statues or fountains. Nor did he want anything to which the word "commercialism" could be applied.

So he conceived the idea of having all communities, large and small, select one light in the system already being used, designate it as the Universal Memorial Light" and maintain it as a memorial to Edison.

The only cost, other than the electric power used, would be that of a specially designed globe to make the light stand apart from other electric lights. Dr. Warsaw also suggests that on main highways at important points similar lights might be maintained so that persons traveling across the country might be constantly reminded of the inventor.

The founder of the Universal Memorial Light idea believes that the first of such lights should be operated in the National Capital. He is therefore anxious to hear from persons interested in maintaining such a project for Washington.

Dr. Warsaw is very emphatic in his desire to keep the memorial idea out of the commercial classification. His idea is to form clubs in each community, the members paying no dues, but simply agreeing to see that the light is "eternal," and that the birthday of Edison be fittingly observed with ceremonies at the light each year.

Persons interested in forming such a club in the Capital may secure additional information by writing Dr. Warsaw in 1901 Wyoming avenue.

A. J. LEAKIN. U. S. OFFICIAL, EXPIRES

Hyattsville Resident Entered Treasury Department Employ in 1905.

Andrew James Leakin, chief of the bureau of registry of the Treasury Department, died suddenly yesterday morning at his home in Hyattsville, Md. Death was attributed to heart disease.

Mr. Leakin, at the time of his death, was in attendance at the bedside of his mother, Mrs. Agnes J. Leakin, 88, who has been seriously ill for several days. Mrs. Leakin lives at the home of her son.

Dr. H. T. Willis, who called to see Mrs. Leakin, was asked to treat Mr. Leakin, who complained of feeling slightly ill. Shortly after Dr. Willis left the residence the bureau chief was found dead in a second-floor bedroom by his sister, Mrs. Hanna L. Brady.

Born in Baltimore, Md., in 1879, Mr. Leakin came to Hyattsville as a young man. On January 17, 1905 he entered the employ of the Treasury Department where he was later promoted to chief of bureau of registry and senior administrative assistant.

Besides his mother and sister, Mr. Leakin is survived by his wife, Mrs. Pearl Herbert Leakin, whom he married in 1904, and one brother, George E. Leakin, of 4122 Beck street southeast. Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

FOREST CAMP QUOTA NEARS COMPLETION

About 235,000 Have Signed; Camps for Every State Except Delaware.

About 235,000 of the 275,000 reforestation workers to be placed in work camps by July 1, have already been enrolled, it was reported yesterday by officials of the Civilian Conservation Corps. Of those enrolled, about 100,000 are already in the work camps, the rest are still in Army conditioning camps.

About 15,000 civilians trained in forestry work have also been employed, and all camps to be established have been approved. The camps number 1,442. There will be at least one in every State except Delaware. It was reported that 53 special trains, carrying 18,000 workers, have already been sent from the East to forests in the Far West.

Only one death has occurred in the corps, this single casualty being due to erysipelas in the First Corps Area. Extremely few cases of sickness in the camps have been reported. One corps area commander is quoted as saying that even if the men were of no value in the forest, the Nation would receive its money's worth in improving the health and mental outlook of the workers. In addition to these benefits, the money allotted by the workers to their dependents has taken a multitude of families from charity lists.

Additional officers numbering 580 have been detailed to the Conservation Corps, bringing the total to 4,230. Of these new officers, 320 are line officers of the Navy and Marine Corps.

FOREST CORPS ROW TERRORIZES VILLAGE

Sackets Harbor, N. Y., June 10 (A. P.).—Plans to patrol this village at night were made today in consequence of an outbreak last night of 300 members of the Civilian Conservation Corps now at Madison Barracks. The group is awaiting transfer to forestry work under President Roosevelt's unemployment plan.

Col. Walter S. Sturgill, in command of the barracks, and Mayor Morris Phelps, of the village, today minimized the incident.

"There was no riot or serious trouble of any kind," said the mayor, "but there might have been if I had not called for the guard from Madison Barracks as quickly as I did. The men got a little unruly when excluded from a dance here, and seemed to think they could do what they pleased. Some of the merchants were alarmed and locked their doors, but I heard of no raid on any store. We stopped things before trouble had a chance to develop."

Rutgers Gives President Honorary LL. D. Degree

New Brunswick, N. J., June 10 (A.P.).—President Franklin D. Roosevelt received today the honorary degree of doctor of laws in absentia at the 167th commencement of Rutgers University. The President had accepted an invitation to come to Rutgers to receive the degree, but pressure of duties made it necessary for him to remain at the Capitol.

The degree of doctor of laws was conferred also upon John Gabbert Bowman, chancellor of the University of Pittsburgh.

Robinson Scores Hitler in Senate

(United Press.)

Senate Majority Leader Robinson yesterday sharply criticized German Chancellor Hitler and the Nazi government for persecution of Jews, predicting that "such cruel policies" would injure Germany's trade and commerce.

Speaking in the Senate, Robinson quoted at length from Hitler's writing to support his contentions that proof of the abuses was contained in addresses of the chancellor and his associates, in Nazi songs and newspaper editorial policies.

"Making due allowance for exaggeration and misrepresentation," he said, "there appears conclusive evidence that the Nazi administration has startled and shocked mankind by the severe policies enforced against Jews—even those of only part blood."

Smoki to Portray Legends in Dances

Prescott, Ariz., June 10 (A.P.).—Ancient legends of the Southwest Indians, enfolded in age-old mysteries, will be portrayed here tomorrow by the Smoki people of Prescott—white business men and women who have dedicated themselves to perpetuation of the rituals and ceremonies of their red brothers.

How well they have succeeded in their task is attested by head men and dancers from the Hopi and Navajo tribes, who come here annually to watch the reverent dances of the Smoki with solemn approval.

The dances vary each year. The six to be presented tomorrow are the sand painters, the sun dance, the buffalo dance, the Kachina, the eagle dance, and finally, just at sunset, the spectacular snake dance, a prayer for rain.

RENOVIZE EXHIBITION SPACE IS GOING FAST

The character of the exhibits to be shown in the Renovize Washington Exposition, at 1435-37 K street northwest and the allocation of floor space, will be discussed at a meeting in the Board of Trade offices at 4 p. m. tomorrow.

Prospective exhibitors, who will attend the meeting, will be shown a set of floor plans for each of the two buildings, prepared by Gilbert Rodier. After the meeting the exhibitors will visit the two buildings.

Albert L. Stern, who will direct the exposition, announced yesterday that a number of the larger firms in the city have already made reservations. If demands continue to come in as they have to date, it will be necessary to utilize the second floors of both buildings, he said.

Considerable interest has been aroused by the announcement that the little house, now being renovated at Fourteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest, will be awarded to some visitor to the exposition, it was announced. Contractors are working slowly on the house so that every operation may be carefully checked and the costs furnished to inquirers, it was said.

Big Rail Order Given By Seaboard Airline

Birmingham, Ala., June 10 (A.P.).—The News says the Seaboard Airline Railroad has placed an order with the Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Co. here for rails and tie plates representing a cost of approximately $500,000.

The order was for 8,170 tons of rails and 480,000 plates, with delivery of the plates starting next month and the rails in September.

WOMEN SEE CHANGE IN NAVY'S COMMAND

San Pedro, Calif., June 10 (A.P.). Strict routine and stern airs wilted under a romantic touch today as the United States Navy saluted a new commander in chief, Admiral David Foote Sellers.

In a scene that broke all precedent as far as this port knew, Admiral Sellers was escorted to his new command, relinquished by Admiral Richard H. Leigh, while in a row of ten admirals standing at attention nearby, three women, the wives of three officers, watched the impressive ceremonies.

And as they watched the blue-starred flag of Admiral Leigh flutter down from the main truck of the U. S. S. Pennsylvania, they saw tears dim the eyes of that veteran of nearly 50 years in the Navy.

Never in the history of a change of command at this port had women been allowed to witness the coming of a new commander in chief and the retiring of another. The three women were the wives of Admirals Sellers, Leigh and C. P. Snyder.

As the ceremonies ended, Admiral Sellers walked quickly to the side of his wife and bestowed a resounding kiss on her lips.

Seventeen-gun salutes were fired for both Admiral Leigh and the new commander in chief.

Annual Song Festival On Mayo Trail Today

Ashland, Ky., June 10 (A.P.).—The third annual mountain song festival will be conducted tomorrow afternoon at a cabin 15 miles from here on the Mayo trail. The program will consist of Kentucky mountain songs sung by natives, and a series of old-time dances. Miss Jean Thomas, Ashland writer, is in charge of the program.

Gov. Ruby Laffoon will deliver an address after the program, and will be the honor guest at a reception to follow.

MRS. ELIZABETH GRAY RITES

Services Will Be Held Tomorrow With Private Interment.

Funeral services for Mrs. Elizabeth Gray, 70, wife of James O. Gray, sr., who died Friday at her residence, 603 Massachusetts avenue northeast, will be held at 10:30 a. m. tomorrow from Lee funeral home, Fourth street and Massachusetts avenue northeast. Interment will be private.

Mrs. Gray, a native of Nova Scotia, had lived in Washington for 35 years. Besides her husband, she is survived by two sons, James O. Gray, jr., and Samuel H. Gray, and a sister, Mrs. Elsie Harris.

Zane Grey Forms New Corporation

Los Angeles, June 10 (A.P.).—Zane Grey, the writer, today became a business. He, his wife, their son, Romer Grey, and others formed Zane Grey, Inc., with an authorized capitalization of 5,000 shares of preferred stock and 25,000 of common, all of $100 par value.

The purpose of the corporation is to receive, own, operate and manage all the assets of Zane Grey and his wife, Lina Elsie Grey, who, heretofore, have been copartners. They receive 25,000 shares of common stock for all rights to his writings, interest in his ranch, and his yacht, Fisherman II.

Grey has contracted with Zane Grey, Inc., to give his services exclusively as a literary artist and motion picture producer for five years at a salary of $30,000 a year. Mrs. Grey is president; Grey, chairman of the board; Romer Grey, vice president; E. W. Robinson, treasurer, and Edwin G. Bowen, secretary and general manager.

Refinancing Plan For Franklin Auto

Syracuse, N. Y., June 10 (A.P.).—Reorganization of the financial structure of the H. H. Franklin Automobile Co. is under way, letters to stockholders today stated.

The letter also stated Ernest B. Warrimer, C. Everett Bacon and B. C. Milner, jr., had been appointed a committee to effect the reorganization. Letters approving the committee, signed by 22 of the principal stockholders, also were in the mails.

The statements explained that the "unprecedented length of the business depression put a severe strain on the company's resources and that new financing and readjustment are necessary in the interests of stockholders." It was stated there would probably be an increase in the capitalization, but the amount had not been determined.

CAPT. BARKSDALE DIES IN HOSPITAL

Veteran of 41 Years Government Service Is Dead After Long Illness.

Capt. William H. Barksdale, 71, of 3613 Wisconsin avenue, former chief of the military division of the General Accounting Office, died yesterday at Walter Reed Hospital, after a lingering illness. He was a veteran of 41 years Government service.

Surviving him are his widow, Mrs. Alice Ashton Barksdale; two daughters, Eliza and Mary Barksdale; two sons, Ashton Barksdale and Lieut. William H. Barksdale, jr., and a sister, Mrs. R. A. Crenshaw, of East Falls Church, Va.

Funeral services will be held from his residence at 2 p. m. tomorrow. Burial will follow in Arlington Cemetery.

Lobbyist Didn't Spend Nickel; Company Broke

Raleigh, N. C., June 10 (U.P.).—Lobbyists in North Carolina are required by law to file an expense report with the secretary of state and J. Sherwood Upchurch, representing the General Outdoor Advertising Co., today reported he did not spend "a nickel because my company was broke."

"If I am guilty of treason," Upchurch said in a novel report, "will have to get an opinion from the attorney general, and I think Mr. Brummitt (the attorney general) will give me the best of it, as I bought him a meal one time when he was hungry."

CAPITOL BODY URGES REPLACING OF AKRON

(Associated Press.)

Construction of another airship of the Akron's rank was urged for the Navy yesterday by Congressional investigators at the same time that the lone surviving officer of the disaster was ordered to sea.

Lieut. Comdr. Herbert V. Wiley was directed to report June 28 to the U. S. S. Cincinnati, a light cruiser in the battle force of the Pacific.

Wiley was reported to be not dissatisfied with his new assignment, but such shifts from lighter-than-air to sea duty were criticized before the joint congressional committee that investigated the Akron loss and the committee made this statement in its report:

"Administration of lighter-than-air by the Navy should insure continuity of personnel and experience. Only fully trained officers of wide airship experience should be in command of airships. Command of a training ship should be a prerequisite for command of a ship of the Macon type operating with the fleet."

Wiley was with the Macon inspection board when ordered to the Pacific.

"It is recommended," said the Congressional committee in a report signed by eight of the ten members, "that a training ship be promptly built and that a new airship should be provided to replace the Akron embodying such new developments as experience may show to be desirable.

"This is in accord with the principle of the five-year plan that contemplated the desirability of two airships operating with the fleet. In the meantime it is recommended that the Los Angeles be put back in commission for training and research."

Regarding the Lakehurst Air Station, former home of the proud Akron, which the Navy has ordered reduced to a bare maintenance basis after the Macon goes to Sunnyvale, Calif., the committee said:

"It is recommended that the Naval Air Station at Lakehurst, N. J., be the center of training and a center of experiment; that a most experienced airship commander be assigned to its command, and that there be placed at his disposal experts in airship operation, aerology, radio and other fields of instruction and research, and that free balloons and nonrigid airships be provided for training."

The committee said the wreck of the Akron was caused by the crash of the stern on the sea in a swift vertical descent in a thunder and lightning storm.

"Responsibility for the crash was the navigation of the ship in the storm conditions when she was destroyed," the committee said.

New Election Plan Is Sought in Ohio

Columbus, Ohio, June 10 (A.P.).—Sponsors for a referendum on the Mosier ratification convention law, S. C. McNaught, head of the Ohio Anti-Saloon League, said today, were agreed so that the plan of electing delegates at large could be defeated and a "more representative law" sought from the Legislature.

The Mosier law calls for the election of delegates at large to the convention which will act on the proposal to repeal the eighteenth amendment.

Dry leaders have sought to obtain election of delegates from senatorial districts.

In announcing that 90,000 more signatures than are required by law for a referendum had been appended to the petitions, McNaught declared they sought not simply to delay selection of delegates, but to permit the defeat of the Mosier bill at the November polls and "so put it up to the General Assembly to pass a more representative and more Democratic law for setting up a ratification convention."

DODD IS APPOINTED ENVOY TO GERMANY

vention. Mr. Dodd is now a resident of Chicago.

Mr. Persons, who is 56 years old, has been interested in welfare work since 1914. THE FEDERAL DIARY

By GEORGE D. RILEY

EAST BIDS THREE SPADES—ANOTHER ALICE EPISODE

(Same apologies to L. C.)

By TYDD L. DE WINKS IV.

PRELIMINARY assumptions: Alice hasn't long to live. Convicted of the felony of being a resident of Washington, she has already been turned over to the executioner. From there on it goes like this:

With hardly a reason in the world for acting that way, Alice shifted her Spearmint to the other cheek and bought herself a handkerchief at Jelleff's. (The advertising is free). "Nice day," she murmured.

Indeed it was. It hadn't rained for five minutes.

"Indeed it is. It hasn't rained for five minutes," agreed the Tin Woodman of Oz, Lord High Executioner of Blunderland. "Did you morganize your income taxes this year?" Alice sighed.

"My income is entirely morganatic. It don't count," she said. "I get indigenter and indigenter every payday, it seems."

"Surely ten thousand dollars a year is enough for a girl like you," insisted the executioner, "and I know you get at least that because my home town papers say you do."

"But I don't," denied Alice. "I don't get——"

"Now, now! Don't add falsehood to your other crimes. I know. I read the papers and you can't fool me. I know all about it. You work a half an hour a day, and don't work all of that, and what you do isn't done well, and if it were, it's unnecessary, and you get six months' vacation with double pay. The papers back home say so. Just because some political friend got you the job——"

"Stop! Stop!" cried Alice in dismayed amazement. "You never got that out of any papers, because it isn't so."

"Oh, yes; it is so. It is in the papers."

"The Washington papers don't say any such thing. They tell the truth. You should read them once in a while. You would learn something."

"Good heavens, no! Me read a Washington paper, saturated in propaganda? There is more than enough of that sort of thing even in the home town papers, trying to make out that some people work for the Government for less than five thousand dollars a year, but you can't make me believe that! And didn't I see you loafing at 20 minutes past 12 last week?"

"I don't think so. Where was I?"

"YOU should know. I was lost. I started for the Bureau of Etymology to interview Swarmi Fedd, and got misplaced. But I saw you. Where were you?"

"Well, on Tuesday I was in the Department of Ways and Means to get some papers," said Alice.

"And you were loafing."

"I was waiting for the papers. I had nothing else to do."

"You should have taken some work along with you. The editor of my home town paper says so. He knows all about what goes on in Washington. He was there for a week in 1909."

"He would know then. It is hereditary."

"Is what hereditary?"

"This believing everything you read about Government employes?" Alice asked.

"Oh, my, no! It isn't hereditary, and I don't. Sometimes there is propaganda about low-salaried employes that do not exist and a mythical pay cut and such things, and you may be sure I don't believe that sort of thing. I only permit that," said the Tin Woodman of Oz, as he thirstily fingered the well-worn handle of his ax.

"I am convinced, and I see it isn't hereditary. It is just an epidemic, like that strange disease that makes people's hearts beat," Alice replied.

"Young lady, are you laughing at me? I don't permit that. Prepare yourself to be executed!"

But Alice had suddenly become just a little bit disobedient. She really didn't know why she did; she had always been a meek little thing, taking everything as it came and being thankful that it was no worse; that was why she worked for the Government.

"How about executing you instead?" she asked.

The very-that-isn't-doneness of her question staggered the Tin Woodman.

"Why—why should any one want to execute me?" he asked, dumfounded.

"The papers said there were five reasons," answered our heroine, "and now they have found a sixth."

"Did the papers say such a thing as that? But, then, you mustn't believe what you see in the papers. It's just propaganda."

"Maybe," said Alice, "but I read it in the papers. I know!"

"They weren't very good reasons. Not all six of them."

"No, I suppose not," and Alice stooped to pick up a pass to the Palace that was lying on the ground, the pass that George Riley had [illegible] some time or other. (According to Riley he had been, at approximately 20 minutes past 5.)

"Dear me," said the Tin Woodman, "aren't you executed yet? Let us be about it. Here—put your head on that block—no, so! Now smile, just a little—say 'ah—there. Just a minute, now."

Alice, ever obedient, followed his direction, or almost followed them. If he had not tied her feet, she would have followed anything in any direction as long as that direction was away from him. But she was, as usual, helpless. She had come to her end. Nothing left but to resign herself. Resign? Don't be silly; all fired enough, but why didn't that executioner do something and get the suspense over? He was taking a long, long time about everything.

The Tin Woodman stood a little way off, ruefully eyeing his ax, as Alice turned her head and looked at the place where the edge ought to be. Alice gave a glad cry.

"IT'S gone!" she thought, gleefully, "somebody took the edge off his ax! I—I wonder if Riley—or some of those newspaper boys—didn't just steal that edge? They were by here, I know! I—I read it in the papers!" she snickered as a quiet song.

After a moment the decapitator came over and without a word, said, "Execution's postponed" and, without more ado, untied her ankles. Alice almost burst with suppressed laughter, but not that she was happy in particular, but just at the [illegible]. The postponement meant suspense almost as painful as the execution, but—well—sort of hysterical, but while there was life there was hope.

The headsman sat down on the block and started whetting the ax, [illegible] picking [illegible], wandered aimlessly around, [illegible] some authorities hold she was [illegible]. The executioner on his job that he did not notice that she was dangerously near the horizon, a few yards away, nor did she until it again tripped her and she fell, out of sight, back within the boundary of things.

When she realized what had happened she got to her feet, and because she knew that the most distant part of the horizon must be the safest part, she picked up her feet and ran toward it. She ran until she was all out of breath and sat down in a passing woodland, although it almost got away before she could catch it, to rest. She didn't dare to tarry long, and after a short time got up to go again. She looked about in dismay. All parts of the horizon were equally distant, and she no longer knew which way to go. The wiser thing, then, was to remain hidden, so she wandered down a path that seemed to lead to a more retired spot. Retired? She hardly wanted it, but she couldn't be sure yet that she was going to have any option.

She had gone some distance when she heard a steady thumping somewhere far ahead. She proceeded with caution, half expecting to meet Hansel and Gretel, for she recognized in this their woods, but when at length she peeked out from behind a tree her heart pounded so hard it lifted her off her feet. It was the Tin Woodman, who, having missed his victim, had gone back to chopping trees until she should be found. Alice, not the dumbest of creatures, did not encroach upon his consciousness, but turned and went the other way.

SOME time after she came to the bank of a stream, and an inviting grassy spot hidden in a clump of bushes lured her to rest. She lay down and dozed off.

She did not know how long her disturbed sleep lasted, but it was filled with a constant procession of nightmares—the most terrible nightmares that had ever been visited upon any human being, but she took them quietly. At that, they were not quite so bad as reality!

When she did awake, the sky was overcast, and a light rain was falling. She cowered a little closer into her bushes, trying to keep dry—at least not to get more than 3.2 per cent wet. After a few minutes she heard voices. At first she thought of calling out, but on second thought she decided not to. So far she hadn't seen much of anybody in Blunderland who didn't think her at least a criminal. Pretty soon, around a bend in the stream, floated a galley. It didn't seem to have so many oars, and even those diminished in number as she watched. The decks were crowded, and a drone of voices came to her ears. As the vessel came closer, she pushed deeper into the bushes, but so that she could see all that went on.

Almost everybody she had yet seen in Blunderland was on the boat—even the bluebottle fly and the June bug—now and then muttering, "Dungeon the hel-lup!"—and there were the Red Queen and White Queen and the Olliogobolus and the cutworms and the Tin Woodman, and the fleas and the crickets and the wolf, except one paw he had left behind to keep Alice's alter ego in the cage until the paycut door should be big enough for him to get in (it won't be long now), and lots of people Alice h d met on her previous trips and some she didn't even know. Santa Claus was there, but he had been hung at the yardarm. Spare tires lined the rails. On the side was painted in big blue lettlers, "Sugar Maple."

"What a funny name for a boat," thought Alice. Beneath the lettering hung an anchor, the only one on the boat that wasn't dragging, and on one of its huge flukes sat a man, with a face sunburned the color of a well-done beefsteak. He had on hip boots, a tam-o'-shanter, and some other clothes. But to Alice, who loved him, he was a welcome sight in this land of the horrible. For she recognized none other than George D. Riley himself (see picture at top of column at least once a month). George was, of course, writing in his diary. And fishing. He also had an eye out for interruptions, too; you see he was a stowaway. Even as Alice watched, he drew in at least three toadfish, which he flipped through a porthole into the galley. At such times he didn't watch what he wrote. It might be almost anything.

"I don't think the mess they're cooking up in that galley smells very good anyway," thought Alice. "I suppose toadfish really might be an improvement."

ON deck everybody was talking at once, but Alice seemed to be able to follow them all without trouble. From the general conversatnon she gathered that they—she never found out who—were below, deciding about abolishing something. "H'm," muttered G. D. R., "'Below'. That's suggestive," and he wrote so furiously in his diary that there was a distinct buzzing as he turned the pages.

Everybody seemed to know what "they" would decide, but they couldn't seem to agree upon it. Each one had lots of perfectly logical reasons why one thing or another should not be abolished, but wanted everything else abolished. That is, everybody except the June bug. He wanted to abolish everything, even the boat. "Scuttle the galliot," he muttered.

All but a few of the rowers had disappeared by the time the boat came opposite Alice's hiding place. There it lost headway and stopped. Startled, the stowaway swung down, and, hanging by his toes, peered through a porthole, all the time writing feverishly in his diary. What he wrote you will find in this column next week.

Hardly had the boat stopped when a commanding voice from the vowels of the ship commanded, "Put them back to work! Why do we have industries if they don't keep the workers working? They aren't Government employes." There was a general recovery—of oars, and the boat started, this time upstream. The oars seemed to be much heavier and badly fouled with exemptions for the rich, so that each foot of progress was made only with a severe tax on the incomes of the rowers.

There were a few who had not stopped rowing, and though they pulled with the others, they seemed to get little credit for it and, indeed, they got considerable abuse from passengers and petty officers. A few members of the crew and some of the passengers, and even the stowaway, tried to protect them, but though they warded off some of the blows, they were so badly outnumbered that their efforts were not entirely successful. It seemed to Alice that this must be allegorical, but she was unable to decide what it meant.

As the boat moved slowly upstream it turned this way and that, rocked to one side and then to the other, or maybe back to the same side; it scraped the rocks on either side repeatedly, now and then leaping over one. Alice thought it must be her digestion. She hadn't been eating regularly—well, almost regularly.

Overhead the sky was overcast. Alice thought it was somewhat overdone. Clouds were scudding beneath the higher canopy of solid gray. Darkness was over everything. Now and then a burst of wind drove a shower of rain through the trees, with a frequency that grew until the rain was a steady downpour. The boat careened as it again approached the bend. Alice expected to see it grow legs and walk up the bank, but somehow it changed its course with the stream and passed out of sight. Safe at last from observation, she got to her feet, cramped from crouching so long. She stepped off the grass. Her foot slipped on the wet, slick earth and she sat down suddenly.

(Alice will be in at least one more predicament next Sunday.)

Diary Guest Tickets

IF your name in this column is followed by (*), or if your contribution appears, call on The Federal Diary Editor day of publication, except Sunday, between 4:30 and 5:15 p. m., and receive tickets to Loew's Fox, "The Nuisance" (Lee Tracy) or Loew's Palace, "When Ladies Meet" (Ann Harding and Robert Montgomery).

SHADE, READY MADE.

"WANTED TO BUY—A home with shade trees," so read an "ad," in last Sunday's paper. Shade trees add greatly to the attractiveness and comfort of any home. Trees of any size are usually to be found only in the older sections of our cities or in those new subdivisions being established in naturally wooded sections. Most of home owners plant small trees or saplings then wait the greater part of their lives for the trees to attain sufficient size to produce shade. In fact trees often have been planted in youth to provide enjoyment in old age.

Recently, in making the alterations in the Mall area and those in Potomac Park, dozens of large trees have been dug up, "taken for a ride," and established in new locations. Many of these trees are elms, one of the premier shade trees of the United States. The elms seem to the average observer to stand this treatment about as well as any of our common shade trees.

Dry summer weather has proven too much for some of these splendid trees, but many of us have been somewhat surprised by the way most of the trees have been able to withstand the shock of the move and how quickly many of them seem to establish themselves in the new locations.

On the north side of the new Agricultural Department Building are two beautifully shaped elms some 25 to 30 feet in height. The one to the west of the entrance has been in place for around two seasons, that on the east was planted this spring. It took the place of another elm, several large branches of which had failed to live. Such trees as these would take the greater part of the average person's lifetime to produce if planted as small trees or saplings. Thus the saving of time should be very great by planting such trees.

Considerable expense is attached to the moving of large trees. Probably many persons could not afford this expense in addition to that of buying a home. However, we who have seen the automobile and the radio change from luxuries for the rich only, to "necessities" for the average citizen hope that the day may soon come when those who desire shade trees in a hurry will have a reasonable chance of obtaining them. May they not need to wait until old age is upon them to have shade trees to enjoy.

LOUIS A. ROSAFY, chief of the old records division, Adjutant General's office, War Department, has long been one of the most active union workers in Washington. He has been affiliated with several locals, and is now a member of Local Union, No. 372, of which he is a charter member and an organizer.

Louis A. Rosafy.

Mr. Rosafy was born in Southport, N. C. He attended the public graded and high schools of the District of Columbia and was graduated with the degree of master of laws from the Columbia University (now George Washington) Law School in 1893. He was admitted to practice before the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Appointed a page in the United States Senate in 1884 at the age of 12 years, he served in that capacity and later as a clerk for si years. He resigned to accept a position with the Census Office, again resigning in 1891 to accept a clerkship tendered by the Civil Service Commission in the Adjutant General's office, War Department, where he has been employed ever since.

As chief of the old records division of the Adjutant General's office, Mr. Rosafy has custody of all the military records of the War Department from the foundation of the Government to October 31, 1912, including the War of the Revolution, the War of 1918, the Mexican War, Indian wars, the Civil War, both Union and Confederate records; the War with Spain and the Philippine Insurrection, also the entire regular Army of the United States up to and including 1912.

Mr. Rosafy also has served as chief of the prisoner of war division, the correspondence division, and the selective service division of the Adjutant General's office. Thus for the last 46 years he has had only three positions. He has never been out of work a single day, and of the 46 years in the Government service, 39 years have been spent as an employe of the Adjutant General's office.

MR. ROSAFY thus summarizes his belief in the effectiveness of organization: "I always have been intensely interested in the uplift, betterment and general welfare of the Government employes, and have long since persuaded myself that the only sure and safe way to accomplish anything lasting and worth while was through the instrumentality of organizations of Government employes composed of intelligent, patriotic, loyal employes, who, at all times, would use every honest effort to promote not only their own interests but those of their Government as well.

"My first experience with an attempt to organize the employes of the Government dates back to an evening 40 years ago, when, out of an invited list of more than 100 employes, only seven attended a meeting at a private residence on Capitol Hill to meet the 'Noblest Roman of them all,' Samuel Gompers, and to take the necessary steps toward forming a permanent organization.

"This, of course, was long before the right of the Government employes to petition their Government through organization was reaffirmed, and, therefore, this little band of seven had to content themselves with the thought that coming events were casting their shadows before, and most of them have lived to reiterate the sentiment that 'Mighty oaks from little acorns grow.'

"Ever since, as far as my humble capacity would permit, I have done my little bit to see that the emblem of the Federal employes floated high on the pyramid of success, commanding admiration, demanding respect and insuring protection and a fair deal and a square deal to all over whom it floats."

Mr. Rosafy attended our national convention at Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., and served on the committee on legislation, being at that time a member and delegate of Local Union, No. 261. He has served as vice president on the executive board of Local Union, No. 261, and declined the presidency of Local Union No. 372, preferring to be a "high private in the ranks." He also is a member of the board of directors and secretary of the Departmental Bank, Washington, D. C.

READING the splendid article entitled "Has Life Been Too Easy for Us?" by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, in a recent issue of Liberty, reminds me of a vacation I had in the summer of 1931. My father died just two weeks before I started on the trip to the Middle West. He knew of my planning and all the details. Of course, the shock of his death made me hesitate about taking the trip. But friends urged me to go away. It would do me good.

I was living here in an apartment with a girl friend who was from Missouri. We had a nice, cozy apartment with all the city conveniences. Nice bathroom, dinette and kitchen, gas, electricity and telephone, elevator service, &c.

My friend invited me to spend this vacation with her in Missouri. I consented.

We planned our trip as economically as possible by deciding to travel by bus. We left Washington, going from here to Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago and then to Des Moines, Iowa. This we did because we wanted to visit friends in Lamont, Iowa. After sightseeing in all these cities we made our way from Iowa down into Missouri. My friend's brother had to drive 15 miles from their place into the highway where the bus stopped.

After riding over the dirt road in a flivver for this distance we reached the farm, which consisted of about 150 acres. This is not called a farm by Middle Westerners, but it was large enough for me.

THE house was an L-shaped house by the side of the road. The spring where we got our water supply was about a quarter of a mile from the house. I'll never forget helping to carry those buckets of water. Here spinning was no lost art. There wasn't a mirror in the whole house so we didn't have much time to doll up. We went to bed at 7 in the evening and were supposed to get up early the next morning. Our bath tub was the Osage River and our scenery was the Ozark Mountains. We were too far from a store for fresh bread every day, but we had freshly made cornbread each morning. There were no noises of the city there to disturb one. Occasionally a dog would bark in the nighttime.

Our pleasure consisted of fishing. I was taught to fish with the worm on the hook and the homemade fishing pole. Then I was introduced to cleaning the fish. The best of all was the eating of them.

I was a curiosity to them and they were a curiosity to me. But we soon grew to be friends. I must say this was a contrast to my living.

This place made me recall the words of Whittier:

"And so I find it well to come for deeper rest to this still room, for here the habit of the soul feels less the outer world's control. And from the silence, multiplied by those still forms on every side, the world, that time and sense has known falls off and leaves us God alone."—Edna Mae Phelps, Agriculture.

A. H. Haug, guard, Commerce, is fast acquiring a reputation as a model of efficiency and a craftsman of some ability. He has just constructed an ingenious pocket-size reference file in which he has neatly recorded the tag numbers of automobiles owned by persons having regular official contact with the department and for whom a limited number of temporary parking spaces have been provided near the building. After office hours he fashions hammocks from twine as a hobby.

It seems as if "robbers and thieves" are playing havoc with Albert Gamse, Regional Information Division. Gamse, you know, not long ago had the wheels taken from his car. Yesterday when the car was parked up at Fifteenth and Pennsylvania avenue, within plain sight of a policeman, the glass was broken on his car and several suit cases of clothing were stolen. It was necessary for Gamse to stop at a department store and purchase a shirt before coming to work yesterday morning.

INCOME TAX LISTS UNDER PRESIDENT

Roosevelt to Prescribe Way Names and Amounts May Be Published.

(Associated Press.)

Twelve innocent-sounding words caused untold confusion in offices of internal revenue collectors in 1925, the only time the Government has ever made public the names and addresses and amount of tax paid by income taxpayers of the Nation.

The action of the Senate to make public income tax returns recalled the period to Government officials. Opening of the tax information to public inspection brought them floods of protests from business men and individuals before.

The collection officers were besieged by thousands of persons who wished to inspect the lists.

Under the amendment put into the industrial bill Friday by the Senate, the lists would be made public, but the conferees stipulated yesterday that the action should be taken under regulations to be drawn up by the President.

Fight Ensues in Congress.

The 1925 action resulted from a move to have collectors prepare a list of names and addresses to be publicly filed and permit Government and State officers to inspect the returns under regulations made by the Secretary of the Treasury.

A fight ensued in Congress, a faction demanding the returns themselves be made public. A compromise was reached.

Twelve words were added to the paragraph, which provides the lists should be made public as soon as possible by the collectors. These words were "together with the amount of income tax paid by such person."

This addition made the section of the law authorizing the publicity read:

"The commissioner shall as soon as practicable in each year cause to be prepared and made available to public inspection in such manner as he may determine, in the office of the collector in each internal revenue district, and in such other places as he may determine, lists containing the name and the postoffice address of each person making an income tax return in such district, together with the amount of income tax paid by such person."

Law Effective in 1926.

The law became effective the next year on returns made for 1924, and the lists were made up after taxpayers had filed their returns, March 15, and were made public in the offices of the collectors.

There was much confusion as to whether the law permitted publication of the lists and many newspapers did publish them.

The next year Congress eliminated the twelve words that caused the confusion and the income tax returns of the Nation again became inviolate with no one but officials, heirs and the attorneys for the person making the returns permitted to inspect them.

Court to Decide Newspaper Sale

Minneapolis, June 10 (A.P.).—The proposed sale of the Memphis Commercial Appeal, Inc., daily and Sunday newspaper of Memphis, Tenn., to a concern known as the Tennessee Co., by the receivers of the Minnesota & Ontario Paper Co. was attacked in Federal District Court here today.

The paper company, one of the E. W. Backus interests before it went into receivership in February, 1931, stands to sacrifice more than $1,600,000 under the terms of the proposed sales contract, Backus told Judge J. W. Molyneaux. He took the witness stand to oppose the receiver's petition seeking approval of the sale.

Judge Molyneaux took the petition under advisement. He will hand down a decision before July 10, the time limit set in the proposed contract for court approval of the sale.

Russian Girl Hopes To "Crash" Movies

San Francisco, June 10 (U.P.).—Hoping to "crash" the movies and end the harrowing experiences her family has suffered, Nina Barsamova, 21-year-old "movie queen of Shanghai," will arrive on the liner President Hoover Monday, en route to Hollywood. She was chosen from a group of 160 maidens in an international pageant of beauty at Shanghai to raise funds for the "school for poor Russian children."

Miss Barsamova is 5 feet 2 and weighs 108 pounds. She has brown eyes and curly, dark hair.

Her family was exiled from the court of the Romanoffs and lived in Harbin, Manchuria, until her father died. Two years ago the mother and two daughters moved to Shanghai. For winning the beauty pageant, Miss Barsamova was given a round trip to Hollywood and the privilege of being given screen tests and a part in a short picture.

3 Key Men to Run Economic Parleys

London, June 10 (A.P.).—Three key men—possibly one an American—will guide the proceedings of the World Economic Conference under present plans.

It was understood in informed quarters tonight that the organization set up for the international parley which begins here Monday would be as follows: Creation of two committees, one on monetary matters, the second on general economic questions including tariffs.

The chairman of these two committees together with Premier Ramsay MacDonald as chairman of the conference, will hold the most important positions in the great gathering of virtually all civilized nations.

There also will be a steering committee, probably headed by Mr. MacDonald. It is expected to include an American.

Pacific Ships Come to Life As Cargo Demands Grow

San Francisco, June 10 (A.P.).—Anchor chains, grown heavy with rust, rattle again at Pacific Coast ports today, while winches, stiff from idleness, scratch under the burden of swelling cargoes.

By midsummer, a coast-wide survey here revealed, some 40 merchant vessels, lying deserted during the long lull in commerce, will again be plowing the ocean waves.

For the first time since the lean years began, shipping men reported, orders are coming in faster than bottoms can be provided.

In Portland, grain shippers are offering $4 a ton for space, $1.50 more than 60 days ago.

Ports the length of the coast are in cheerful hum, as cargoes of lumber, wool, grain, hops, canned and evaporated fruits, hides, flour and a score of other products are stowed into holds long empty.

More than a dozen ships, ranging from 2,500 to 8,000 tons, have been put into service from San Francisco Harbor during the last month, the chamber of commerce reports. May records show 815,734 tons of general cargo handled here, the peak month since October, 1931, and 21 per cent more than May of last year.

From Seattle's Lake Union, storage basin for idle vessels, 16 ships have steamed down to Puget Sound in the last 60 days, an impressive parade of the reemployed.

Twenty freighters are reported back in service at Portland. Daily employment of longshoremen has jumped from 500 to 800. A second regular steamboat service has been established on the mid-Columbia, with triweekly stops on both lines at river ports.

At San Pedro, on the southern coast, Hawaiian shipments in May totaled 33,140 tons, a striking gain over 18,682 tons for May, 1932. Lumber receipts were 39,100,000 board feet, compared to 32,798,000 for the corresponding period last year. Port revenues increased $30,000 in April over April, 1932.

Harris W. Mallitz Expires in South

New Orleans, June 10 (A.P.).—Harris Woolf Mallitz, sr., 80, retired and former auditor for the Nicaraguan government under several presidents, died at his home here today.

Mr. Mallitz, a native of Russia, came to the United States when he was 14 years old. Seven years later he left for Peru and still later served the Nicaraguan government. He was provincial grand master of the Masonic Order in Nicaragua.

He is survived by his widow, the former Miss Sarah Green; four sons, Harris W. Mallitz, jr., New York; Reuben Mallitz, of Brooklyn, N. Y.; McKinley and Emil Mallitz, of New Orleans, and four daughters, all of New Orleans.

Kansas Court Outlaws Farming by Corporation

Topeka, Kans., June 10 (A.P.).—The State supreme court held today that corporation farming for profit in Kansas is unauthorized.

The court found for Roland Boynton, State's Attorney General, in his suits to oust the Wheat Farming Co., of Hays, and the Sledd Farm Corporation, of Lyons, but withheld an ouster order to permit the concerns—the largest farming corporations in the State—to voluntarily dispose of their large land holdings, or dissolve.

Deportation Fight Flares Up Again

Winnipeg, Manitoba, June 10 (A.P.).—A summons to the department of immigration to show reason why a writ of habeas corpus should not be issued for Peter Verigin, Doukhobor leader, who was arrested for deportation yesterday, was issued today by Justice R. A. Robson.

Verigin will remain in custody here over the week-end, but the commission of immigration at Ottawa will have to show cause Monday morning why the leader of the sect should not be released.

A fight over a move to deport Verigin has raged for several months. At one time he was put aboard ship to be expelled and sent to Russia, but an appeal succeeded in annulling this order.

Nephew's Wedding Seen By President's Mother

Buffalo, N. Y., June 10 (A.P.).—Miss Ruth Potter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roderich Potter, of Buffalo, today became the bride of Frederick P. Adams, jr., of New York City. The ceremony took place in Westminster Presbyterian Church, this city. Among the guests were Mrs. Sara Delano Roosevelt, mother of the President and great aunt of the bridegroom; Mrs. James R. Roosevelt, sister-in-law to the President, and Mr. and Mrs. Warren Delano, maternal grandparents of the bridegroom, and the former a cousin to the President.

President's Cup Regatta Plans Are Outlined

Plans which promise to make the President's Cup Regatta, which is to be run here September 29 and 30, the greatest in the history of this event, were outlined at a meeting of the executive committee held last week at the office of John A. Remon, general chairman of the committee, at the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. building. Members of the committee who have taken part in arrangements for previous regattas declared that the plans for this year's event are further along at the present time than those of any previous event of this kind.

Mr. Remon presented a chart showing the responsibility of the various executives for certain features of the regatta. John A. Remon is general chairman with Dr. R. Lyman Sexton, commodore of the Corinthian Yacht Club, as vice chairman. E. C. Baltz, commodore of the Chesapeake Power Boat Association, is chairman of the executive committee and L. Gordon Leech is executive secretary and chairman of the race committee. Robert V. Fleming is treasurer.

Columbia Dental Group Elects Officers Tuesday

Election of officers will feature the annual meeting of the District of Columbia Dental Society which will be held Tuesday night at the Medical Building of George Washington University, on H street. Dr. W. W. Wyman is the only candidate for president.

Dr. H. E. Erikson is the sole candidate for president-elect, the society having no vice presidents and the president-elect being automatically in line for election as president the following year. Members of the executive committee will also be elected at this meeting, as will be candidates for the board of dental examiners, who will be named by ballot at this meeting and their names sent to the Commissioners. Dr. W. M. Simkins is secretary-treasurer of the dental society.

Supply Ship to Italian Air Force Near Labrador

St. Johns, Newfoundland, June 10 (A.P.).—The steamer Alice, supply ship to the projected flight of Italian flying boats to Chicago, today steamed along the outer edge of the ice blockade on the Labrador coast to within 10 miles of Battle Harbor, but was forced to turn back and put in at Criquet.

The Alice is bound for Cartwright, somewhat north of Battle Harbor, to await the planes' arrival, but reported today it would be impossible to proceed until the wind shifted the ice blockade.

Boy Scouts Will Collect Camp Sport Equipment

New York, June 10 (A.P.).—The Boy Scouts of America announced today that a telegram had been sent to President Roosevelt offering the services of Boy Scouts in collecting recreational equipment for use in the forestry camps.

The announcement said the decision to make this offer was reached at the Scout conference, in Kansas City. If the offer is accepted Scouts in districts near forestry camps would canvass the region for serviceable equipment such as bats and balls and other recreational material.

About 300 Beer Dealers Still Tardy on Returns

More than 200 of the tardy beer retailers filed their May returns at the District tax assessor's office yesterday before closing time, and most of those still outstanding were expected to get their reports in the mails today. Between 200 and 300 have not yet reported.

The 200 reports yesterday covered sales of 2,043 barrels of beer and brought the total tax to $13,729. The total beer dealers from whom reports have been received is 1,469.

Berle Describes Crisis In Speech at Harvard

Cambridge, Mass., June 10 (A.P.).—The present administration came into office at the peake of a crisis, which in another country, would have brought revolution, A. A. Berle, jr., special adviser to the Secretary of the Treasury, today told a gathering at the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration. The school is observing its twenty-fifth anniversary.

Data on Arnold's Visit To Washington Sought

Slain Body Identified As Missing Salesman's

Clarksburg, W. Va., June 16.—The body of a murdered man found May 25 on an island in Elk River, 7 miles below Webster Springs, has been definitely identified, authorities stated today, as that of John McCoy, 60, a salesman, of South Carolina. He had been missing a year.

Identification was completed today by a daughter, Mrs. Lillian Skaggs, and her husband, Frank J. Skaggs, police chief of South Carolina. The manner of McCoy's death remains a mystery. A hole torn in the left shoulder of his body indicated death from a shotgun wound and a coroner's jury returned a verdict that he had been murdered.

Fugitive Writ Against Norman Whitaker Closed

A fugitive warrant charging Norman T. Whitaker, known as "The Fox" in the plot by which Gaston B. Means attempted to obtain $35,000 from Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean, yesterday was dismissed by Judge John M. McMahon in Police Court when authorities from Virginia failed to appear for the hearing.

Whitaker, who was sentenced to serve two years following his conviction with Means on a charge of conspiring to steal $35,000 from Mrs. McLean, was wanted in Richmond, Va., on a bad check charge. He was arrested here, prior to his trial in the conspiracy charge, and was being held as a fugitive.

485 Patients in May At Children's Hospital

Children's Hospital took care of 485 patients during May with a total of 3,602 hospital days, according to a report made yesterday by Miss Mattie Gibson, superintendent, to the Community Chest. This was in addition to 715 emergency cases handled by the hospital.

During the month there were 3,985 children treated in the dispensary, Miss Gibson's report shows, and 1,333 children examined at the child welfare department, the organization which works "to keep the well child well." Cooperation by the social service department was given in the form of 1,030 visits made to homes of the various youngsters as a follow-up to their appearance at the dispensary. These visits were made to give the hospital more information on the home life and other characteristics of these little patients.

Large Enrollment In Private Schools

Enrollment in private elementary schools in the District and 14 States is more than 10 per cent of the total public and private elementary school registration in the country, according to a survey by the United States Office of Education.

Washington has from 12 to 14 per cent of these schools and Maryland from 10 to 12 per cent. New York, with 293,237 children reported in private schools, leads all other States in private elementary school enrollment. Pennsylvania is next with 254,439.

The survey accounts for 2,000,000 pupils in a little less than 7,000 private elementary schools. Roman Catholic schools, with 1,730,670 children, register by far the largest number while the nonsectarian schools are next with a total reported enrollment of more than 50,000.

THE NEW GOVERNMENT.

Under President Roosevelt, within three months, so many and such far-reaching changes have been made in the application of the powers of the Government that they may be summed up as revolutionary. From now on the relations of the Federal Government with the people will be entirely different from what they have been. Instead of adhering to the old rules which contemplated a Government of strictly limited powers, governing the people as little as possible and leaving the widest liberties to States and individuals, the Federal Government becomes an almoner of the States, and the master of the people.

Driven by an emergency in the nature of a national collapse, and responding to the public demand that relief should be given by the Government at any cost, President Roosevelt advised Congress in his inaugural address that he would ask for extraordinary powers. Thereupon he developed one proposal after another, of startling novelty and tremendous scope, and a Congress overwhelmingly Democratic eagerly delegated to him all the powers he asked for. These grants of authority are held by the President to be constitutional in every case; but whether or not they are constitutionally within the power of Congress to grant, the projects stand as laws until and unless they are overthrown.

The President of the United States now has power to change the value of money; to regulate industry, agriculture, and transportation; to cancel contracts; to distribute public funds to States and municipalities; to create a civilian army; to fix the size and quality of the Navy within certain treaty limits; to modify all war pensions and allowances; to determine the nature of public works costing $3,300,000,000; to borrow billions of dollars; and in general to direct policies which will determine the hours of labor, the minimum of wages, the production of industry, the character and output of agriculture, the operation of railroads, the rehabilitation of banks, and the reorganization of Government departments.

The minor grants of authority embodied in these colossal major grants enable the President to exercise practically complete power over the organized activities of the people.

For boldness of conception and scope, the projects proposed by the President and approved by Congress have no parallel in the history of the United States.

The test of the efficacy of these projects is about to come. Whether they are good or bad, they mark a departure from the past. The Government of the United States, so far as its relations with the people are concerned, is a new and untried power. For the time being, whether the people like the new Government or not, they have no power to control it, halt it, or divert it.

Every citizen owes obedience to the laws. The Government has been changed in the hope of bettering the condition of every citizen. Cheerful co-operation with the Government in the application of the new regime is the duty of every citizen. That the President of the United States will prove equal to the burdens placed upon him can not but be the earnest wish of all.

THE WEARY TITAN.

In outlining his plan to enlighten the American people concerning his part in governing the United States, Prof. Raymond Moley, Assistant Secretary of State, hastens to reassure the public on several vital points. First, he declares that he is neither omniscient nor infallible—an admission which is at once startling in its unexpectedness and disconcerting to those who relied upon him to pull the country through. Second, he announces that his articles will not "represent" the administration; that they will not be used for the purpose of sending up trial balloons; and that they will not contain official or semiofficial pronouncements. This announcement is equally startling and disconcerting, and may be expected to plunge President Roosevelt into profound melancholy, because it deprives him of the benefit which would flow from official public approbation of his policies by Prof. Moley.

Nevertheless, Prof. Moley promises to give to his countrymen an "unabashed" picture—that is, a nude picture—of what is going on in his mind as he sifts the multiplied hundreds of thousands of problems which confront him and the remaining remnants of the Government. It is a Titan's task, courageously attacked by a Titan, who confesses his weariness but proclaims his determination to carry on. He finds that Washington is not a city in a vacuum, but a nerve center into which pour all the impulses of a mighty people. He hints that there is danger of confusion which will threaten his sense of direction. But he will faithfully undertake to "digest, consider, order and act upon this wealth of information and advice."

Whether it is wise or unwise for all the assorted czars, dictators, coordinators, assistant secretaries, and presidential mentors in Washington to imitate Prof. Moley in presenting unabashed pictures of what is going on in their minds as they sift their confused way through the multiplied thousands of governmental problems is a question to be propounded. Let each Titan decide for himself. There may be mute, inglorious Tugwells who will work and not talk. There may be other brilliant expounders of the new deal which supersedes the Constitution. Eloquent or silent, they contribute to the nation's problems even while they seek to solve them. For the present, perhaps it is best that Prof. Moley alone should lay bare his mind.

EACH FOR ITSELF.

Delegates of about 60 nations will meet tomorrow in London to consider the sorry state of the world and to make agreements, if possible, which will mend conditions. All the nations are suffering, and therefore all of them wish to profit by international agreements calculated to improve trade and put an end to the gyrations of currencies, which paralyze commerce between nations.

The outstanding obstacle to mutual agreement is the universal sense of insecurity. Over the world hangs the fear of war. This fear impels each nation to safeguard its economy as part of its war defense. A secondary obstacle is the change which has occurred since the World War in manufacturing methods, whereby practically every country is enabled to supply its own needs. Loans by Americans to foreign countries have resulted in building up factories which furnish goods formerly supplied by the United States. Agriculture in every country is stubbornly opposed to any concessions to the agriculture of other countries. These factors, combined with stupendous losses which have demoralized money values, compel each country to assume a defensive attitude at the London conference.

Efforts are made to bring about cooperation in world agriculture, so that surpluses may be eliminated. It is a staggering task. Some of the nations are dependent upon agricultural exports for their solvency. They can not be expected to reduce their exports for the sake of relieving agriculture in other countries. Yet their exports are halted at the borders of countries whose agriculture supplies national requirements.

Many Americans have been taught to believe that the United States tariff is unduly high. They would learn something by studying the tariffs and customs restrictions of other countries. All kinds of devices have been adopted by foreign countries to protect their home industries and agriculture. The delegates to London, if they attempt to sweep away these restrictions, will "hear from home," and it is not improbable that some governments will be overturned as a result of the London negotiations.

If the London conference can succeed in stabilizing currencies it will do all that can be reasonably expected. It will be a failure if it does not do this much. With the exception of Japan, which is making a raid on world commerce by depreciated currency and coolie labor for the purpose of consummating the seizure of a neighbor's territory, all nations are anxious to stabilize currencies so that commerce may be freed from the uncertainty of fluctuating values. Nothing may be expected in the direction of liberalized tariffs, but the nations can afford to co-operate in behalf of the integrity of money, upon which all commerce is based.

Until the Far Eastern situation takes a turn which removes the danger of world war, and until the nations are willing to co-operate for reduction of armaments, no great progress need be expected in the shape of increased international commerce. Industry and agriculture are managed by each nation in its own defensive interest, in anticipation of a struggle for survival. Economic experts may point out splendid schemes for world co-operation, but the final decision rests with governments whose first concern is self-preservation.

A HINT FOR BROOKHART.

Inasmuch as former Senator Wildman Brookhart has been assigned the task of "fact-finding" with regard to trade between the United States and Soviet Russia, he may do a great service to his country by investigating the experience of Persia with the infidels of Moscow. If Wildman is really after facts, there are few bits of information that he may gather which will be more enlightening to the officials who plan to barter with the Soviet.

Persia has an excess of fine rugs which are manufactured in that country, just as Uncle Sam has an excess of wheat and cotton. The rug market was in depression, and Persia was in need of foodstuffs and various raw materials. Some one conceived the brilliant idea of a bartering agreement with the Soviet, just as professorial minds in this country are now nibbling at that bait. Why shouldn't Persia exchange rugs for Soviet produce? It was all so simple. Both countries would profit from the deal. Starving Russian peasants could have exquisite Oriental rugs for their hovels, and Persia could obtain the commodities she needed. The agreement was concluded, and for the moment every one was happy.

But just as the Persian officials were complimenting themselves on their commercial acumen, which most statesmen lack, they became aware of a terrific shrinkage in the American market for their rugs. The United States is a generous purchaser of Oriental rugs. Persian dealers realized that the collapse of the American market was a severe blow. Not only had the demand for rugs fallen off in an alarming manner, but prices dropped to astoundingly low levels. An investigation was in order.

The Persians found that the Soviet state monopoly was dumping Persian rugs on the American market at prices lower than Persian exporters could afford to meet. When it was too late they realized that the Soviet was not buying costly rugs for its starving population. Moscow used the bartering agreement to serve its own purposes, and in doing so virtually destroyed Persia's market for rugs in this and other countries.

Uncle Sam does not intend to barter away any rugs, but the principle remains the same. Will the Soviet take American cotton for domestic consumption? Hardly. Moscow must convert everything exportable into cash to maintain the fabulous five-year plan. American cotton sold to the Moscow monopoly would undoubtedly be dumped upon the world market, thus cutting off direct American sales abroad and beating down the prices of these commodities below their present levels.

A full report of this Soviet trick would make an excellent first installment for the Iowa investigator's brochure of facts.

Well, Congress, it's all over, including the shouting, but you better stick around for a while to make certain that some of the rough spots in these emergency bills won't be construed as abolishing the legislative branch and napping the Capitol.

So long, Congress. You will find the interval between sessions none too long for explaining that the processing levy is not a sales tax.

PAUL HUDSON.

WHAT LONDON OFFERS

By LAWRENCE SULLIVAN.

Although the preliminary discussions touching the World Economic Conference have centered largely on ambitious, if somewhat vaporous, projects for the "abolition of tariff barriers," officials who have been influential in guiding the preparations of the United States delegation do not anticipate that the principal achievements of the London gathering will be in that direction. Monetary stabilization, these officials emphasize, is the subject of transcendent importance; and if a sound and practical arrangement restoring a stable medium of international exchange can be agreed upon, the problem of tariffs and trade barriers automatically becomes one of secondary importance.

Historically, scores of the hampering quotas, embargoes, and fantastic trade restrictions now in force throughout Europe are but manifestations of the breakdown in the international money system. In times of financial stress, the necessity for each Nation's protecting its domestic monetary reserves gives rise, inevitably, to drastic restrictions upon imports. No reputable authority has put forward the suggestion that artificial trade restrictions caused the monetary breakdown. The cause and effect sequence is universally conceded to be from "managed currency" to trade restrictions.

True, the trade stagnation which flows from such artificial restrictions aggravates the distress which arises directly from the stringency in international credits. Trade barriers further aggravate the international economic situation by forcing protective reprisals from heavy importing countries whose foreign markets have been closed by quotas and embargo tariffs.

But the point of attack against this vicious circle of trade prostration is the breakdown of international money and credit. To approach the solution by tariff adjustments, without first restoring national monetary systems to some universally accepted stable exchange base would be only to set in operation again the whole disastrous process of the last four years.

In so far as the United States might become a party to such an arrangement, American producers, both in industry and agriculture, would be on a competitive basis with the producers of Central Europe, of Russia, of the Balkans, and of the Orient.

When the international money standard fails—as it has failed since 1930—the only competitive base for international trade is the living standard.

Through successive monetary adjustments under a score or more of "managed currency" arrangements throughout the world, competition would work downward gradually from prevailing living standards to complete economic pauperism. Under a sound international monetary system, international competition is upward, through improved quality, mechanical progress and technical skill. Without a fixed international money base, this competition tends downward, through declining wages and living standards, cheap substitutions of materials, devitalizing regimes of child labor, to sweat-shop conditions. This route leads ultimately to universal pauperism, and then to the slavery of state socialism.

Should tariff negotiations be undertaken at London before the monetary problem is well advanced toward a sound and workable solution, the decision will signalize the choice of the road down.

If, on the other hand, money and credit are restored first, the decision will signalize the choice of the path upward from the bog of international stagnation and deflation.

This decision well may be reached in the first days of the momentous conference which opens tomorrow.

A notable attempt by the League of Nations to deal with the post-war dislocations of the international money system by the "elimination of tariff barriers" is now a matter of unhappy history.

On September 25, 1924, the assembly of the League formally called upon the principal world powers to meet at Geneva for the sole purpose of "abolishing import and export prohibitions and restrictions." Pursuant to this resolution, all the powers sent delegates to the International Economic Conference at Geneva in May, 1927. In November of that year 30 nations signed a convention binding themselves to abolish trade restrictions of every sort.

This convention embodied nineteen articles, one of which bound every power to "undertake to abolish within a period of six months * * * insofar as the respective territories of each of them are concerned, all import and export prohibitions or restrictions, and not thereafter to impose any such prohibitions or restrictions."

But after these pretentious commitments in Article 2, the members of the conference began to trim here and there in the name of traditional national interests. Article 4 set up a series of seven specific exemptions, and the next article provided that nothing in the treaty should be construed to prevent any signatory from "protecting, in extraordinary and abnormal circumstances, the vital interests of the country." Article 6 then provided a table of specific commodity exemptions which each nation might demand upon ratification. Finally, in Article 11, a provision was inserted exempting from the sweeping antitariff decree all special trade arrangements fixed under previous treaties or conventions.

The United States ratified this convention, together with a supplemental accord, in March, 1930, with a stipulation protecting the prevailing American tariffs and all recognized treaty-making methods against dumping and unfair discrimination.

The net value of this first great effort at universal tariff appeasement may be judged by a review of the European tariff wars and trade barriers during the last three years.

OUR TREE.

There was a tree, before our threshold grew,
And boastingly we called it "Our own tree;"
Till finally a fearful tempest came,
And blasted all its green and wavy top.
And now appealingly it holds
Its shorn, dismantled limbs aloft,
Mute witnesses to what a higher power
Can do to wreck our simple mundane will.

"Our tree," indeed! Its birth and beauteous form,
Was wholly due to God's creative skill;
He 'twas, who nurtured first its tiny seed,
Developed it to form a sturdy tree,
Then blasted it, to show us His great power.
He gave, and He could take away.

And as it stands, in its dismantled state,
It teaches us to reverence His good gifts;
And as it holds its shattered limbs aloft,
Appealing to its sovereign Lord for help,
The great Creator sends its wounded heart
Fresh sustenance, from out His bounteous earth,
And new, and lusty branches now appear,
To testify His kindness for His works;
To cover o'er the damaged limbs; to give
New shade, new comfort to our simple home.

"Our tree," indeed! God's tree it surely is;
And so are we: God's creatures, one and all.
He plants us here a little space of time.
We grow, and flourish briefly in our pride,
Exclaiming, "See what wonders I have wrought!"
Then Death's one instant lays us in the grave;
Thus showing forth the littleness of Man.

RAINBOW GOLD.

In all the lands you may have known
Where men are wont to stray,
From temperate to the frigid zone,
Across the world away
And back again, I swear to you,
Wherever you may roam,
You'll never see a sky so blue
As heaven over home.

They say the ships that swarm the sea
With rovers young and old,
Who go to far-off Normandy
Are frozen-like and cold.
No sailing ship has, ever yet,
From Singapore to Nome,
Unloaded hearts without regret
Unless the port is home.

When spring is in the air again
With flowers fresh a-bloom
And nature seems so fair again
In hyacinth perfume,
When senses thrill until the heart
Is lighter than the foam
Upon the sea, the wise men start
Upon the journey home.

There comes the end, there comes the time
When ev'ry man like me
Who travels round in ev'ry clime
Can see no more to see.
Then, substance is a shadow flashed
Across the mystic dome—
And rainbow gold can not be cashed
In any bank but home.

ARCTIC MYTHS.

At a fascinating lecture recently delivered before the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, Vilhjalmur Stefansson took pains to explode certain erroneous ideas which have apparently been handed down to us from the ancient Greeks.

The notion is prevalent that for at least half the year the Arctic regions are in darkness. As a matter of fact two-thirds of the year the sun never sets at the North Pole, and it is only during one-third of the year that there is night.

What is more, snow and ice are such perfect reflectors of light, that there is never, at the North Pole, the absolute darkness which may prevail at the equator.

Another popular fallacy is that the maximum of extreme cold is found at the North Pole; the maximum degree of cold has actually been found and recorded in the Province of Yakutsk in Siberia (1,100 miles from the North Pole), where a temperature of 93 degrees below zero, Fahrenheit, has been found.

The Greeks also had a notion that everything grew smaller as we went farther north, and that finally life disappeared completely. Nothing could be further from the truth. Well above the Arctic Circle there are forests of trees that are more than 100 feet high. The Eskimos are not perhaps, as tall as Americans or Scotchmen, but they are quite up to the average of Italians and Frenchmen. The Arctic regions, far from showing no signs of life, teem with many varieties of birds, sea animals and fish. The polar bear certainly is not a puny specimen of life.

Still another exploded theory is that blizzards are more fierce at the pole than anywhere else. Mr. Stefansson was of the opinion that the blizzards of Montana, North Dakota and Manitoba are far more fierce than those of the Arctic.

JAPAN CONTINUES IRRESISTIBLY ROOTING RUSSIA OUT OF EASTERN ASIA

Nippon Seen Having Eyes Upon Chahar

By BRIG. GEN. HENRY J. REILLY, O. R. C.

Informed circles who realize the danger of relatively small incidents in out-of-the-way places are carefully watching to see what resistance the Chinese Christian Gen. Feng Yugsiang will offer to Japan's occupancy of Chahar, Inner Mongolia.

Actions by people with unpronounceable names, in out-of-the-way places in the Balkans, threatened and finally touched off the great war of 1914-1918.

Similarly, Feng's action will indicate the imminence or further postponement of the second Russo-Japanese war, impending since the fall of 1931, when Japanese troops invaded Russia's sphere of influence in northern Manchuria.

That Japan intends to take over Chahar, by force if necessary, is indicated by information now being received from the Far East.

That doing so will tremendously strengthen her position on the continent of Asia, and correspondingly weaken Russia's hold on her immense territory stretching from Lake Baikal to the Pacific, is evident from a strategical study of the map.

That doing so will put Japan in a position to tap the rich trade now passing through Kalgan to Peking and the sea, and thus cut off Russia's commercial outlet by that route, is shown by new railways already planned.

Finally, doing so will cut the last reasonably feasible military land connecting link between Russia and China, which would enable both these countries to carry on a well-coordinated, simultaneous campaign against Japan.

Feng Experienced General.

As Feng is too experienced a general to attempt to fight Japan alone, whether he fights or yields peacefully will indicate whether or not he is being supported by Russia.

If he yields without fighting, it will mean that Russia is so anxious to avoid war with Japan that she will offer no resistance to that country steadily increasing its hold on the continent of Asia.

In allowing herself to be ejected from northern Manchuria, through the establishment of Manchukuo, Russia has peacefully yielded more than she lost through the Russo-Japanese War of 1904-5.

Japan has feared an attack from Mongolia since she began her campaign to take over Manchuria in September, 1931; this for two reasons.

The first is that the Mongol army, since its reorganization by the Soviet Russians, while not a first-class army, is far from being one which can be despised. This is all the more true, because the greater part of it is mounted on the sturdy Mongolian horses. These, like their riders, are well accustomed to the hardships of campaigns in both winter and summer in the difficult country of Mongolia, which as yet is untouched by railways.

The Japanese are poor horsemen, and have but a small force of cavalry. Therefore, their army, primarily of infantry and artillery, must depend upon a network of railways and roads which are reasonably passable for motor truck columns. Our own maneuvers and constant tests in our Southwest have shown that aviation in immense spaces of territory is not a match for large mounted forces, particularly if the lateer are accompanied by their own aviation.

Backed by Soviet Russia.

The second reason is that back of this Mongolian army is Soviet Russia. Therefore, Mongolia's entry might be followed up by the entry of Russian troops.

Japan's truce with China, and the cessation of her advance on Peking and Tientsin, is not believed to mean the cessation of hostilities.

It is the strongest indication of a thrust into Chahar, inner Mongolia, for the reason that the truce insures the safety of the southern flank of a Japanese advance west into Inner Mongolia.

In the Great War, a thrust forward into the enemy's line always had to be succeeded by thrusts to the right and left flanks in order to prevent the enemy attacking those flanks and pinching out the troops which had successfully advanced.

Similarly, the farther Japen advanced south in her Jehol campaign, and during her fighting south of the Great Wall, the greater the danger that a blow from Mongolia on her western flank would pinch out her troops. Her eastern flank was safe, because China has no navy and Japan has never had to fear an attack from that sea side.

Of course, by bringing over more troops, Japan could have protected her Mongolian flank by their use on this side of her advance.

However, the most striking feature of Japan's campaigns since September, 1931, has been the small number of troops she has used.

Strikes Blow After Blow.

With a small force, she has struck blow after blow, each helping to clear up the danger of a flank or rear attack from either Chinese or Russians, or both, which would negative the gain just made.

After seizing Mukden, Japan made in November, 1931, a long advance north, which cut the Chinese Eastern Railway, Russia's direct line of communication with her fortress-seaport of Vladivostok. Japan's force thus was in danger of attack on both flanks by Russians coming from the direction of Chita in the west and Vlawivostok in the east.

Though Japan had forcibly invaded Russia's sphere of influence in northern Manchuria and damaged the Chinese Eastern Railway, in which Russia had a half-interest, the Soviet took no direct action. Russia contented herself with helping stir up Chinese irregulars in the Sungari River area, between Harbin and the border nearest Vladivostok.

At the same time, the young Marshal Chang Hsueh-liang, whose troops had been driven out of Mukden, sent others through Jehol and from Chinchow on the coast to attack the left flank and rear of the Japanese.

Had the Russian-backed Mongolians struck in force at the same time from the west, Japan would have been forced to pour in troops from home to save the forces in Manchuria. She might even have been forced to declare a partial, if not general mobilization, thus raising her army to war strength by calling to the colors hundreds of thousands of trained reservists earning their living in civil life.

Since the trouble started, Russia has never had a better opportunity. However, she passed it by, showing she did not feel strong enough to try conclusions with Japan.

Promptly Strike Again.

The Japanese promptly struck again, this time in the Sungari River district. Having cleared their rigat rear, they struck a third time, this time to the south of Chinchow. Success here meant clearing the coast along the Gulf of Pechili. This cleared the left or eastern flank of the coming drive through Jehol. Next, they drove through Jehol and far enough south of the Great Wall to insure the flight of the young marshal from Peking and the present truce.

There remains only the Mongolian menace directed by Russia with Russia proper lurking behind it.

The main force of the Jehol troops fled not south toward Peking, but west toward Dolo Nor in inner Mongolia. Dolo Nor is an important center of trails and caravan routes, one radiating from northeast to Urga, the capital of Mongolia, and one north to Manchouli, where the Chinese Eastern Railway crosses the Siberian-Manchukuo border. It is on the western side of the Khinghan Mountains, the natural boundary, but not the political one, between the Mongolian plateau and the Manchurian plain.

One hundred and thirty miles as the crow flies to the southeast is Kalgan, the headquarters of the Christian Gen. Feng. Kalgan also is on the Mongolian plateau. It is just south of the Great Wall of China. Through it runs the only railway from the sea, which reaches the Mongolian plateau. From Kalgan it runs 250 miles west to Paotwchen on the Yellow River. Paotowchen is a focal point for caravan trails from far west Kansu Province and still farther Chinese Turkestan and western Mongolia, and even Russian Central Asia. From Paotowchen to Kalgan various routes and trails from Siberia across Mongolia reach this railway.

Main Entrance Gate in Wall.

Kalgan, besides being the center of numerous trails, is the terminus of the main route from Urga and Lake Baikal. For centuries it has been the main entrance gate through the Great Wall from Mongolia to China.

Incidentally, when prominent Chinese were sentenced to banishment, they were put out through this gate into the Mongolia wilds. However, several hundred yards to the east is a small wicket gate through the wall called the traitor's gate. The proper price being available, the exile could get this opened after dark to readmit him.

Standing on the Great Wall this writer saw a scene which best typifies the mixture of the ages of machine and animal transportation, and of the white and yellow races of Asia; exhibiting the clash of methods and interests which at any time may set Asia aflame with the first act of the next world war.

To the immediate south in China was the modern railway. To the north in Mongolia were long columns of patient pack animals, while now and again in a cloud of dust up would dash an American-made car (best for desert travel), filled with Russians from Urga and beyond.

South of the wall were Feng's modern field and trench mortar batteries, having target practice. To the north were the Mongols, dressed as were their ancestors who rode with Genghis Khan, but armed with automatic pistols.

The best information, and that entirely reliable, was that the Russian officer instructors had heavily armed them with automatic rifles and machine guns, the latter carried by pack animals. They also were reported to have field artillery and some aviation.

In case of war, Russian reinforcements would make up any deficiencies in these respects.

Mixed Races Everywhere.

Everywhere mixed together were Chinese, Mongols, Americans and Russians. Here, as always where there is the headquarters of a Chinese war lord, no matter what his international politics, were Japanese, some of them unmistakably officers.

The latest information is that Japanese troops moving west from Jehol have occupied Dolor Nor, thus depriving the Chinese and Mongols of this route into Manchukuo.

By this occupancy they are 5,000 feet above sea level, the same height as Kalgan. Peking is less than a thousand. The direct route from Peking to Kalgan followed by the railway climbs this 4,000 feet through a picturesque, but easily defended series of defiles.

By seizing Dolo Nor the Japanese have avoided this series of natural defenses, counted upon by Feng in the past to keep his Chinese enemies from coming after him when driven from the Peking-Tientsin plain.

While not directly on Feng's line of communication with Siberia, from which for years he had undoubtedly been getting some, if not all, of his war munitions, the Japanese are in a good position to cut it. Their own line of communications back to Chinchow on the Gulf of Pechili or Mukden runs nearly 200 miles north of the Great Wall. As the Chinese have just signed a truce to keep well south, and as the Japanese garrisons in Tientsin and Peking make excellent advance posts their line of communications is reasonably safe from attack. Once in Kalgan they will then hold in their hands the two centers through which all caravan routes and trails and the only railway must pass on their way from the Monogolian plateau to the Manchurian and Peking-Tientsin plains and the sea.

Connect With Japanese Port.

Railways already planned from Chinchow to Dolo Nor to Kalgan, and from Chinchow to Jehol to Peking, will connect with the Manchurian railways and Japan's deep sea port of Dairen.

This will drain some if not all of the Russian and Mongolian trade now passing through Tientsin to the sea.

It will enable Japan easily and quickly to concentrate large numbers of troops from home against Mongolians and Russians trying to unite with Chinese troops from the south to drive Japan out of Jehol, and to prevent her further advance into Chili Province and then back into Shantung.

If Feng fights, now, he has Russian backing and at least promise of military support. If he does not, Russia prefers to yield peacefully to Japan her last real contact with China proper rather than risk war, with not only this loss as a result if defeated, but also eastern Siberia perhaps as far west as Lake Baikal.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Defense Made of Veterans Suffering from Disabilities

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May I offer a few remarks in self-defense, after being termed a recipient of graft by virtue of being in the employ of the Federal Government, while at the same time receiving compensation for severe gunshot wounds on the front in France? It must be "reassuring" to the American taxpayer to read that at least one person (Mr. A. MacS., whose article appeared recently in your paper), has the "courage" of "Horatio at the Bridge" to "expose" this "iniquitous" condition.

The writer of the above-mentioned article evidently is not aware of the fact that it is virtually impossible for men with serious service-connected injuries to obtain employment in private industry, the employers contending that they should not be required to employ "liabilities" when competition requires maximum efficiency of the employes. However, while being reluctant to employ ex-service men receiving compensation as a result of their disabilities, the employers seem to be agreed that the Government should assume the burden of caring for those whose troubles resulted directly from services rendered the Government.

Naturally many of the veterans who have the stamina to carry on and who find themselves unable to maintain a decent standard of living on the pittance received in the form of compensation for wounds turn to the Government for employment. Aside from a slight preference accorded former service men for Government positions in the civil service, they are judged by the same standards as other workers. A conscientious veteran whose war injuries conduce to his inefficiency is in no better position to reach the top of the ladder in the Government service than is a person never in the Army with a stomach disorder or the like which resulted from his own excesses.

As a matter of fact, most veterans who have succeeded in securing employment in the Government are actually as efficient for the duties they are to perform as their coworkers, irrespective of the disability rating given them by the Veterans' Bureau. A technical expert in Government service with both feet off (rated even by insurance companies as totally disabling) might conceivably be as efficient in his line as one with no perceptible physical disability, and under such circumstances few would have the temerity to hold that such disability with all its attendant inconveniences should not be compensated.

Why should the Government be permitted to evade a direct obligation to pay compensation to service connected veterans who happen to be employed in the Government and are able to discharge their duties efficiently, though deprived of the blessings of sound bodies? This unfortunate class of veterans under the rule contended for by "Mr. A. MacC. S." would certainly be penalized to an almost unbelievable extent for their patriotism and sacrifices. These veterans would be deprived of equal opportunity and pursuit of happiness without compensation, let alone just compensation. An efficient veteran with the loss of a leg, for example, would suffer, but without compensation, all the inconveniences incident to such disability and might remain at an annual salary of $2,000, whereas he might advance to $4,000 but for disability incurred in the war. Moreover, the door to more remunerative employment outside the Government would be virtually closed to him.

What Japanese May Have Up Their Sleeves Is Discussed

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: How can you account for what seems like Japan's crazy disregard for the opinion of all the rest of the world? My first thought was that it is a case of plain, uncivilized bullheadedness.

It is not so very long since the Japanese shed the flowing garments of the Orient and put on the pants of Western progress. May be he has not had time yet to get entirely rid of the spirit of antiquated militarism and live up to the pacific spirit which finds expression in the "glad rags" of his European and American neighbors.

But on the other hand I have been wondering whether, like Bret Harte's Heathen Chinee, the Jap has "something up his sleeve." Perhaps, figuring on what he knows of human nature and has learned from the history of international development on the European continent, he thinks that, in case of actual sword-play and gunfire with the international foe, conditions might develop which would give him a chance to drive a war bargain with one or more Caucasian governments hungry for more territory.

In other words, if the partition of Poland could be brought about and confirmed by the Christian powers in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries and the partition of the so-called Central Powers take place in the twentieth, why not the partition of China also in the twentieth century?

Considering the cynical inference which must be drawn from the dubious and paltering actions of the League of Nations, the Japanese may not be taking such a gambler's chance as it seems.

And, after all, as the Japanese will tell you, might it not hasten the coming of a fixed world peace and be good for the future of mankind if China were at once divided into several consistent governmental parts, each one under the protection of one of the world powers until it can safely develop as an independent commonwealth?

For want of a more reasonable viewpoint, how will that do to account for Japan's amazing dream of territorial expansion in the face of the world's seemingly unanimous disapproval?

Motorists Are Urged to Help Keep Washington Beautiful

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your issue of June 3 I read with surprise and intense disgust a letter signed "Motorist." Surprise because I did not know there could be any one so utterly selfish and unpatriotic as the writer of this letter appears to be. Evidently he thinks that the universe exists for the benefit of motorists, and that anything which slows up traffic even for the fraction of a minute should be abolished. To quote from his letter: "What does the Fine Arts Commission know about traffic? The circles are an obstacle to traffic and should be abolished. We can not afford beauty at the expense of business."

If that be true then all the trees should be cut down and the streets widened to make room for more cars; the parks should be used for parking places; Rock Creek Park, being of no use to business, should be done away with and converted into building space for more auto factories and garages.

Evidently it matters not to him that in doing so Washington would be made as hideous as the East Side of New York or downtown Chicago. He appears to forget that there are thousands of people in this city who can not afford cars or even a week at the seashore or in the mountains. Their only means of escaping the heat of the summer is an occasional outing in Rock Creek Park or Hains Point. Any one driving through these places can see for himself the vast numbers of people who take advantage of the opportunity of a little fresh air and cooling breezes.

But this is not the most important consideration. This city is the capital of one of the richest and most powerful countries in the world; a city which is yearly visited by representatives of all the great nations. It should be made and kept as beautiful as possible. It is the duty of every American citizen to do his part toward making it so, even at the cost of some slight inconvenience to himself.

A LOVER OF BEAUTY.

Letters to the Editor Lauded As Molding Public Opinion

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The writer heartily joins A. H. Thompson in his plea for a restoration of a larger department for "Letters to the Editor," and also in his commendation of The Post.

Newspapers are molders of public opinion and conscience. Letters to the editor play an effective part in this molding process. Let's have this department enlarged rather than diminished.

In the same issue we find Bishop Freeman clashing with Secretary Ickes in expressions of opinion on commencement occasions. In the humble opinion of the writer they are both wrong and both right, though this statement may appear paradoxical. Each generation may be divided into at least three classes. One of these is composed of honest, earnest, conscientious actors striving for the upbuilding of the best institutions and interests of the whole human race. This is the group the bishop has in mind, in the generation to which he belongs, which he so heartily commends for its splendid, progressive achievements. Another class consists of those selfish people who are constantly exerting themselves to get ahead and keep ahead of everybody else by any means, fair or foul.

This is the group the Secretary has in mind as getting everything in a "mess." The other class is made up of those intermediaries who are so neutral as to be excluded from both the other classes. There are instances in which this class far outnumbers both the others. It is this group that furnishes the battleground for the two other groups in their contest for supremacy in the administration of affairs.

At the end of 1928 there were many Republicans and some Democrats who thought the Democratic party was dead. Was it? Now there are many Democrats and some Republicans who think the Republican party is dead, but it need not surprise anybody if four years hence he finds a Republican occupying the White House, trying to administer the affairs of the Government.

The middle of the century may find both the Democratic party and the Republican out of the running, and the two-party theory of government abandoned. This theory has kept the country in a "miserable mess" the most of the time in the memory of those now living.

The two-party system is simply a curse affording the racketeers the opportunity to play the same game they are now getting away with. It will take a united effort of the patriotic citizens to throw off the bondage under which we are trying to muddle along.

This nation was established on a moral foundation from which it slips alarmingly occasionally. Its safety and prosperity can only be preserved by abiding in those eternal principles of righteousness.

Alley Cat Shown Worthy of Praise

The above from The Post of June 3 shows how little humans trouble themselves to understand cats.

Not calm and unruffled, but dauntless though terrified, would better describe the expression on the face of this valiant little mother.

And "old alley cat!" There are no alley cats. There are countless unfortunate cats, condemned by man's stupid indifference to their lot to exist as best they can in alleys or cellars. The comparatively few that are fortunate enough to find a wise and experienced human protector to take them into a home on a basis of affectionate equality with the other members of the family become invariably models of graceful decorum, neatness and cleanliness and the most responsive, faithful and delightful of all companions.

A FRIEND OF CATS.

Gallery Glimpses

By ROBERT C. ALBRIGHT

ALL three rings were functioning nicely at the finish, thank you.

They were really putting on a grand show under the big tent—winding up the season in a burst of something or other, you might say.

And it was competition that turned the trick, good, old-fashioned cutthroat competition—not the brand advertised in the President's industrial-controled program.

Yes, it took the Senate Banking and Currency Committee's midget performance to bring all three rings up to scratch.

For several weeks House and Senate hadn't offered a laugh in a session. It was rumored that John R. Perry was about to offer a door prize to pep up Senate gallery attendance. Over on the House side Doorkeeper Joe Sinnott filed a disheartening box office report.

From the standpoint of showmanship, it looked like the season was a flop. Then along came the midget stunt and for a magic moment held the spotlight of the world. We must say, it made the best performers the other two rings had to offer look like pikers.

But it saved the season. Whether from emulation, green-eyed jealousy or the good old will to be first, House and Senate performances took on new zest. All of the old troupers trotted to the center of the ring. And did they put on a show?

In this ring, ladees and gentleman, you have the one and only Huey P. Long, in the sham battle of the century with Senator Joseph T. Robinson. This is an encore attraction, ladees and gentleman. It will end by Joe popping Huey right in the eye.

In this other ring, folks, you have Tom Blanton, little wonder from Texas, in a battle to the death with the District budget. There is nobody in the ring with Tom at all, ladees and gentleman. His opponent has never been able to get into the ring. The battle is practically over now, ladees and gentleman. It ended with Tom popping the District right in the eye. He stepped outside the ring to do it.

TOM BLANTON'S District budget act was not the only show he put on during the week. He went to the bat for the administration on the Hawaiian Governor's bill. He went down the line so strong he forgot a member is never supposed to address another member by name, even if the prefix "Brother" is attached.

The Republicans went after Tom in a pack for breaking the rules, and only the loyalty of his Democratic colleagues saved his hide. In two roll-call votes, Tom was completely vindicated.

His peroration was a classic:

"They have done me injustice after injustice under Republican rule," he said, "but, thank God, there is now a new deal in this House."

The Robinson-Long encounter was just as stirring, and packed the galleries. It was a case of Huey attacking both the administration and Barney Baruch at the same time. He spread it on too thick. If Huey had hopped on them one at a time, Joe probably wouldn't have had a word to say.

As it was, he said plenty. It looked to us like the "Kingfish" was stopped, but you never can tell about Huey. Anyway, the "Kingfish" had the last word. And, as in the case of Tom Blanton, it was the best part of his speech.

"Let's just call it a day," he said, and sat down.

Maybe it doesn't mean anything, but it was 120 degrees Fahrenheit by actual measurement in the attic over the House of Representatives Friday. One of the recording thermometers burst.

THERE was a time when Jack Garner could be singled out of any group by his hat—a light tan sombrero.

He was never without that hat, whether at a ball game, paying a social call or motoring in the Vice Presidential car.

There could be no doubt about it, the Vice President liked that hat. In silk-hatted Washington, it was distinctive. It sort of fit his own rugged personality.

Then some friend of Senator Morris Sheppard had to send him one just like it, and Senator Sheppard, being also from Texas, took a fancy to it.

Last week he decided to give it a workout. While he was about it, he gave it a good one. He wore it on an informal call at the White House.

An attache spotted the five-gallon lid before he did Senator Sheppard, and addressed the visitor accordingly:

"Good day, Mr. Vice President."

The senator doffed his sombrero, and bowed very low.

"I am complimented," he said.

Now officials look carefully under every oversize hat that approaches before addressing the wearer.

P. H. JOHNSON, new manager of the House restaurant, is acutely sensitive to odors—even those emanating from dishes he serves up to discriminating tastes of House members.

He heads a school which believes you should order your grub from the menu and not from one of the many errant if appetizing smells that happen to pervade the atmosphere.

It is not that Manager Johnson objects to the savory odor of an individual dish. Far from it. He delights in the aroma of a properly cooked course.

But the combination of many is confusing. Add this to the hot weather and the permeating smell of 3.2 per cent beer, and you have the reason Manager Johnson took steps.

Yesterday a huge rotating suction fan, guaranteed by the Capitol Architect's office to remove odors and excessive heat from the place in two minutes, was installed and functioning well.

By the by, when are we going to get beer in the Senate restaurant, Dr. Copeland?

THIS matter of hot weather is giving some concern to etiquette-minded members of both houses.

It was bad, very bad, when Terry Carpenter, of Scottsbluff, Nebr., walked on the floor in his shirt sleeves.

Yet that could be forgiven a new member, even if it hadn't been done before in 20 years.

But last week the unpardonable almost occurred. Speaker Rainey nearly mounted to the Speaker's chair with nary a coat on.

FROM A SENATOR'S DIARY

By the 97th Senator

Wednesday.

GOOD old Dr. Copeland, in his solicitude for the comfort and health of his colleagues, rendered the country a distinct disservice, I fear, when he induced the Senate and House to install modern cooling and ventilating systems. By a simple twist of the dial the temperature in the Senate and House chambers can be kept at 68 or 70 degrees even though the thermometer outside registers 100 or 105, as it frequently does during the killing heat spells which annually visit Washington. At the same time the ventilating system keeps the air at the proper humidity and eliminates the danger of catching cold. This improvement has robbed the summer of much of its terror to the statesmen on Capitol Hill. The Capitol, in fact, is almost as comfortable on the hottest days as a Maine seashore resort.

As a consequence of this, Congress is no longer in a hurry to go home, and the country can not count on the weather to help force an adjournment. In bygone years, a few scorching days in the late spring usually were sufficient to implant an extremely virulent adjournment germ in every perspiring legislator. The Senate presented a pathetic spectacle on a hot day. Weary senators slouched in their seats in wilted Palm Beach suits and mopped their brows. Bulky and florid Boies Penrose fanned himself with a broad palm leaf and you could almost hear him muttering, "Let's get this finished and get out of here."

Nowadays, Ham Lewis or Huey Long can step into their sartorial best in the morning and emerge as cool and trim in the evening as though they had just stepped out of a bandbox. Luxurious country clubs and roof gardens provide relief from the heat in the evening. Legislators living under such conditions naturally do not feel the old-time urge to get out of Washington in the summer.

SENATOR COPELAND.

Much has been written in the past about the influence of climatic conditions on history. The installation of the cooling system in the Capitol ought to furnish historians of the future with material for some interesting new chapters.

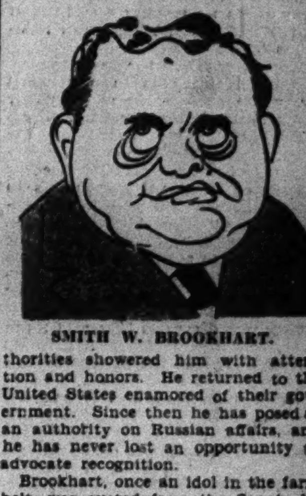
Thursday.

"LAME DUCK" BROOKHART has a job again. His Iowa constituents thought they were retiring him to private life in the primary last year, and on March 4 last he was detached from the Federal pay roll. He was a thoroughly dispirited person. The thought of going back to the practice of law in the little city of Washington, Iowa, only added to his gloom. It seemed like an awful comedown after being one of the "big shots" of the Senate farm bloc.

Brookhart has been hanging on in Washington since March 4 hoping "something would turn up." And it has. His hopes have been justified. The Roosevelt administration has designated him as a sort of semiofficial emissary to deal with the Russian problem. He will go to Moscow and endeavor to smooth out the relations between the United States and the Soviet Republic.

It is a bit difficult for me to picture Brookhart in the role of diplomat sitting at a round table in Moscow matching wits with Satin and Tchicherin. Unless their intellectual capacity has been greatly overrated, he ought to be easy meat for them.

Several years ago Brookhart made a trip to Russia. The Bolshevist authorities showered him with attention and honors. He returned to the United States enamored of their government. Since then he has posed as an authority on Russian affairs, and he has never lost an opportunity to advocate recognition.



SMITH W. BROOKHART.

Brookhart, once an idol in the farm belt, was ousted from the Senate by his Iowa constituents because they got sick and tired of his blather. I have reason to believe that his insurgent colleagues in the Senate were not broken hearted over his defeat. Just why the administration should pick him to conduct negotiations with Russia is not quite understandable, unless it wanted some one who was 100 per cent friendly to recognition in advance of the negotiations. I doubt whether the sincere friends of Russian recognition will throw their hats in the air over Brookhart's appointment.

Friday.

OF all the presidential candidates paraded before the public at this time last year, none was quite as outspoken in stressing attachment to orthodox Democratic principles of government as "Bert" Ritchie, the capable and attractive Governor of the Maryland Free State. For years he had been an outstanding champion of the Jeffersonian doctrine, laissez faire, and States' rights. Decentralize the Federal Government and restore local self-government—that was the keynote of his campaign speeches. He was the favorite of a large section of the right wing of his party.

And now even Ritchie has thrown up the sponge and yielded to the "new deal." For a long time after the unemployment problem became acute, Ritchie insisted that Maryland would accept no aid from the Federal Government. It was a sovereign State amply able to take care of itself, he said. And then he discovered that the citizens of Maryland in addition to taking care of themselves, were being taxed by the Federal Government to relieve the unemployment distress throughout the Nation. In justice to his own constituents he was compelled to accept the allotment to the Maryland Free State. He did this with a sense of deep regret.

But last Saturday he took the final step and gave up the ghost. At the University of Maryland commencement exercises, on the outskirts of Washington, he confessed:

"Revolutionary changes were necessary. The old order did not work very well. New charts had to be devised, new routes had to be tried. We hope and we believe and we have confidence that these routes will lead to successful goals and that they will bring about a happy fulfillment of American life." Et tu, Bert! R. B. S.

Depression Seen as Teaching Danger of Social Legislation

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: One who has been accustomed to living in a medium-sized town, with convenient schools and moderate taxes, can not help but be amazed when he comes to appreciate the inconvenience and expense to which rural citizens have been subjected in recent years in the matter of schools. It is enough to cool the ardor of some of us who have been getting enthused with the "back to the land" idea.

Undoubtedly, the rural school and tax conditions as they exist at present have had much to do with lowering and keeping down the value of country real estate. Our school people should not forget, in their enthusiasm for "advanced" ideas, that, after all, their salaries and all school costs must in the end come chiefly from the districts which they serve, and in rural communities this means from the tax on real estate, which constitutes the principal rural wealth. The idea of passing this expense on to more populated areas, through other forms of taxes and increased State appropriations, is only spreading and not curing the trouble.

Lest we be charged with considering the prospects of real estate above those of the children, let us look at that side of the question for a moment. The parents and grandparents of these rural children built substantial homes, big barns, fences and other improvements which today are becoming dilapidated for lack of capital to keep them up. The small margin of earnings which would otherwise permit this work to be done is being absorbed by increased taxes.

Now the question is, what are these children of today, after they have finished their modern courses in their fine, big schools, going to do when they have to go back to these run-down, dilapidated, mortgage-ridden farms? With the cards so stacked against them their problems in life will be difficult, indeed.

Are they, under these conditions, likely to develop into hard-working, honest, independent farmers, or are they, after realizing their true situation, more likely to throw up their hands in despair and become hirelings, with a disposition to swallow any political quackery that is proposed to them?

If we have learned anything from all this, and from the depression in general, it should be the danger of rushing headlong into so-called "social" legislation, the cost of which must be borne by increased taxation.

But I wonder if we shall ever learn to value at their true worth those job-seeking political "uplifters" who ask our support on the assurance that they alone possess the economic magic to enable the state to provide us something for nothing, to make life easy for us in general while we are young and secure our comfort and independence when we are old.

AFTERWARDS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

I fancied that I heard him say:
"I gave you green grass and the trees.
The beauty of returning May,
But you grew blind to all of these
And coins of metal, hard and cold,
Held you forever 'neath their spell;
Now, since their joy you couldn't hold,
A sorry tale of life you tell.

"I gave you stuff for pleasant dreams
And summer birds with endless song.
I etched your land with silver streams
For you to find and stroll along.
I gave you speech and power of thought,
And friends wher'er you chose to dwell.
But money was the thing you sought,
Now life was bitterness you tell.

"I gave you gardens wondrous fair,
The fruits of trees and spreading vine.
You turned them into fields of care
And wanted richer joys than mine.
You gave your faith to wealth alone,
Practiced each day to buy and sell.
Now missing all you might have known
A sorry tale of life you tell."

FRANCE THREATENS ECONOMIC WARFARE

Two Parliament Bills Give Government Power to Use Tariff as Weapon.

Paris, June 10 (U.P.).—France raised a new threat of economic warfare today, on the eve of the World Economic Conference in London.

Reacting swiftly and efficiently to the German "transfer" moratorium on external debts, the French government notified Berlin that France can not continue to give preferential tariffs to Germany unless Germany keeps up payments of interest on the Dawes and Young plan reparations loans.

Simultaneously, the government introduced two bills in Parliament giving the government added power to fight other nations economically.

The first bill would empower the government to decree temporary tariff surtaxes as reprisals against other nations or as special precautions to protect French agriculture and industry in exceptional circumstances.

The second would empower the government to alter tariffs or articles affected by quota restrictions of foreign nations, if the foreign quotas were altered.

Commercial experts here said if the bills were approved by Parliament they might make the present French tariff schedules meaningless, this adding new uncertainty to international commerce. They believed the measures would enable France to take quick reprisals against other nations and to check "dumping" of foreign goods into France.

ROOSEVELT REPLIES TO LONDON'S OFFER

upon Congress for definite approval in the last resort and the Congress of next January may come back to the Capital prepared to nullify any agreement on the debt payments that has not been in strict accord with its reiterated reservations.

The strictest measures have been taken to assure privacy of the preliminary details of the debt agreements here and abroad. British Ambassador Lindsay called at the White House at a late hour Friday night to acquaint the President with the tentative proposal of the British Cabinet. This had been determined in a secret cabinet meeting that day in London where Prime Minister MacDonald, Sir John Simon and Neville Chamberlain, Chancellor of the Exchequer, had exposed to the Cabinet members the successive stages of the new British debt plan.

Within the confines of this wall of silence, the debt details have been thoughtfully worked out by the British. President Roosevelt himself is handling personally all decisions on the debt problems, although he has frequently been in consultation with Acting Secretary Phillips and Undersecretary Moley.

Similar visits at the State Department from the French Ambassador and Italian Ambassador Rosso stirred further comment in diplomatic circles that the British tentative offer was about to have analogous reactions in many of the 12 other nations that are due to make payments on their indebtedness four days hence. Italian Ambassador Rosso told the acting Secretary that Premier Mussolini would have a definite statement to make on the debts at the Fascist General Council in Rome tonight. This will undoubtedly be the groundwork for the Italian debt offer, which will be substantially along the same lines as the British.

France Makes No Move.

No such compromise is expected from the French government. French Ambassador de Laboulaye does not expect to be able to announce any debt payment at all from the French finance ministry either for the lapsed payment of $20,000,000 of last December or for the more important sum of $40,700,000 due here Thursday. The complete failure of the French government to make any payment at all on its debts to this country will constitute a problem for the President in his projected reciprocal tariff talks with various nations here. It is not believed likely that other nations will admit of preferential status on tariffs being given to French products in the face of a reiterated French failure to pay.

Little in the way of tariff advantages can be worked out in London due to the unwieldy nature of the discussions that are scheduled there. On a broad basis of discussion there can be little place for agreement, tariff experts generally agree, unless the basis is a horizontal tariff reduction which will be adopted by all the nations, a possibility that is envisaged with difficulty. So the Washington tariff talks will be held in the afterglow of the debt payments and unless the various countries shine in the reflected light of satisfactory debt settlement now their chances of tariff consideration by this country will go glimmering.

Perfunctory notice of the payments due was dispatched to all the nations by the Treasury Department last week. At the same time notice was given them that their payments could be made in United States Government bonds. This is hardly an inducement, especially in view of the fact that most Government securities are now selling at a premium. What is believed more likely is that the debtor nations of this country who are going to pay would prefer to do so in silver, in the terms of Senator Pittman's resolution. This would allow the United States to receive up to $200,000,000 on account of the war debt in silver, this silver payment to be estimated by the Government on the basis of 50 cents to 60 cents an ounce.

Roosevelt Held Fearful Of Dismissing Woodin

(Associated Press.)

Senator Robinson (Republican), Indiana, charged in the Senate last night that "because of the House of Morgan," President Roosevelt "fears to discharge" Secretary Woodin and Norman H. Davis, whose names were on select client lists of the banking firm. Opening another of his many attacks on the two men, Robinson said:

"I think that one reason the Chief Executive wants to get Congress out of the way tonight is so he can accept a 10 per cent debt payment from Great Britain next week."

The Indianan said Morgan "wants the debt canceled" and that "the line-up in the Treasury" favored

PRESIDENT VISIONS SAVINGS OF $25,000,000 BY PROGRAM

tunity to study the changes ordered. So far as he was concerned, he said, there would be no adjournment until he had thoroughly digested the orders and formed an opinion of them.

Despite the insistence of Senate Democratic Leader Robinson that the orders do not require the approval of Congress, but will become law within 60 days unless the President's reorganization powers are repealed by joint resolution, Senator Johnson joined with the Idaho senator in opposing adjournment until the orders have been studied.

"There is but one way we can do our duty, and that is by staying here for the period essential to do our job, whether it is one, two or three more weeks," Senator Johnson said.

Possible Withdrawal.

Senator Robinson said he would get in touch with the President if he found that withdrawal of the orders was advisable in order to effect an early adjournment.

"If withdrawal of the order is necessary, I shall not hesitate to so advise the President," Senator Robinson said.

Later it was indicated at the Capitol by a senator generally regarded as an administrative spokesman that there was no intention on the part of the President to withdraw the order. It was confidently predicted that the order would go into effect.

When filibustering tactics appeared imminent unless further word was forthcoming on the reorganization program, Senator Robinson read a lengthy memoranda on the changes proposed and explained each one in some detail.

Fresh Recess Demands.

But the explanation failed to satisfy Senator Johnson, Senator Reed, and Senator Long, all of whom launched into fresh demands for a recess until next week when more time could be devoted to consideration of the order.

"But if this is merely one of a series of efforts to prostrate the program, I shall not ask him to withdraw it."

In submitting the order to Congress for consideration, the President declared that he had not willingly held it up until the closing days of the session. In his message, the President said:

"Please let me tell you very simply and frankly that in transmitting this executive order at this ate hour in the special session, I have had no thought of taking what might be considered an advantage of the Congress. The very urgent demands of the public business, both legislative and administrative, during the past few weeks have made it literally impossible to complete the study of consolidation."

$25,000,000 Saving.

Regarding the other changes which will be made later, the message said: "Many other changes are in contemplation and I have selected only those which I believe should be put into effect as quickly as possible. These additional changes I do not feel it right to submit until the next regular session of Congress."

In an effort to forestall congressional opposition to the reorganization, the President said in his message: "May I suggest that if the changes proposed in the present Executive order are not concurred in by Congress they can be restored or otherwise changed at the beginning of the next regular session a few months hence."

Concluding the message, he said, "The justification for sending this Executive order up, even at this late hour, is that it will effect a saving of more than $25,000,000. This is well worth while."

"It was the desire of the President to submit at this session of Congress, as early as practicable, a complete integrated plan. The march of unexpected and emergent events and the necessity of giving primary attention to measures calculated to meet economic conditions has made it literally impossible to give to the matter of reorganization that full measure of study and consideration which it deserves.

Alternatives Confronted.

"In this contingency, the President was faced with the alternative of deferring the presentation of reorganization matters altogether, or of presenting certain selected ones, the desirability of which could be established within the limits of time available for their consideration. To have followed the former course would have postponed for a considerable period of time all of the economies to be derived from these measures.

"To follow the latter course makes it impossible to allow the amplitude of time for consideration by Congress which the Executive earnestly desired. Balancing the relative disadvantages between these two courses, it has seemed the more in the public interest to follow the latter course and thus to realize the very considerable economies which the items of reorganization, now possible of indorsement, will yield.

"The Executive is more encouraged to the latter course, because it is believed that the matters of reorganization to which it has been possible to give proper study, are those whose desirability is the least debatable."

The central purchasing agency set up by the order would be called the office of procurement. All articles used in common by the various Government agencies would be bought in quantity by the office, but specialized and technical material could still be bought by the bureau using it.

Additions to Interior.

The order would abolish the office of Public Buildings and Public Parks, the Arlington Memorial Bridge Commission, the Public Building Commission, the National Memorial Commission and the Rock Creek and Potomac Parkway Commission. The functions of these agencies would be consolidated under the Department of Interior. All the functions of administering public buildings and reservations, national parks, national monuments and national cemeteries would then be under the unified control of the Interior Department.

The Treasury Department would have charge of disbursing funds in all Government departments by the terms of the order, greatly reducing the present total of 2,200 disbursing offices throughout the country. At present all departments have their own disbursing offices, main and branch, and their own financial system.

The investigating functions of the Prohibition Bureau would be transfered to the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice. The licensing machinery of the prohibition unit would be transferred to the Bureau of Internal Revenue of the Treasury. The present Bureau of Internal Revenue would be consolidated with the Bureau of Industrial Alcohol of the Treasury under the name of the Division of Internal Revenue. This consolidation is wise because both agencies are revenue-collecting, it was pointed out.

The proposed changes would put on the Department of Justice responsibility for defending all actions brought against the Government. Some of these cases are now fought by the legal divisions of the various departments. The Justice Department would also prosecute all actions in which the Government is a complainant, some of which are now prosecuted by these independent legal divisions.

Abolishes Shipping Board.

The order would also consolidate all the insular courts in the Department of Justice, and would make several changes in the status of the solicitors in the other departments of the Government. Another change is the abolition of the compilation of statistics for cities with a population of less than 100,000, thereby cutting the cost of the Census Bureau.

The U. S. Shipping Board will be abolished under the order, its functions being transferred to the Department of Commerce. The work of the Merchant Fleet Corporation would also be put under the Commerce Department. Other agencies to be abolished completely are the National Screw Thread Commission and the Coordinating Service.

The Bureau of Immigration and Naturalization of the Labor Department would be consolidated into one unit, still in the department, by the terms of the order. The Federal Board for Vocational Education, now an independent body, would be transferred to the Interior Department.

The order would also reduce by 25 per cent the appropriations for cooperative vocational education and rehabilitation, cooperative agricultural extension work, agricultural experiment stations, and the endowment and maintenance of colleges for the benefit of agriculture and the mechanical arts.

23 WEST POINTERS DECORATED BY DERN

West Point, N. Y., June 10 (A.P.).—Secretary Dern of the War Department presented medals today to 23 cadets at the United States Military Academy who have maintained a scholastic average of 92 per cent or higher.

The Secretary was greeted with a salute of 19 guns on his arrival to participate in the June week functions which will culminate with graduation exercises Tuesday.

Three of the cadets are members of the graduating class. One of the trio, Kenneth E. Fields, of Elkhart, Ind., has maintained an average of about 95 per cent throughout his four years.

Among the awards were:

Second class—John B. Cary, of Emporia, Kans.; Thomas D. Rogers, of Devils Lake, N. Dak., and James F. Miller, jr., of Pocatello, Idaho.

ROOSEVELT REGROUPING STEP BALKS CONGRESS ADJOURNING

orders on the ground they contemplated consolidations universally acknowledged to be essential to the Roosevelt economy program. Regrouping plans surrounded by controversial features had been deliberately passed over by the President, Senator Robinson explained.

Capitulation Is Sudden.

This explanation, however, did not satisfy the Republican opposition. Senator Reed characterized the President's message as "a crowning travesty of a week which has made a farce of representative government."

Denouncing the President for having submitted but one copy of his order to each House, Senator Reed said the text had proved to him upon examination to be "so general as to be utterly meaningless."

He protested vigorously against any further action in the session which would be merely a rubber-stamp approval of Executive recommendations. Repeated experience since March had demonstrated the folly of Congressional action without deliberate processes, he insisted. When Senator Reed concluded his observations Senator Harison moved the recess. It was a sudden and dramatic collapse of legislative plans unparalleled in recent Congressional history.

House Soon Follows.

A few minutes after the Senate recess, the House followed suit. After referring the reorganization message to the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments, the House—with its legislative calender practically cleared for the session—recessed until noon Monday.

Adding to the confusion on the House side, the growing bipartisan bloc which had fought the President for a week on the veteran reductions greeted the recess with lusty shouts and cheers. As in the Senate, the body was deaf to the plea of the Democratic leaders that the President's occupation with grave problems of domestic and international import had prevented his transmitting the consolidation orders at an earlier date.

An all-day session of the House and Senate conferees on the industrial recovery bill led to a complete accord on 95 Senate amendments, and this agreement had been formally ratified by the House before the adjournment plans went, as Speaker Rainey once put it, "blooey."

Tax Publicity Change.

The income tax publicity amendment had been compromised in a form giving the President discretionary authority to open the returns to general inspection under such terms and conditions as he might prescribe.

Senator La Follette, of Wisconsin, author of the original publicity clause, objected vigorously to this compromise, but appeared ready to abide by the conference decision, until the reorganization message gave new leverage to the Senate's flagged and occasionally bleary-eyed rebellion.

The senator from Louisiana, Mr. Long, who had been notably refreshed by a pleasant nap during Senator Robinson's labored exposition of the reorganization message, was giving both the Senate and the President a somewhat disjointed dressing down, when the leaders reached the recess agreement.

The Clark amendment, to make all tax-exempt securities subject to regular Federal income levies, also was stricken from the recovery bill in conference.

The Borah amendment, to insure the public interest against monopolistic price-fixing advantages under the section relaxing the antitrust laws, was modified in conference. Under the agreement accepted by both the House and Senate conferees the final form of this amendment merely forbade "monopolistic practices." Senator Borah was unhappy that "price-fixing" had not been specifically outlawed. In its present form the bill, by construction, sanctions price-fixing when such action is interpreted as pursuant to the general aims of the legislation.

Partnership Tax Returns.

This displeasure on Senator Borah's part over the fate of his antimonopoly amendment may have been a contributory cause to his stubborn indignation over the 8 o'clock reorganization message.

In the revenue section of the recovery measure, the conference report clarified the Senate language regarding partnership tax returns—an echo from the three weeks' investigation of J. P. Morgan & Co., which ended Friday night.

The Senate amendment clothing the President with sweeping authority to impose import quotas, embargoes, or tariffs—with the advice of the United States Tariff Commission—was retained in the final text of the bill. It empowers the Executive to defend the United States against any developments in the world economic situation which might interfere with the operation of the domestic recovery plan.

Although not so explained in any official presentation of administration policy, this amendment was regarded also as a safety measure against the possible failure of the London economic conference to restore an international money standard. With the powers granted in this amendment, the President would be in a position to protect American producers against every form of currency juggling abroad.

Limited to One Year.

The oil section of the bill as approved in conference vests the President with plenary authority to regulate pipe lines and to prohibit interstate shipments of petroleum produced in violation of State quota laws.

The industrial licensing sections of the bill were limited to one year, instead of two.

The House labor section, according the right to union organization, were retained generally, with some of the language shifted from mandatory to discretionary. The conference form of the report was described officially as acceptable to the representatives of organized labor.

The compromise on veteran pensions finally approved by the House preserves the essential principles of the original economy regulations of last March, but relaxes the administrative formula in respect of certain classes of service-connected cases.

Whereas the original regulations contemplated total reductions of $360,000,000 annually in veteran payments, the compromise agreement restores approximately $150,000,000 of the savings. The Connally amendment, as passed last week by the Senate, would have restored roughly $200,000,000 of the original savings.

Passing an omnibus deficiency appropriation bill in record-breaking time, the House yesterday made available ample funds for all the recovery legislation enacted in the three-month session.

This bill calls for a total of $3,459,-450,908—the largest peace-time appropriation measure ever presented in either House. Only one war-time appropriation bill, an Army supply measure, called for more money.

The gigantic money bill was whipped together in a 20-minute session of the House Ways and Means Committee yesterday morning.

Presented to the House before many of the members knew such a measure even was in contemplation, the bill was passed under a special rule limiting debate to one hour. Some sections were not even read in the House.

Late in the afternoon the bill was sent to the Senate, where the Appropriations Committee took it up for immediate consideration.

Rebellion Is Subdued.

The revolt in Congress against the drastic cut in veterans' pensions, proclaimed two months ago under the authority of the emergency economy act, struck new fire yesterday morning, when the veteran bloc in the House undertook to write in technical amendments to the revision formula agreed upon in Friday's White House conferences.

Informed of this renewal of the veterans' defiance, President Roosevelt summoned the House Democratic leaders to the executive offices again for another talk-around. After this conference, Chairman Pou, of the House Rules Committee, announced a complete accord between the President and his veteran adversaries. When the agreement was again presented informally to the House, however, the rebellious soldier bloc again insisted upon upward revision of the pension formula. It was at this point that the two-hour afternoon adjournment was called by the Roosevelt leaders on the floor.

The party whip cracked sharply during the recess and when the House reassembled at 8 o'clock, leaders anticipated prompt acceptance of the President's revision.

More Men Students Dropped.

LONDON DELEGATES RIGIDLY EXPECTANT

Experts Are Feverishly Busy Preparing for Economic Parley Tomorow.

London, June 10 (A.P.).—Statesmen and financial experts of many nations thronged London hotels tonight in tense expectancy, pending the lifting of the curtain Monday on the world's most far-reaching effort to apply intelligent guidance to its economic destiny.

Members of the American delegation, feverishly busy with preparations for the most momentous international conference since Versailles, explained that the world was verging on a crucial test of whether it was able to organize itself on a basis of mutual cooperation, or whether it must break up into isolated economic islands.

American quarters made it clear that the United States was prepared to go as far as any nation toward mutually beneficial cooperation. But they warned that any effort to obtain special advantages would be stoutly resisted.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull, James M. Cox, and the other delegates were busy in private discussions with their experts. It was understood that contacts had been made with members of the delegations of other nations, although the Americans have had no formal appointments with British or other statesmen since Mr. Hull met Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald at a private luncheon yesterday.

Fish Forecasts Failure Of Economic Conference

(Associated Press.)

Representative Fish (Republican), New York, told the House yesterday the American delegation to the London economic conference is "innocence abroad" and "individually and collectively will be lucky to emerge from the London conference gridiron with any more clothes than Mr. Gandhi!"

"None of the delegates has had any experience in international conferences or European affairs," Fish said. "None has any knowledge of foreign languages or has traveled extensively abroad or understands conditions there. Naturally the London conference is doomed to failure."

Stoddard King, Song Writer, Critically Ill

Spokane, Wash., June 10 (A.P.).—Stoddard King, who wrote "There's a Long, Long Trail a'Winding," popular soldiers' song during the World War, and several books of humorous verse, was critically ill at his home here tonight.

King was stricken after returning from a lecture tour through the Eastern States last February, and recently the illness was diagnosed as a disorder at the base of the brain.

ably will be met in silver, which will be acceptable to the United States, although it will amount to considerable net reduction of the actual sum due.

The government has determined to keep its formal decision secret until Neville Chamberlain, chancellor of the exchequer, announces it in the House of Commons on Tuesday. It will be a compromise to satisfy both those who favor default and those who favor full payment.

The full payment in gold dollars, at the present rate of exchange, would amount roughly to £19,000,000. Payment in silver would cost only £12,000,000.

Engineers Express Faith in 2 Leaders

Cleveland, Ohio, June 10 (A.P.).—The triennial convention of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers expressed unanimous confidence today in the grand chief, Alvanley Johnston, and the secretary-treasurer, James E. Cassell.

The two leaders were indicted yesterday for misapplication of funds and false entry in the books of the collapsed Standard Trust Bank, of Cleveland. Both were directors of the institution, in which the brotherhood was a large depositor and a stockholder.

It was the sense of the convention, through a resolution, that "such indictments have been sought at the instance of persons for ulterior, selfish or political motives, purposes and interests of their own, which are inimical to the interests of this brotherhood."

Repeal Voting Path Is Cleared in Texas

Austin, Tex., June 10 (A.P.).—Gov. Miriam A. Ferguson today set in motion machinery that will permit Texas voters to ballot on repeal of the National prohibition amendment, August 26.

She named Senator Morris Sheppard, coauthor of the eighteenth amendment, as temporary chairman of a convention to be held here June 27, when the antirepealists will select a slate of candidates for delegates to a State convention, November 24, when the State's formal vote on the issue will be cast.

The governor has not yet named the temporary chairman of the repealist convention, which also will meet June 27 to choose a slate of delegates.

Durbin Again Elected President of Magicians

Winchell Smith, 62, Playwright, Is Dead

Hartford, Conn., June 10 (A.P.).—Winchell Smith, one of the leading American playwrights and producers for many years, connected with the stage since the early nineties, died today at Mill Stream, his Farmington home. He was 62.

He is best remembered for the success of "Lightnin'" on which Smith collaborated with the late Frank Bacon, who at an advanced age suddenly became famous as the star of that play.

Mr. Smith was identified with more than a score of successes, first appearing on Broadway as an obscure player in "Prodigal Daughter" in 1893.

Ship Fire Halted After 70-Hour Run

Boston, June 10 (A.P.).—Fire in a hold of the freighter Arizpa, bound from Mobile, Ala., to Bremen, Germany, was brought under control in Boston Harbor today at the conclusion of a 450-mile run from sea for assistance.

The fire had burned for 70 hours in the $800,000 cargo of cotton, resin and lumber, being confined chiefly to the cotton. The Arizpa's crew of 37, weary from the long battle in the ever present danger of an explosion, was relieved by Boston firemen who met the craft with fireboats and land apparatus. Capt. Frank O. Lund, of the Arizpa, was unable to determine how the blaze started Wednesday.

Two of the crew were injured while fighting the fire. The five passengers aboard the vessel helped the crew with the hose lines.

Low Lands Yield Wooden Treasure

Memphis, Tenn., June 10 (A.P.).—Capt. C. S. Gartrell came back today from a treasure hunt for timber in the sunken lands of Northeast Arkansas with the report that his preliminary operations have met with success.

"I found cottonwood, cypress, gum, bird's-eye, maple, walnut, oak and ash logs in those crevices," the veteran river diver said. "I came back to arrange for heavier hoisting machinery. The timber is there, and it looks like there are millions of feet of it."

Still declining to be specific as to the exact location of his operations, Capt. Gartrell said he made his discovery near the Missouri border and added that he would work upward into Missouri later.

TRUTH

IN OPTICAL ADVERTISING

THERE IS

a difference in lenses

● YOU don't expect the same good looks and wearing qualities in a cheap "bargain" suit as you do in a well tailored, durable fifty dollar suit of clothes. There's just as much—or more—difference in glasses and what they do for your eyes. The sorry part of it all is that unlike cloth or other merchandise, you can't detect the difference between two grades of optical lenses by feeling the glass or looking at the polished surfaces. Another thing—glasses can't be classed with every day products; they are prescribed and fitted for the most delicate and sensitive of all organs—your eyes!

Buying glasses advertised at cheap prices is like walking on thin ice—its a 100 to 1 chance. Only trained eyes, with the aid of delicate instruments, can detect lens differences which affect present and future ability to see, and which often mean the difference between safe and unsafe glasses!

Magnified Thousands of Times

You Can See the Difference

This lens surface is free from defects. It is true, perfectly smooth and lustrous, bending the light rays uniformly into the eye and thus transmitting a true, undistorted image. Illustration shows a greatly enlarged cross section of a lens.

What you don't see in a poorly-made lens. Minute pits, bumps, and ridges deflect the light rays in all directions so that they scatter into eye instead of reaching a focal point. This causes a poor image and consequent eyestrain.

You can avoid risk of seriously damaging your eyes by seeking advice from one of the optometrists listed below. Good glasses, properly fitted, can be furnished IF you need them, at a cost within the most limited pocketbook.

TECHNICAL SCHOOL GRADUATION IS HELD

Col. C. H. Birdseye Speaks; at Commencement at Columbia.

Graduates of the Columbia Technical School were cautioned on the need of continued study and research by Col. C. H. Birdseye, of the Geological Survey of the U. S. Department of the Interior, in the principal address at commencement exercises last week.

Col. Birdseye pointed to the possibilities of employment through the several construction programs provided for in legislation passed by Congress.

The exercises were opened with a banquet in the Hall of Nations of the Washington Hotel, at which L. E. Reed, engineer of the Potomac Electric Power Co., was toastmaster. Paul J. Leverone, principal of the school, in ad address to the graduates, advised them of the necessity of perseverance and faith in meeting the present-day difficulties of unemployment.

John Earll Ayers, day class graduate, of Warwick, N. Y., gave the valedictory address. Mrs. Eve Patton and Mr. Ayers were elected honor graduates of the class and awarded the school's gold insignia. Col. Birdseye, assisted by Miss Helen Notter, secretary of the school, awarded diplomas to the following graduates:

Primitero Ahlers, Hallie Allen, John Earll Ayers, Kenneth Barker, Ewing Bailey, Carl Benner, Klaud Bittner, Robert Boteler, Arthur Bridges, James Burke, James Burruss, Vivian Campbell, Anson Clift, Alex Cotsoni, John P. Mrs. Mattern Still Confident of Record

Walla Walla, Wash., June 10 (A. P.).—With hopes shattered that her husband would break the around-the-world flight record, Mrs. Jimmy Mattern expressed confidence today that he would succeed on the last difficult legs of the attempt and set a challenging mark for the first globe girdling solo flight.

Expressing deep concern over the dangers of the Siberia-Alaska stretch that lies next ahead of her husband, Mrs. Mattern said, "I'm sure he will make it and even if he does trail Post and Gatty, he will be setting a wonderful mark for himself."

Minneapolis Vote Will Be on Reform

Minneapolis, Minn., June 10 (U.P.). William A. Anderson, Farmer-Labor incumbent, and A. G. (Buzz) Bainbridge, veteran theater owner, tonight took their final mayoral campaign appeals before the electorate in preparation for Monday's city election. The issue upon which the campaign will be decided is whether the voters want a liberal city government.

Anderson's main appeal for reelection is to the drys and church organizations, for whose support he recently fought liberal beer distribution methods and banned a road show of alleged indecency.

Hijacking of campaign booklets and suppression of a campaign newspaper as well as bitter personal attacks have occurred. Anderson charged that a "gangster and racketeer element" is seeking his defeat.

He was born in France. His body will be sent to Los Angeles, where his widow resides.

Island Residents Win Over Flood

Cathlamet, Wash., June 10 (A.P.). The 600 residents of Puget Island won a victory over the turbulent Columbia River today when a 75-foot gap in the island's dike was closed as the highest tide in 35 years swept in from the Pacific.

All houses outside the dikes were submerged on the flat little island lying midway in the river between Cathlamet and Westport, Oreg. Many buildings inside the wall were afloat. No lives have been lost.

Volunteers from the mainland patrolled the dikes today while the islanders slept after a two-and-a-half-day battle with the river, which roared past the island 8 feet above the level of the land.

YOUTHS' VOCATIONAL SESSION TOMORROW

1,500 Future Farmers to Visit Historical Points on Pilgrimage.

More than 1,500 boys who are studying vocational education in various parts of the country will meet in the Washington Auditorium at 8 a. m. tomorrow for the beginning of a Three-day pilgrimage in the Greater Washington area and Virginia. Every State in the Union and Hawaii will be represented.

Known as the Future Farmers of America, the boys will attend the monthly broadcast of this organization at the War College and will then visit Arlington, Alexandria and Mount Vernon. The embryo farmers will be guests at Glen Echo Amusement Park tomorrow evening.

Tuesday the boys will visit Congress and tour points of interest throughout the city. The Greater National Capital committee is cooperating with the Federal Board for Vocational Education in entertaining the visitors.

As a climax to their pilgramage, the boys will travel to Monticello, the home of Thomas Jefferson, at Charlottesville, Va., early Wednesday morning. A room at Monticello will be dedicated to the Future Farmers.

Exercises at the amphitheater at the University of Virginia will be marked by addresses by Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace, Gov. John Garland Pollard of Virginia, Chester Gray, Washington representative of the American Farm Bureau Federation, and W. Harry King, a member of the Gederal Board for Vocational Education. A barbecue dinner will be given the boys by the Charlottesville Chamber of Commerce.

Sir Josiah Stamp Foresees Upturn

Quebec, June 10 (A.P.).—Sir Josiah Stamp, director of the Bank of England and one of Britain's leading economists, said just before he sailed for home today that "there are tangible signs of business and economic improvement in Canada and the United States."

The recent advance in stock market prices has not met the test of reasonable optimism, however, he asserted, but has shown a tendency by the public to speculate rather than make sound investments. "Factories are showing increased activity," he said, "and carloadings have definitely improved."

He expressed hope that the nations would not look upon the world economic conference as a battleground on which to obtain special economic advantages.

Brazilians Study Plant Of Ohio Plane Builder

Troy, Ohio, June 10 (A.P.).—Lieut. Mielson Wanderley, a Brazilian army officer, and Senor Jose Gomes Ribero, of Rio de Janeiro, today visited a local aircraft plant and inspected equipment.

The officer is one of seven sent by the Brazilian government to the United States to inspect factories making military equipment. The company here has furnished the Brazilian government with 65 military planes. Lieut. Wanderley and Senor Ribero will purchase parts and other supplies while here.

X-Ray Fatal to Colonel As 164 Operations Fail

San Francisco, June 10 (A.P.).—A victim of his own experiments in the use of X-rays, Col. Eugene G. Northington, 53, of the Ninth Army Corps Area, died today of infection from X-ray burns.

He had been a patient at a hospital for nine months, while surgeons operated 164 times in an effort to save his life, Army officials said.

Farms Are Wanted In Capital Relief

Having placed eight families on farms within the past few weeks through its affiliated organizations, the Council of Social Agencies is earnestly seeking for other "farms to conquer." The council is cooperating in this plan with the Associated Charities, the Catholic Charities and the Emergency Relief Division of the Board of Public Welfare.

Under a recent ruling the Emergency Relief Division is permitted to finance families who will return to farms for a certain period of time, enabling them to put in a crop. This rule was due to the feeling that it would not cost any more, if as much, to finance a family of five on a farm where rent at least is free, as it would to keep them unemployed here in the city.

Miss Mary Edith Coulson, secretary of the family welfare committee of the council, has been instrumental in obtaining the eight farms already in use and tenants have been furnished by the Associated Charities and Catholic Charities. There are a large number of small farms adjacent to Washington which are not being worked, Miss Coulson points out, and the plan is to obtain free rent for tenant families in return for repairs and other work done on the farm by the tenant. In the meantime, there are 430 subsistence gardens in active operation under the direction of th District of Columbia committee on employment.

5,000 Miners Get Increase in Wages

Cleveland, June 10 (A.P.).—Within 24 hours after Northern Coals, Inc., recommended restoration of the pre-January wage scales throughout the Eastern Middle and Cambridge, Ohio, bituminous coal fields, wage increases were announced today for approximately 5,000 workmen at Cambridge and St. Clairsville.

The Cambridge Collieries Co. announced it would post a 30 per cent wage increase at four mines Monday. The basic wage is now $2.60 and the increase will bring it to $3.29 for nearly 1,000 miners.

A 10 per cent wage increase for the approximately 4,000 miners of the Eastern Ohio mines was posted at St. Clairsville today. The increase was voluntary on the part of the operators and will bring the scale back to a basic $3.20.

Geologists See Texas Oil Fields Near Death

Dallas, Tex., June 10 (U.P.).—Geologists anticipate that in a year at the most, the gushing oil of the vast east Texas field will have to be pumped. After that will come the slow death of the great producing area that has been the dominating factor in world oil markets since early 1931.

Already oil equipment houses are behind in their orders for pump installations. More than 100 of the 11,000 wells are reported in need of artificial extraction methods. But the great field is still capable of pumping out an estimated billion or a billion and a half barrels of oil.

Mary Hay's Paris Divorce Try Fails

New York, June 10 (A.P.).—Mary Hay, stage dancer, who said she had gone to Paris last October to obtain a divorce from David Bath, theatrical manager and writer, returned to the United States today without the decree.

She said she wanted to give the matter more thought, adding, "I want to have a talk with him. Maybe we'll patch up our differences. Maybe I'll get a divorce. The divorce is more likely."

After appearing with a stock company in Atlantic City, Miss Hay plans to go to California to see her two daughters, Mary, 10, a child by her first husband, Richard Barthelmess, and Anne, 5.

MOVES BY MACHADO SPLIT CUBA REBELS

"Sandino" Blas Vows War to End, but Colleagues Study Conciliation.

Havana, June 10 (A.P.).—While Juan Blas, the "Cuban Sandino" out in the Santa Clara hills, was vowing he would never yield to President Machado's "conciliation" program, Wilfredo Albanes, conservative representative from Oriente Province, left for Miami, Fla., late today to sound out former President Mario G. Menocal, opponent of the existing regime, upon the current movement toward political peace.

Blas, whom the Santa Clara population now compares with the Nicaraguan patriot, has let it be known he will continue his armed revolt against the government at Havana until Machado is out of office.

The Santa Clara rebel chief's followers now number only an estimated 150, having shrunk from 400, but those who remain with Blas are counted the cream of his fighting men.

In his frequent clashes with troops Blas has not yet come off second best, according to reports from the province, many of whose residents indignantly reject official allegations that he has been looting and stealing. Blas and his men, Santa Clara folk say, take only what they need, paying or giving receipts on the rare occasions when rural people fail to offer willing hospitality.

The departure of Albanes for the conference in Florida with the former president of Cuba indicated, however, that the Machado plea for constitutional reform was being taken seriously in opposition quarters at Havana.

President's Daughter Weds.

Vienna, Austria, June 10 (A.P.).—The marriage of Marianne Miklas, daughter of Wilhelm Miklas, the President of Austria, to Eric Forstreite, registrar of lower Austria, took place today. Cardinal Archbishop Innitzer officiated.

BETTER TRADE SEEN BY INSURANCE CHIEF

Definite and important improvement in general business conditions is reported by William Montgomery, president of Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co. Mr. Montgomery has returned to Washington, following participation in a Nation-wide series of regional agents' conventions held by the company. He bases his statement upon wide observation in many fields and direct contact with the substantial betterment recorded by Acacia branches in all sections of the United States.

"There can be no questioning the fact that business as a whole is showing marked signs of improvement," President Montgomery said. "On every hand, in all parts of the country, returning confidence among the people is being signalized by actual increases in the volume of business transacted. Of paramount importance, the trend of employment is upward.

"The results achieved through Acacia's series of regional conferences are practical examples of this improvement which I feel is taking place in numerous lines of endeavor. These conferences not only proved to be stimulating to officers of the company, managers of the branches and the agents in the field, but they were fruitful from the practical standpoint of developing business. And of importance to every one is the fact that, now more than a few months ago, there is business to develop.

"Our regional conferences began in San Francisco, where $1,850,000 of business was written; then came Atlantic City, with $1,853,000; Chicago, $1,944,890; Columbus, Ohio, $1,144,800; Atlanta, Ga., $1,007,085, and Dallas, Tex., $810,500.

"It is of the most outstanding significance that not only is Acacia's business volume increasing but conservation likewise is revealing a substantially improved tone. Much of this is due, of course, to the fact that Acacia always has concentrated a great deal of attention on its conservation program; but the fact that business generally is gaining naturally is most helpful to us along this line. Lapses are declining; reinstatements are increasing.

Mrs. Dickey Files Suit To Divorce Explorer

Dayton, Ohio, June 10 (A.P.).—Elizabeth Dickey, of Dayton, and Tippecanoe City, Ohio, today filed suit for divorce from Dr. Herbert S. Dickey, traveler and explorer, in domestic relations court here. She charged gross neglect.

Dr. Dickey, now residing in New York, has made extensive exploration tours into the jungles of South America and has contributed to libraries and museums in many cities. Mrs. Dickey was the first white woman to explore the jungles in Ecuador. The couple was married in Colon, Panama Canal Zone, October 6, 1925.

Miami Alumni to Hold Outing Next Saturday

Attracting alumni in Washington and nearby Maryland and Virginia, the annual Miami Club picnic will be held next Saturday afternoon at the Joaquin Miller cabin in Rock Creek Park. A picnic supper will be served at 5 o'clock and there will be games and contests.

Miss Linda Deaton is secretary of the Miami Club of Washington, which is comprised of alumni and former students of the Oxford (Ohio) University.

Mystery Dancer Will Star In 'A Song in the Night'

A mysterious dancer, blonde and pretty, has joined the cast of "A Song in the Night," musical play to be presented next Saturday in the Belasco Theater for benefit of Washington's needy.

Miss Edna Buckler, author and star of the production, declined to reveal the young woman's identity, beyond the fact she is a Washington girl, prominent in social circles. It was because she is considered a theatrical "find" that the show was twice postponed to permit rehearsals, Miss Buckler said.

In keeping with her "mystery dances," the young woman will wear a mask during all appearances. Perhaps her identity may be guessed, Miss Buckler declared, and indicated that should this happen a surprise is in store for the audience.

Herself a Washingtonian, Miss Buckler wrote the play some time ago, but other engagements forced her to withhold production. A New York producer attempted to procure it for Peggy Wood, but the author wanted first to present it in Washington.

A portion of the proceeds will go to the Fourth Police Precinct relief fund. Civic and society leaders are lending their support, with L. Stoddard Taylor, manager of the Belasco, aiding its presentation.

Although twice postponed, Miss Buckler said that, barring accident, the show will open next Saturday, at 8:15 p. m.

Reconstruction

Taken from the Christian Science Monitor.

At the present time we hear a great deal about reconstruction. This is encouraging, for it portends business revival, sound finance, better times. It signifies that the people are beginning to see that depression can be overcome and are at work to accomplish this result.

Although it is through materialistic theories that men are endeavoring to restore stability and prevent a universal financial collapse, it is also true that never in the history of the world has there been so widespread and intelligent an effort to reconstruct the sense of value and substance on the basis of spirituality. Undoubtedly the world feels the influence of Christian Science which, in presenting the truth about all things, is appealing to the consciousness of mankind reasonably, irresistibly and lovingly.

Ages ago Paul pointed to the method which would reconstruct the entire human experience. In his letter to the Romans he said, "Be not conformed to this world: but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind." He recognized that all mortal troubles spring from a worldly, sensuous manner of thinking, and that the only method by which these discords can be dissipated is by a correction of thought. Mary Baker Eddy has made clear the way of this purification by showing that true ideas "are transmitted by the divine mind through divine science, which corrects error with truth and demands spiritual thoughts, divine concepts, to the end that they may produce harmonious results" Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures, p. 259).

Habitually to entertain spiritually constructive thoughts means mental, moral and physical freedom. The world is surely coming to realize that evil, like the shifting sands of the sea, offers no secure basis for enduring prosperity.

What is the goal of all the individual and collective effort of the business of the world? Is not the ultimate goal peace, joy, harmony, freedom? Christian Science teaches that these spiritual qualities can be found only in divine mind. All harmony is of God. Man can have no real prosperity underived from God, infinite Principle.

As mortals relinquish faith in matter and look to the divine source of intelligence and power, they will reconstruct their own realization of stability and harmony, and thus help to establish them in the business of the world. God governs man; and knowing this enables men to prove that harmony and success are the only legitimate results of all righteous endeavors.

Mortals believe in lack, depression, distress, and experience these errors because of their own and the general belief in them. When hate, fear and greed run riot, as they did in the late World War, they leave their distressing effect upon mankind; and human consciousness must be purged of these erroneous influences. The only method of overcoming these evils is by purification of individual consciousness. When one supplants a suggestion of hate with a thought of love; when he eradicates an illusion of fear with an enlightened sense of trust and faith; when he destroys a belief in selfishness with the understanding of true selflessness, he has in a degree advanced the cause of world betterment and reconstruction.

By uplifting human consciousness, Christian Science exterminates the belief in limitation and discord. It teaches and demonstrates that they are not real because not ordained of God, limitless good. It lovingly attracts the thinking of mankind toward the limitless source of good. This Science is irresistible in its appeal to human consciousness and persistent in its demand for more spiritual thinking in the business of the world. From the basis of the all-inclusiveness of God, good, it declares the nothingness of error.

Every worthy accomplishment is made possible by the utilization of constructive ideas. All spiritual ideas emanate from God, who is the source of all true intelligence. Man, reflecting and controlled by divine mind, is in possession of an infinite capacity to manifest fruitful activity, progress and harmony.

In the Science of Genesis, God, divine Principle, is revealed as the one infinite creator, and all that is made is the work of His hand. It follows that man is not a creator. Christian Science teaches that man is the expression of true Being, the conscious representation of Deity.

Christian Science is the one real reconstructive force in the world. It is so because it is the sole system that is able to regenerate the human mind through the power of divine Mind. It reaches deep down into individual consciousness and exposes the fallacies of error. Furthermore, it disperses these illusions by instituting in human consciousness the reign of wise and perfect spiritual ideas which yield the fruit of harmony and prosperity.

Ignorance of spiritual facts is the source of mortal discords, and Christian Science imparts the understanding which corrects this ignorance. This not only cures depression, but also prevents it, and as this understanding becomes more general will entirely eliminate discord from human experience. "Thus," as Mrs. Eddy says (Science and Health, page 191), "the whole earth will be transformed by Truth on its pinions of light, chasing away the darkness of error."

Embezzlement Warrant Is Served on Nunnelley

Petoskey, Mich., June 10 (A.P.).—Sheriff Thomas Bryant late today served a bench warrant on Brent Nunnelley, secretary of the Louisville, Ky., Park Board, at the Hotel Southern in Bayview, Mich., near here, where Nunnelley had been ill since May 27. Dr. B. H. Van Leuven said that Nunnelley was too ill to be moved.

The warrant, Sheriff Bryant said, charged Nunnelley with embezzlement of Louisville City funds, and asked bonds of $5,000. Bryant said he had no idea when Nunnelley would be sufficiently recovered to be moved from his present quarters, where he is staying with his mother.

Miss Fairbanks to Wed Former Capital Youth

Pasadena, Calif., June 10 (A.P.).—Cornelia Fairbanks, granddaughter of Charles Warren Fairbanks, Vice President of the United States under Theodore Roosevelt, will marry David L. Stone, jr., son of Brig. Gen. David Stone, formerly of Washington, D. C., it was announced today.

The wedding has been set tentatively for August.

66 Nations to Join In Economy Parley

London, June 10 (U.P.).—Of the 67 nations officially invited to attend the World Economic Conference, only Panama so far has been unable to accept the invitation.

Lists of delegates have been received from 60 nations. The secretariat still awaited official notifications of the names of delegates from Afghanistan, Costa Rica, Honduras, Iceland, Liberia and Paraguay.

The delegations included 1 head of a state, President Edmund Schulthess of Switzerland; 8 prime ministers, 20 foreign ministers and 47 other cabinet ministers of 23 nations, including many finance ministers and heads of central banks.

Chicago Area Beer Tax Climbs to $1,701,479

Chicago, June 10 (A.P.).—The office of Gregory T. Van Meter, collector of Internal Revenue, announced that beer stamp taxes and license fees in the first Illinois district between April 7 and June 1 totaled $1,701,479.

The office estimated that $1,667,229 of the amount had been received from the $5 a barrel beer tax indicating that the nine Chicago breweries had produced and sold 333,446 barrels of beer since the brew was legalized.

Woman Prepares Suicide Carefully

San Francisco, June 10 (A.P.).—A woman about 35 years old, who registered as Mrs. L. C. Johnson, Chicago, but who signed a letter, Lucille Carroll Jay, shot herself to death in a large downtown hotel here early today.

She left several notes, among them one to the coroner, requesting that she be clothed in a certain dress and cremated; one to Dr. Charles L. Conners, pathologist at the University of California, asking him to help "determine the cause of my death" and to send the report and her heart to Dr. Ray W. Scott, of Western Reserve University, Cleveland, Ohio.

Other notes indicated she was despondent. Police said she called on a cemetery official two days ago to make plans for a funeral, saying a death was expected in the family.

Mrs. Roosevelt Visits Godmother in New York

New York, June 10 (A.P.).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt motored from her New York home today to West Orange, N. J., to spend the week-end with her cousin and godmother, Mrs. Henry Parrish, jr.

The wife of the President plans to return to New York Monday and fly to Washington Tuesday morning.

Raymond Broward Carleton, of 1327 Ridge place, Anacostia, D. C., has been promoted to the grade of first lieutenant in the Cavalry Reserve.

Capt. Richard O. Sanderson has been detached from the headquarters of the Marine Corps here and will go to duty on the U. S. S. New Mexico, it has been announced at the Marine headquarters.

Indictment Sought In Virginia Slaying

Special to The Washington Post.

Leesburg, Va., June 10.—Commonwealth's Attorney John Gallcher will seek from the grand jury, summoned for the June term of the Loudoun Circuit Court opening here Monday morning, an indictment charging Henry H. Norman, horseman, with first-degree murder in connection with the slaying of Thomas Harris, 65, near Unison. The accused, said to have admitted the killing, is in the county jail.

Norman, 45, who was living with his father, C. E. Norman, of Unison, surrendered to Deputy Sheriff John R. Chamblin shortly after Harris, farmer and carpenter, was shot down in a field on the Norman farm, May 29. Harris died the same day in Loudoun Hospital from gunshot wounds in the leg and stomach. He remained conscious until within a few minutes of his death, and it is said he gave out a statement accusing Norman of shooting him from behind a fence.

It is also said that Norman gave to the authorities a signed statement admitting the slaying, which culminated a series of earlier quarrels between the two men.

Talbot E. Pierce, W. B. Cross, W. T. Adrian, John I. Kalb, Henry W. Frost, jr., C. F. Bower and J. D. Dillon constitute the grand jury.

Other cases to be brought before the grand jury are Nelson Bryant, charged with forgery; Charlie Brasswell, burglary; Gilbert Phillips, burglary; Delmas Glasscock, violation of the prohibition law, and Richard Talley, prohibition violation.

Deal Again Attacks Party Organization

Harrisonburg, Va., June 10 (A.P.).—Joseph T. Deal, of Norfolk, continuing his gubernatorial tour of the Valley of Virginia, in a speech here today renewed his attack on the Democratic organization of the State.

He sharply criticized the methods employed in revising the State constitution and asserted that his opponents' position on the repeal of the Layman act was unclear.

The candidate reiterated his stand for repeal of the eighteenth amendment and the Layman act. The sale of beer as a revenue producer was urged.

He renewed his attack on the construction of the Washington-Fredericksburg highway. Asserting that parts of the old highway are being abandoned to eliminate short curves and to obtain better grades, Deal said the road should have been constructed properly at the outset.

Japanese Boycott Cotton From India

Tokyo, June 10 (U.P.).—A boycott on Indian cotton was announced by Japanese spinners today as a retaliation against India's increase of duties on cotton goods manufactured here.

The boycott will become effective June 19, if approved by the National Spinners Association. It was advocated by the spinners' committee, and six mills agreed to it.

Simultaneously, former Home Minister Adachi urged the government to make a formal protest to Great Britain against imposing the tariff increase. Adachi, president of the National Spinners League, denounced Great Britain for "closing the trade door of India."

Capital Flier, Monoxide Gas Victim, Saved by Magazine

Official Photograph U. S. Army Air Corps.
LIEUT. THOMAS M. LOWE.

The narrow escape of a Washington officer of the Army Air Corps from carbon monoxide poisoning and a remarkable treatment administered by a small-town doctor in Texas which saved his life, was revealed here yesterday.

Lieut. Thomas M. Lowe, of the office of the Chief of the Air Corps, was returning from the West Coast in a new plane which he was delivering to Bolling Field here. The ship is equipped with a glass hood, which the pilot can close when it becomes cold. As Lieut. Lowe was obliged to fly over a number of mountains he closed the hood. Carbon monoxide was escaping from the engine and the flier unconsciously was subjected to it.

Fortunately, he was not overcome while flying, and landed at Midland, Tex., where he was removed to the hospital in a weakened condition. There the local doctor, not suspecting carbon monoxide, treated him, but the Washington officer grew worse.

A week later when Lowe's stamina was nearly exhausted the doctor tested his blood and found it saturated with the deadly gas. Never having treated a man for the poisoning, the doctor was perplexed but stated that he had read in the current issue of a popular news magazine an article concerning a possible antidote.

This involved the administration of a considerable quantity of methylene blue into the blood stream. Finding his patient growing worse by the hour the local doctor, literally with the copy of the magazine in one hand and the injection equiment in the other administered the methylene. Thirty-six hours later Lieut. Lowe's strength returned, he ate his first meal in a week and was removed to Fort Sam Houston, Texas, where he served a brief period of recuperation, gaining his strength back. He returned to Washington by train.

One of his first acts on returning here was to enter a three-year subscription to the popular news magazine and write a personal letter to the editor thanking him for publishing the artcile which saved his life.

ANTIREPEAL DRIVE INSTRUCTION TODAY

Meeting in Mount Vernon Place Church; How to Register Votes to Be Told.

Local drys will be told how they may aid in the drive to preserve the eighteenth amendment at a rally 3:30 p. m. today at the Mount Vernon Place M. E. Church.

The meeting will be held under the auspices of the Washington Committee of One Hundred Opposed to the Return of the Saloon and in cooperation with the national prohibition emergency committee.

Definite instructions in the way to register votes in the State protests will be given those attending the meeting. Short talks will be made by Representative J. Howard Swick, of Pennsylvania; Representative Gale Stalker, of New York, and Representative Will Rogers, of Oklahoma.

The committee sponsoring the meeting stated that their efforts were sponsored by 12 local organizations. Dr. Albert J. McCartney, pastor of the Church of the Covenant, will address the rally on "Whose Battle Is This?"

S. Earl Taylor, member of the National Prohibition Committee of Nine, will make recommendations on ways to prevent the return of the saloon. Glenn W. Wagner, member of the University of Illinois football team in 1926, will talk on "Prohibition and Athletics."

A musical program will be presented by the American University Glee Club Quartet and a chorus of more than 200 children of the Loyal Temperance Legion.

Virgina Auto Test Deadline Thursday

All automobile owners, residents in Virginia, must have their cars inspected not later than next Thursday, according to an announcement by T. McCall Frazier, State motor vehicle commissioner.

Designated stations in Arlington County for the inspection are Windridge Hardy, Inc., Rosslyn; Arlington Motor Co., Rosslyn; Alcova Garage, Arlington; Greenwood Garage, Cherrydale.

The inspection this year includes brakes, steering, windshields, headlights and any defects found that prevents perfect operation. The inspection is free at authorized stations. Car owners, however, will be required to pay all costs incident to making necessary repairs.

SHERIFF IS ON TRAIL OF 25 IN LYNCH MOB

Tennesseean Expects Action by Tonight in Hunt for Murderers of Two.

Huntsville, Tenn., June 10 (A.P.).—Sheriff Esau Laxton, of Scott County, said tonight that he believed he would be able by tomorrow night to "cast some light" upon the identity of members of a band of about 25 men who took Jerome Boyett, 22, and Harvey Winchester, 26, from their cell in the jail here Thursday and left their bodies by a roadside several miles away.

"My entire force of deputies worked today on the investigation. I am reasonably sure we will be ready to take some action by Sunday night," the sheriff said.

Boyett and Winchester were held on murder charges. Boyett had confessed, Sheriff Laxton said, to the slaying of Sheriff G. B. Winningham and his son, Deputy Floyd Winningham, in Pickett County several weeks ago. Winchester was charged with the slaying of Namon Perry and Eaker Thompson, at Winfield, a few months ago.

Boyett was buried today in the cross roads community, near the Kentucky line. Winchester will be buried tomorrow at Pine Knot, Ky.

Famous Virginia Estate Auctioned for $60,000

Berryville, Pa., June 10.—Montana Hall containing 903 acres, one of the handsomest estates in Clarke County, formerly owned by William G. Conrad, known as the Copper King of Minnesota, was sold today under hammer for $60,000 to the board of directors of the Handley School of Winchester to satisfy a lien. R. Gray Williams, of Winchester, is president of this board.

The property, at one time valued at $400,000, contains a handsome residence once the home of Charles Reid Riley and his wife, Minnie Conrad Riley. Mr. Riley at one time was one of the most successful thoroughbred horse breeders in the State. It was here that War Feathers, the highest priced filly ever sold at Saratoga, was bred.

Apple Inspection Law Is Enacted

(Associated Press.)

Surrounded by the bill's patrons, President Roosevelt yesterday made law the Byrd-Robertson bill requiring Government inspection of export apples and pears.

Senators Byrd, of Virginia, and Townsend, of Delaware, and Representative Robertson, of Virginia, were invited to the White House for the signing by the President and afterward were presented with the three pens Mr. Roosevelt used in affixing his signature.

The President recalled as he signed the bill that the first bill he introduced as a New York State senator concerned grading of apples.

Perlmann Leaving for Coast To Be Illustrator of Movies

Former Staff Artist of The Post Will Be Helper of Walt Disney.

Herman Perlmann, for several years an artist on the staff of The Washington Post, will leave for Hollywood this week to draw animated cartoons for Walt Disney productions.

Well-known as a newspaper artist, Perlmann is the creator of Imagettes, caricatures of world celebrities. He made studies of foreign statesmen visiting this city and obtained their autographs.

Perlmann studied art at Corcoran Art School and at the Maryland Institute of Art. He became acquainted with Walt Disney several years ago and was not able at that time to accept his offer.

In addition to newspaper work, he has been employed as a movie and magazine illustrator. He has played several small roles in movie productions.

LEGION POST ACTS ON PENSION PLANS

Costello Group Recommends Transfer of Activities to Civil Service.

The Vincent B. Costello Post, No. 15, last Tuesday adopted a resolution proposed by Legionnaire Ray Queenin recommending to the director of the budget in connection with the administration's reorganization program that the supervision and all duties in connection with the civil service retirement act and several other miscellaneous pension activities be completely divorced from the organization of the Veterans' Administration and transferred to the Civil Service Commission, where it was insisted by a number of members it rightfully belonged.

It was felt that the Veterans' Administration should be a lone unit in efficiently administering the mandates of all veteran legislation; that the cost of these additional establishments referred to, being consolidated as at present with the Veterans' Bureau, is at various periods combined in general statements to the press and the public as reflecting the actual cost of veterans' relief, which is deceiving to the Nation, and that former service men of the country are not getting a fair break in the dissemination of such news, and furthermore the existence of these independent agencies under the director of veterans' affairs interferes seriously with the efficient handling of statutes pertaining to veteran benefits.

Commander Norman R. Grant was given authority by the post to hold only one meeting monthly during the summer season of June, July, August and September, with the instruction that he was warranted in calling any additional sessions if he felt that such were necessary for the proper attention of the membership. Grant also announced that the Drum and Bugle Corps will participate in the parade opening the department convention of the Veterans of Foreign Wars on June 21.

New members inducted at last meeting were Morris Raines, U. S. Air Service; L. E. Henry, Company K. 111th Infantry, 28th Division, and by reinstatement, T. A. Sugrue.

DISTRICT'S TAX RATE IS SLASHED TO $1.50

base, or from $1,229,359,566 to $1,150,000,000, and that Tax Assessor William P. Richards believes that a further reduction of about $50,000,000 may have to be made in realty assessments for the fiscal year 1935.

The Federation of Citizens Associations has been arguing for a 20 per cent horizontal cut in realty tax assessments instead of reduction in the tax rate, while the Washington Taxpayers Protective Association yesterday made a plea for a tax slash to as low a figure as $1.36.

Maj. Donovan in his forecast of municipal revenues for the new fiscal year which begins July 1 estimated that the District may have a surplus of $1,685,551 over appropriation obligations. He warned, however, that the 1934 appropriations act is $4,000,000 under what it would be normally because of the current 15 per cent cut in salaries, and he predicted that this surplus probably would have to be gone into for further unemployment relief.

Appropriations Needed.

The $1,300,000 carried in the 1934 act "would appear to be inadequate to complete the fiscal year," he stated, and "anywhere from $750,000 to $1,000,000 in additional appropriations will be necessary if reasonably adequate work of relief is to be carried on by the District government."

The District government is nearing the end of 1933 with a deficit of $514,894, the auditor further revealed. This deficit, if applied against the 1934 surplus, would reduce it to approximately $1,100,000.

"It is believed, however, that this deficit in 1933 will be substantially if not entirely made up by moneys received for beer licenses now held in suspense pending the issuance of permanent licenses and by unexpended balances of 1933 appropriations, although such balances will not actually be released to the credit of the District until the issuance of the surplus warrant by the Treasury Department on June 30, 1935," he stated.

The report showed a steady decline in municipal revenue from 1930 through 1933 of $2,334,755.

Taxpayer Group Sought 20 Per Cent Cut to $1.36

A 20 per cent reduction in the District realty tax rate was demanded by representatives of the Washington Taxpayers Protective Association yesterday at a closed hearing before the District Commissioners. Such a slash would bring the rate down from $1.70 to $1.36.

Claiming to represent "between 5 and 10 per cent of all real estate taxes in the District," a delegation of a dozen or more presented the demand to the commissioners with Tax Assessor William P. Richards and Auditor Daniel J. Donovan present. A similar hearing was granted the Federation of Citizens Associations about ten days ago.

Copies of a lengthy speech delivered by Rufus S. Lusk, executive officer of the association, were given the press. Reviewing the fiscal history of the District government over the last several years, Mr. Lusk urged the Commissioners to make a maximum rather than a minimum cut in realty taxes.

Using an estimated surplus of $6,100,000 as a basis for his calculations, Mr. Lusk figured that even with $1.36 tax rate the amount lost to the District would be but $4,293,000, or $1,807,000 under the surplus. His estimates, he explained, were based on 1932 tax collections.

"If we assume that general revenues fall off 6 per cent during the coming year, which would amount to less than $1,8 0,000, it would still be possible to cut nearly 20 per cent," he stated.

Mr. Lusk called attention to the revenue from beer now adding to municipal receipts, and estimated that the District would get "almost $400,000" from license fees and the $1 a barrel tax. This estimate, however, District officials now believe is far too optimistic.

"In addition, the eighteenth amendment will undoubtedly be repealed by April 1, 1934," he added. "This means that the District can collect a tax from hard liquor, which, based on the amount of money raised here in preprohibition days, should produce certainly $300,000 to $400,000 additional, assuming that $2,000 was charged for the license of each on-sale license."

Text of Auditor's Report Suggesting Tax Rate Cut

The text of Auditor Daniel J. Donovan's report to the District Commissioners recommending a reduction in the realty and tangible personal property tax follows:

In recommending a tax rate of $1.50 on each $100 of assessed value of taxable real estate and tangible personal property for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1934, I desire to make the following observations:

The act of June 29, 1922, makes it the duty of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia annually to ascertain, determine and fix such rate of taxation as may be necessary to raise, with other revenues of the District of Columbia, sufficient revenues to pay the District's proportion of appropriations annually made by Congress nad other charges arising under permament and indefinite appropriation items. This act further provides that if, for any fiscal year after June 30, 1927, the District of Columbia should raise and deposit in the Treasury to its credit more money derived from taxation and privileges than may be necessary for the above purposes, such excess shall be available the succeeding year in the direction of the Commissioners, either for the purpose of meeting the expenses chargeable to the District of Columbia, and or for the further purpose of enabling the Commissioners to fix a lower rate of taxation for the year following the one in which the excess accrued.

At the beginning of the fiscal year 1930, the District of Columbia had in the United States Treasury to its credit surplus revenues (including the cash fund of $3,000,000 raised under the act of June 29, 1922) amounting to $8,689,664. Notwithstanding the fact that the act of June 29, 1922, vested the Commissioners with discretion to use excess revenues in reducing the tax rate, Congress, to prevent any possibility of such action being taken by the Commissioners, wrote into the District appropriation act for the fiscal year 1930 a prohibition against any such action being taken by the Commissioners by providing—

Nine Million Surplus In Federal Treasury.

"And the tax rate in effect in the fiscal year 1929 ($1.70 rate) on real estate and tangible personal property subject to taxation in the District of Columbia shall be continued for the fiscal year 1930."

At the beginning of the fiscal year 1931, the District of Columbia had in the United States Treasury surplus revenues (including the cash fund of $3,000,000 referred to) of $9,469,143. And again in this year Congress prohibited any exercise of discretion by the Commissioners toward reducing the tax rate by writing into the District appropriation act for the fiscal year 1931 the following language—

"And the tax rate in effect in the fiscal year 1930 ($1.70 rate) on real estate and tangible personal property subject to taxation in the District of Columbia shall not be decreased for the fiscal year 1931."

At the beginning of the fiscal year 1932, the District of Columbia had in the Treasury surplus revenues (including the $3,000,000 cash fund referred to) of $4,271,522. The District appropriation act for that year again prohibited any reduction in the tax rate through the insertion of the following language—

"And the tax rate in effect in the fiscal year 1931 ($1.70 rate) on real estate and tangible personal property subject to taxation in the District of Columbia shall not be decreased for the fiscal year 1932."

At the beginning of the fiscal year 1933 the District's surplus in the Treasury had fallen to $542,823, and this included the exhaustion of the $3,000,000 cash fund. Nevertheless, Congress, in the District appropriation act for that fiscal year continued its prohibition against any consideration by the Commissioners of a reduction in the tax rate by providing that "the tax rate in effect in the fiscal year 1932 ($1.70 rate) on real estate and tangible personal property subject to taxation in the District of Columbia shall not be decreased for the fiscal year 1933."

The fact should be noted that during these years, while the Commissioners were prohibited by law from decreasing the tax rate, they fixed for each of those years the lowest tax rate they could legally approve, namely, $1.70.

Analysis of District Appropriation Bill.

The District appropriation bill for the fiscal year 1934 totals $30,375,834. Included in this amount is $1,027,000 as the appropriation charge to the water revenues and $1,237,400 as the appropriation charge to the gasoline tax fund. The net difference of $28,111,434 represents the proportion of the total payable from the general revenues of the District. This report to the Commissioners will deal only with matters relating to the general revenue fund of the District. A later report in connection with the preparation of the District budget for the fiscal year 1935 will go into more extended consideration and include the water fund and the gasoline tax fund.

In addition to the $28,111,434 of general fund charges in the District bill for 1934, other charges must be provided for under other laws. Those include one-half of the Freedmen's Hospital appropriation, $136,015; estimated amount required for refunding erroneously paid taxes, $35,000; amount permitted to be expended under appropriation limitation for payments of awards and expenses in condemnation proceedings for the extension of streets and avenues, $25,000; estimated amount necessary to supply the deficit in 1934 in the policemen and firemen's pension fund, $710,000, and the estimated amount needed for settlement under the act of February 11, 1929, payment of judgments and possible deficiencies, $300,000. The total estimated charges against the general fund of the District for 1934 amount, therefore, to $29,319,449.

The estimated revenue availability of the District for the fiscal year 1934 amounts to $31,005,000. This includes $17,250,000 to be derived from the tax on real estate by the application of a $1.50 rate to the total assessed value of taxable real property of $1,150,000,000; $1,080,000 from the tax on tangible personal property to be raised from the application of the $1.50 rate to an estimated assessed value of $72,000,000; $1,875,000 to be raised from the tax on intangible personal property at the rate of $5 per $1,000 of assessed value; $1,900,000 as the estimated tax to be paid on gross earnings and receipts of public service corporations, banks, building associations, &c., and $3,700,000, representing the probable collections from miscellaneous sources, including the personal tax on motor vehicles, penalties on unpaid taxes, beer licenses and tax, fees, fines, business licenses, &c.

These several items total $25,705,000, and to this amount is added $600,000 as the estimated release of revenue reserve for unexpended balances of appropriations, and $5,700,000 as the Federal payment toward District appropriations for 1934.

The total estimated revenue availability for 1934 is $31,005,000, and the actual and estimated appropriation charges for that year amount to $29,319,449, leaving a surplus of revenue availability over appropriation obligations of $1,685,551.

In connection with the above surplus of revenue availability, it should be borne in mind that the appropriations for 1934, as carried in the District appropriation bill for that year, are reduced by $4,000,000 as the result of the operation of the economy act of March 20, 1933, imposing a cut of 15 per cent in salaries and the denial of longevity increases for school teachers, policemen and firemen.

Another matter to be considered in connection with the estimated surplus of $1,685,551 in 1934 relates to emergency relief. The District bill as agreed to provides for this purpose in that year $1,300,000. According to testimony presented to the Senate subcommittee in charge of the District bill, it would appear that this amount will be inadequate to complete the fiscal year, and that anywhere from $750,000 to $1,000,000 in additional appropriations will be necessary if reasonably adequate work of relief is to be carried on by the District government. Should the condition arise calling for this additional sum, it will be seen that the surplus for 1934 would approximate from $500,000 to $700,000.

It should be emphasized that there is a reduction in the assessed value of real estate for 1934, as compared with the total for 1933 of $80,000,000. In 1933 the total assessed value of real estate was $1,229,359,566. The estimated real estate assessment for 1934 is $1,150,000,000, a reduction of $79,359,566. This reduction in assessment values, at the rate of $1.70, represents a saving to the taxpayers of $1,360,000. The estimated assessment of $1,150,000,000, with the reduction of tax rate of $1.50, represents a saving to the taxpayers, as compared with the $1.70 rate of $2,300,000. For both purposes the savings to taxpayers totals $3,660,000, and this, based on the 1933 real estate levy, is equivalent to a savings to the taxpayers of 17½ per cent.

Information Concerning Fiscal Year of 1933.

On tangible personal property the estimated assessed value for 1934 is $72,000,000. The application of a $1.50 tax rate, as against the tax rate of $1.70, means a saving of $144,000 to taxpayers, or the equivalent of 12 per cent.

It is the opinion of the assessor of the District of Columbia, at this time, that a further reduction of about $50,000,000 may have to be made by him in the assessed value of real estate for the fiscal year, 1935.

I now desire to submit information to the Commissioners dealing with the fiscal year, 1933:

The total appropriations for 1933 payable from the general revenues of the District of Columbia, including permanent and indefinite items, amount to $39,698,836. This total is subject to reduction through savings arising under the economy acts of June 30, 1932, and March 20, 1933, of $2,550,000, making the net appropriations chargeable to the general fund of the District (some of the items still estimated at this time), $37,148,836.

The revenues of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year 1933, based upon actual collections for 11 months of the year and estimated collections for the month of June, 1933, total $27,791,119, made up of the tax on real estate, $19,500,420; tax on tangible personal property, including the tax on public service corporations, banks, building associations, &c., $3,082,585; tax on intangible personal property, $1,733,540, and miscellaneous items composed of the personal tax on motor vehicles, penalties on unpaid taxes, beer tax, fees, fines, &c., $3,474,574.

To this total of $27,791,119 is added $525,000 as the estimated amount of revenue reserve released for unexpended balances of appropriations; $7,775,000 as the Federal payment toward district appropriations for 1933, and $542,823 as the surplus brought forward from 1932. The total estimated revenue availability in 1933 is, therefore, $36,633,942.

The net appropriation charges for general fund items for 1933, as shown above, amount to $37,148,836, as against estimated revenue availability for that year of $36,633,942, leaving a revenue deficit for the year of $514,894. This deficit, if applied against the surplus in 1934, would reduce that surplus to approximately $1,100,000. It is believed, however, that this deficit in 1933 will be substantially, if not entirely, made up by moneys received for beer licenses now held in suspense pending the issuance of permanent licenses and by unexpended balances of 1933 appropriations, although such balances will not actually be released to the credit of the District until the issuance of the surplus warrant by the Treasury Department on June 30, 1935.

In the fiscal year 1933, the salary cuts caused by the economy acts total $2,550,000. Had it not been for these salary cuts, or in other words had salaries been paid on a normal basis in 1933, the District would have had at the close of that fiscal year a revenue deficit, that is, the difference between total appropriations and total revenue available, of $3,065,000.

The savings under the economy acts, practically entirely from salaries of District employes, including school teachers, policemen and firemen, for the two fiscal years, 1933 and 1934, amount to $6,550,000.

In the fiscal year 1932 the Federal payment toward District appropriations amounted to $9,500,000. For 1933 this payment is $7,775,000. For 1934 the payment is further reduced to $5,700,000. Therefore, between 1932 and 1934 the District of Columbia loses in revenue from this source as between these two years, $3,800,000. Other revenues of the District of Columbia have fallen off considerably. In 1932 the total revenues collected by the District amounted to $29,847,697. For 1933 (11 months' actual collections and one month estimated) the collections total $27,791,119, a loss of $2,056,578, as compared with the previous year.

In 1931, general revenues collected by the District of Columbia amounted to $30,322,738, or $2,531,619 more than it is estimated will be collected in the fiscal year 1933, and in the fiscal year 1930 the general revenue collections amounted to $30,125,874, or $2,334,755 more than will be collected in 1933.

CIVIL SERVICE PROBE TO OPEN TOMORROW

House investigation of alleged Civil Service Commission evasion of the old quota law in making appointments to the Federal service, will get under way in the House Civil Service Committee tomorrow morning, Chairman Lamar Jeffers announced last night.

Representative Jeffers made clear the investigation will not extend outside of the strict purposes of the House resolution. Only where other civil service functions tie into administration of the quota law, will they be inquired into, he said.

He indicated the committee's first act will be to appoint a subcommittee, which will make a brief study and report back to the full committee. He said the investigation should not require more than a few days.

The resolution directing the inquiry was passed by the House several weeks ago on motion of Representative William W. Hastings (Democrat), Oklahoma, who charged the Civil Service Commission frequently ignored the quota of workers each State is allotted under the apportioned service, in making Government appointments.

Penalties Begin Friday On Uncollected Taxes

Thursday of this week is the last day for the payment of taxes without penalty, and the office of the Fairfax County Treasurer will remain open until 9 p. m. Friday morning, June 16, an additional penalty of 5 per cent is added to the bill, and 6 per cent interest is also charged until the bill is paid.

Tax receipts in the treasurer's office for May show an increase over the same month of last year. This May $17,390 was paid, against $14,500 last year. Uncollected taxes amount to $36,210. Fewer persons have paid capitation taxes this year than last.

Senate Adopts Resolution Requesting Woodin to Exchange Issues.

(Associated Press.)

The Senate last night adopted a resolution by Bone (Democrat), of Washington, requesting Secretary Woodin to call upon holders to exchange outstanding Government bonds for a lower-interest issue entitled "the new liberty loan of 1933."

The vote was 69 to 1, with Logan (Democrat), Kentucky, casting the only negative ballot.

The resolution is not compulsory upon the Treasury head.

It sets forth in "whereases" that the British treasury successfully converted its war-time obligations from 5 per cent to 3½ per cent to effect a £38,000,000 annual saving in interest charges.

It said also that France accomplished a substantial reduction in the same way and that a reduction in the service costs of United States obligations "is consistent with a program of national economy."

Then the resolution said:

"Resolved, that the Senate of the United States request, and it hereby does request, the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States to call immediately upon holders of United States Government bonds, particularly those issued to finance the World War, to exchange their bonds for new bonds of an issue to be known as 'the new Liberty Loan of 1933,' and bearing a lower rate of interest which would effect a saving as nearly as possible sufficient to service such additional loans as may be made necessary by the pending public-works program, and by such other emergency needs of the Government as the President may see fit to prescribe, such conversion loan to bear interest, however, at a rate not less than the rate paid to depositors in United States Postal Savings Banks."

17 Jobless Women Reach First Camp

Bear Mountain, N. Y., June 10 (A. P.).—The first camp for unemployed women, known as Camp Tera, and suggested by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and Secretary of Labor Perkins, opened today with seventeen women, ranging in age from 18 to 30, arriving from New York.

For the first week, rest will be the order for the jobless women. Each Wednesday and Saturday a new contingent will arrive until the camp's capacity of 200 is filled. No wages will be paid the women, but they will be cared for completely. A cook and an assistant cook have been provided but the women will do the other chores.

Camp Tera, some 200 acres in extent, is on land of the State Conservation Commission, and is operated by the State Unemployment Relief Commission.

SMOOT HENCHMEN ANGER DEMOCRATS

Men Who Captured Utah for Party Are Kept From U. S. Jobs.

By J. BERNARD McDONNELL.

It may have been good or it may have been evil, depending on the point of view, but what former Senator Reed Smoot (Republican), Utah, did during the three decades he was a senator certainly is living after his official demise.

A result is that scores of good Democrats who helped swing Utah into the Democratic column last election are gnashing their teeth in fury over their inability to get even a few minor jobs.

"From Utah?" applicants are asked. "Well, that's too bad. We have more people on the rolls now from Utah than we should have, and with Congress raising heck about apportionment——"

"Yes," the Utahans are beginning to scream back, "but those are Utah Republicans. We're Democrats. Why——" and so on.

Democrats Frantic.

Democratic National Committeeman Ormond Ewing, of Utah, rapidly is approaching the fighting mad stage, to say nothing of Senator William H. King, the urbane and hardworking Democrat from the Salt Lake State. They can't get jobs for the Democrats who swung their State into the Democratic column last November for the second time in its history as a State.

Utah went Democratic for the President in 1916. Last November was the second time it voted for a Democratic Presidential candidate, but it was the first time the Democrats carried the State all down the line. Democratic leaders are anxious that recognition be given the workers who made this precedent-setting victory possible.

But the shade of the tall, quiet unoratorical but efficient Republican Reed Smoot is standing between the deserving Democrats and most any and all jobs.

Record for Job-Getting.

Unquestionably Senator Smoot excelled the record of any other senator in the history of the Nation in getting jobs for his friends. There isn't a bureau in Washington in which the senator didn't succeed in placing one or more good Republican Mormons. Estimates have run as high as 2,200 persons placed in Government jobs by Senator Smoot. The exact number can only be guessed at, but certainly no other member of the Senate ever was half as effective as Mr. Smoot when it came to placing Republicans in jobs, from the highest to the lowest classifications.

The result is that the Democratic Mormons and others are beating futilely against the patronage door. Whether the administration is going to recognize the fact that Utah Republicans have had both feet in the Federal job trough for a long number of years and take a hand in pushing them away so that a few Utah Democrats can get a job here and there remains to be seen. Rather sadly, Democratic leaders of the State admit that they do not hope to achieve the extraordinary feat of job-filling accomplished by the former Senator Smoot.

Democratic Clubs Plan Joint Outing

The Democratic clubs of Washington and vicinity will hold a joint outing at Colonial Beach, Va., Saturday and Sunday. The program consists of bathing, boating, a crab roast and beach sports. Miss Rita Cannon, of the Central Democratic Headquarters, is in charge of reservations.

At a recent meeting of the Democratic Union a committee was appointed to investigate a report that persons who enter this country on diplomatic passports as employes are allowed to remain indefinitely, thus occupying positions which deprive citizens from employment. Mrs. Edmund H. Brennan is chairman.

The last summer meeting of the organization was held Wednesday at the club headquarters, the Anne Clarendon Club. More than 200 members were registered. The club will begin the fall season in October.

NATIONAL U. GIVES DEGREES TUESDAY

Justice James M. Proctor and Secretary Roper to Be Honored.

Honorary degrees of doctor of laws will be conferred by National University on Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper, Associate Justice James M. Proctor, of the District Supreme Court, and Representative Charles West, of Ohio, at commencement exercises of the university Tuesday night in Memorial Continental Hall.

Law degrees, including six doctorates, will be given to 313 students. Formal action on the conferring of all degrees will be taken by the university's board of trustees at its traditional precommencement meeting tomorrow.

Secretary Roper, who received his academic training at Duke University from which he holds the bachelor of arts degree, pursued his law studies at National from which institution he received the bachelor of laws degree. He has been a member of the South Carolina House of Representatives and he served as First Assistant Postmaster General, as vice chairman of the U. S. Tariff Commission, and as Commissioner of Internal Revenue. He will receive the doctorate "for eminent services in the cause of efficient government."

Justice Proctor, who receives the bachelor of laws degree from Columbian (now George Washington) University, is a former assistant United States attorney for the District, chief assistant United States attorney for the District and Assistant Attorney General of the United States. He now is professor of the law of crimes at National University Law School and he will receive the degree "for distinguished services in the cause of law enforcement."

Representative West, graduate of Ohio Wesleyan and Harvard Universities, is a former vice consul at Naples, Italy. He was at one time an instructor in law at Harvard and at the College of Worcester, and also was professor of political science at Denison University. He will receive the degree "for distinguished services in the field of political science and government."

Representative West will deliver the commencement address in Tuesday night's exercises. The Rev. Joseph R. Sizoo, pastor of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, will ask the invocation and pronounce the benediction. James Joseph Butler will deliver the valedictory. Dr. Hayden Johnson, chancellor of the university, will preside.

"Y" Camp to Teach Old-Car Rebuilding

Boys of Camp Letts, Y. M. C. A. vacation haven on the Rhodes River in Maryland, which opens June 23, will be greeted this year by an amplified handicraft program, ranging from Indian crafts and model plane building to reclaiming old automobiles.

A total of fifteen types of handicraft work will be available to the campers this year, it was announced last night by James C. Ingram, camp director. Paul B. Osgood, of the Chicago Y. M. C. A. College, will be in charge of the program.

A new educational feature this summer will be a mechanical training course for boys who are mechanically minded. Motors for the use of the amateur mechanics are being donated by local automobile dealers. The instructor in this hobby will be Leslie Shaw, who has been a member of the Camp Letts staff for several years and who is experienced in mechanical fields.

Steinburg to Address Elementary Graduates

Prof. F. S. Steinburg will deliver the commencement address to a class of 36 at the graduation exercises of the East Silver Spring Elementary School tomorrow night at 8 o'clock in the auditorium of the Takoma-Silver Spring High School. The program will include songs by the class, the presentation of awards and recitations.

Theodore Halbert Wilson, director of National Park Seminary, will address the graduation class at Woodside School the same evening, when 34 will graduate. Prizes and diplomas will be awarded, and the class history, prophecy, salutatory and valedictory given.

FLAG PROGRAM SET AT SYLVAN THEATER

Address by Senator Walsh Will Climax Ceremonies on Wednesday Night.

Plans for an inspirational patriotic program in honor of Flag Day have been completed by the committee representing the Grand Army of the Republic, and the Woman's Relief Corps, assisted by the Sons of Veterans, Daughters of Veterans, and other organizations, including the Daughters of America, Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, also United States Army, Navy and Marine Corps, Office of Public Buildings and Public Parks, and the Community Center Department. Mrs. Cora L. Manoly, patriotic instructor of the Woman's Relief Corps, and Everett F. Warner, patriotic instructor of the Department of the Potomac, G. A. R., have been in charge of arrangements for the ceremonies, which will take place in the National Sylvan Theater, at the Washington Monument, Wednesday evening, at 7:30 o'clock.

Senator David I. Walsh, of Massachusetts, will deliver an address in honor of the flag, and its history, climaxing a series of colorful ceremonies built around the flag itself. A presentation of the colors to Commander J. H. Sheppard, of the Department of the Potomac, G. A. R., by Percy Parker, color bearer of the department, will be followed by the oath of allegiance led by Mrs. Manoly.

Patriotic Drill by Women.

The Daughters of America will present a patriotic drill led by Drill Master R. G. Lewis; Mrs. Dorothy Pierson and Mrs. Marie C. Deale will be heard in patriotic songs, and a detail of soldiers, sailors and marines will present the colors as the finale. The United States Marine Band, conducted by Capt. Taylor Branson, will play a concert program from 7:30 to 8 p. m., preceding the formal ceremonies.

The invocation will be by the Rev. Charles T. Warner and the benediction by Chaplain William Dorsey, Grand Army of the Republic. Commander Sheppard of the Grand Army of the Republic will be introduced by Patriotic Instructor Warner and will preside. Commander Sheppard will present Mrs. Anna Horn, president of the Woman's Relief Corps.

In case of inclement weather on Wednesday evening, the ceremonies will take place in Central High School auditorium, which has been obtained for the occasion through the cooperation of the Community Center Department. A rehearsal of participating groups in the ceremonies will take place Tuesday at 5 p. m. at the Sylvan Theater under the direction of Marie Moore Forrest.

Amplifiers Will Be Provided.

The U. S. Signal Corps will provide the amplifiers and the War Department will provide 1,500 chairs for the crowd expected to attend.

The executive committee for the Flag Day exercises comprises the following: J. H. Sheppard, commander department of the Potomac, G. A. R.; Mrs. Anna Horn, department president, W. R. C.; Mrs. Cora L. Manoly, patriotic instructor, W. R. C.; Everett F. Warner, patriotic instructor, department of the Potomac, G. A. R.; Mrs. Esther Lippold, president, Daughters of Union Veterans, assisted by Mrs. A. Genevieve Craig, patriotic instructor, Daughters of Union Veterans; Mrs. Helen Luckett, assistant State councilor, Daughters of America; Mrs. Helen Temple, Woman's Relief Corps; Mrs. Elizabeth K. Peeples, director Community Center Department; Mrs. Marie Moore Forrest, Community Center Department; Harold Snyder, Community Center Department; Col. E. L. Mattice, D. C. Boy Scouts; Miss Harriet Johnson, D. C. Girl Scouts.

Tiny Bluenose Leaves On World's Fair Cruise

St. John's, Newfoundland, June 10 (A.P.).—Bound for Chicago and the Century of Progress Exposition, after the manner of the bigger vessel Bluenose, a 10-ton sailing craft, Spirit of Newfoundland, cleared from St. John's today and headed for the Strait of Belle Isle. Bank's Receivers Seeking Collateral

Richmond, Va., June 10 (A.P.).—Receivers for the American Bank & Trust Co. of Richmond, announced today that they will ask the Reconstruction Finance Corporation tomorrow to surrender to them approximately $5,000,000 in collateral now held as security for a loan which has been reduced to less than $1,300,000.

The receivers will tender trust receipts to the R. F. C., under which they pledge to reduce the R. F. C. indebtedness as rapidly as loans are paid. All preferred claims must be paid in full before funds can be made available to depositors.

By obtaining possession of the $5,000,000 collateral, the receivers pointed out, they will be in position to permit deposit offsets against loans as soon as the R. F. C. indebtedness is paid in full.

Elephant Trumpets Its First Victory Over Donkey Since November Election

G. O. P. House Members Capture Ball Game by 18 to 16.

By EDMUND G. MONK.

The grand old party's bull elephant was trumpeting a victory cry last night—the House of Representatives Republican baseball nine had fought an uphill battle at Griffith Stadium to register the first outstanding win over their colleagues across the aisle since the November avalanche. The score was 18 to 16.

The President wasn't there to see his boys in Congress take it on the chin, nor was the Vice President, but most everybody else was there except J. P. Morgan and his midget friend from the circus.

Gene Tunney was there as umpire in chief. He is far superior to Brick Owens, if the lack of protests against his decision is a criterion.

Al Jolson came to town for the Congressional one-game world series. This is Al's home town, but Nick Altrock, our own baseball comedian, made Al really groan "mammy" in an impromptu wrestling match before the game that brought roar after roar of laughter.

Lending color and music to the pre-game spectacle and in between inning interludes were the Army and Marine Bands. Before the game they paraded about the stadium and then led a march of the players, Gene Tunney, Clark Griffith and others to the flagpole in deep center where the Stars and Stripes were hoisted as the crowd stood and the service bands played the national anthem.

Gen. John J. Pershing showed up about the ending of the second inning and received a big hand from the crowd.

Other notables there included Edward F. Colladay, Republican Na-

There were approximately 6,000 paid admissions. A crowd of about 3,700 was actually in the stands. Proceeds will go to charity.

After the game Colladay, with a great big beam for the G. O. P. triumph, presented a hugh 5-gallon silver loving cup to Representative Vincent "Nick" Carter, of Wyoming, captain and pitcher of the Republican nine.

Collector Spends 30 Years in Search for Authenticated Pieces.

Gadsby's Tavern, Alexandria, Va., will be opened to the public, next Thursday, with a private collection of early American furniture and household effects on exhibition. This is the Henderson collection, the work of over 30 years of Mrs. Mark M. Henderson, who formerly owned Michie Tavern, near Charlottesville, where she gradually accumlated the furniture. The furniture is suited to a tavern and in keeping with early days of the country in the struggle to furnish a house. Mrs. Henderson has accepted only authenticated pieces.

Gadsby's Tavern and Old City Hotel, companion buildings, the first and smaller building erected in 1752 and for 40 years known as the Alexandria Tavern; the larger building erected in 1792 and both then leased to John Gadsby, whose name has since been used continuously in referring to these historic buildings.

In 1928 the idea was conceived of purchasing these buildings and saving them from decay as a permanent home for Alexandria Post, No. 24, American Legion, and establishing therein a permanent memorial to Alexandria's World War dead, and plans were then outlined by a special committee looking to the purchase and restoration of these famous houses. The American Legion Post with the assistance of a number of patriotic organizations has endeavored to meet the payment on the notes given, and this exhibition is to that end. This famous collection has been leased from Mrs. Henderson for a year and the proceeds from the showing will be applied to the debt contracted in 1928.

Press Preview Given.

A preview of the collection was given to members of the press last Tuesday and a showing will be arranged prior to the public opening for a number of special guests. Invitations have been sent to Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Mrs. John N. Garner, the ladies of the United States Senate and many other prominent persons.

Among some of the pieces to be seen is a plain pine trestle table, made in 1763 and until moved to Gadsby's Tavern the past month, had been in Michie Tavern, Albemarle County, from the day it was finished. Thomas Jefferson and Andrew Jackson sat at this table to discuss the battle of New Orleans. Tarleton and his officers ate at the table when they raided Monticello and almost succeeded in capturing Jefferson.

The cavalry flag carried by Col. Blackburn during the Revolution is framed and hangs over the mantel. An old iron, a "tailor's goose," came from Andrew Johnson's tailor shop in Greenville, Tenn.

Courtyard Is Restored.

From the window of this room is seen the courtyard, restored by the Alexandria Garden Club with cobblestones from the old streets of Alexandria and brick from Abingdon, the home of Nellie Custis, which was located near Alexandria, just off what is now the Mount Vernon Memorial boulevard, between Alexandria and Washington. The house completely destroyed, with only a small portion of the old chimneys left to mark the spot where it stood.

An eighteenth century carriage has been placed in the yard, making the scence from the Lafayette room window most realistic. The old carriage is of the coach type, evidently homemade and crude, but giving a wonderful insight into the mode of travel of the colonial days.

The room used as a passage into the newer building has in it an early American bench that up to the present has had only one home, the porch at Michie Tavern.

In restoring the old City Hotel lobby for the reenactment of a birthnight ball, February 22, 1932, as a Bicentennial offering of Mount Vernon Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution and Alexandria committee of the Colonial Dames, the worn floor boards gave indication to those versed in historic lore of the place and size of the bar, most important to the early settlers.

The bar has been reproduced from pictures of bars of that period, and is stocked with bottles of interesting size and contour, if not contents. Near the bar is placed the "Sunday sideboard," a desk-like piece of furniture where the food prepared on Saturday was placed for Sunday consumption, as no work was done on the Sabbath. This large room is filled with suitable pieces, all authentic early American.

Room Holds Jefferson Statue.

The parlor is furnished in Chippendale and Heppelwhite. A beautiful center stool, exquisitely upholstered in petit point, was carved by the master, Chippendale, himself. In this room is a wooden statue of Jefferson, carved by David, who carved statuettes of the first three Presidents. It shows the Sage of Monticello with one hand resting on a tablet on which is inscribed "Declaration of Independence, July 4, 1776."

The Heppelwhite sideboard in the dinning room belonged to Carrol, of Carrollton, Md., and on it are two knife boxes, perfectly matching the wood of the sideboard. Mrs. Henderson spent many years in locating these pieces. This sideboard is possibly the gem of the collection and is the envy of all antique collectors. Some old Georgian silver and two lovely thumb decanters stand on it.

The banquet table, an exquisite piece of wood, was owned by President Monroe, and on it is a Lowestoft bowl, similar to one at Mount Vernon. There are 12 Chippendale chairs in the room and an old corner cupboard containing a rare collection of bell glass, genuine blue sandwich glass and several other glasses. A lady's liquor box on the window ledge in the parlor is offset by the gentleman's liquor box of much larger dimensions in the dining room window.

The second floor shows the lady's parlor, or the colonial bed room occupied by the mistress of the house. This large room has complete furnishings of the eighteenth century, with many authentic pieces. A Queen Anne bed is draped in block print that depicts the seven ages of man, with the prayer stool beside the bed. An early American pine bride's chest is a rare piece. A wonderful genuine Carver chair, tripod table, two American butterfly tables, a highboy and a lowboy, Queen Anne mirrors, sweetheart mirrors, ironstone bowl and pitcher sets, Lowestoft vases on the mantel, turkey feather fans by the fireplace, hand-woven towels and hooked rugs are some of the treasures in this room.

First American Cast Work.

In this room is also one of the first American attempts at castiron work, a mirror frame made as a compliment to Jenny Lind. It depicts her on either side of the glass, with two ships below, and an American flag worked into the design.

Perhaps one of the most interesting parts of the collection is on the third floor—the children's room; the first two for the older young people, while the north room is the nursery, with its trundle bed, cradle, which is duplicated in the doll's cradle and the rocking horse. The gem of this collection is the small wooden chair made for President Monroe when he was a small boy, and given in later years by Monroe to a member of the maker's family. The grand-daughter, who was 99 years old, presented the chair to Mrs. Henderson.

The cellar is fitted as a kitchen, containing articles that a modern housewife would marvel over, and give thanks for her compact kitchenette and perfected utensils. The many interesting things in this room must be seen to appreciate the cooking problems of the colonists. A winnowing board and a cheese drip and press comprise two rarely seen articles.

Catholic Summer Term Set at Berkeley Springs

Special to The Washington Post.

Berkeley Springs, W. Va., June 10.—Plans for a summer school at St. Vincent's Catholic Church here have been announced by the pastor, the Rev. James H. McConnell. It will run four weeks, starting June 25, and will be conducted by a faculty of theological students from various seminaries under the supervision of Father McConnell.

The teachers will be Henry F. Murphy, A. B., and William J. Brown, A. B., both of Mount St. Mary's, Emmitsburg, Md.; Eugene A. Walsh, A. B., of Sulpician Seminary, Catholic University, Washington, and Herbert McElroy, A. B., of Immaculate Conception Seminary, Brooklyn, N. Y. The school, the announcement said, will be open to children here regardless of denominational background.

Alexandria Man Finds Body Floating in River

The body of a man believed to be Erich Kruse, 28, who was drowned Thursday night while bathing in the Potomac off the S. S. Veedol, was found floating in the river yesterday at the foot of Wolfe street, Alexandria, by Gardner Lloyd Arnold. The body was removed to the District Morgue by the harbor police boat.

Kruse was a native of Germany, and had joined the ship in Bayonne, N. J., about a week previous to his drowning.

Graduate Had 11 Years Of Perfect Attendance

Special to The Washington Post.

Hamilton, Va., June 10.—Thomas Clagett, 15-year-old son of Dr. and Mrs. J. E. Clagett, of Hamilton, Va., and a graduate this year of Lincoln High School, has the unusual record of perfect attendance through both grade and high school.

Young Clagett, who is an honor graduate, was neither absent nor tardy during his seven years in grade school and four years in high school. He is active in athletics.

The organization unanimously indorsed the candidacy of William D. Medley as the Democratic nominee for the House of Delegates from Arlington County.

VETERAN RELIEF ACT TO COST $80,000,000

Compromise Measure Made Up of Three Parts Rests in Conference.

(Associated Press.)

The Roosevelt compromise on veterans' benefits under the economy act, which rested in conference last night when a recess was taken, was a composite of three parts, and is estimated to cost around $80,000,000.

The phases are:

The Senate amendment to the independent offices appropriation bill limiting reductions in compensation to 25 per cent.

The President's letter to House steering committee promising to make provisions by regulations for Spanish-American War veterans over 55 years of age.

Review Boards Provided.

Under the compromise in the independent offices bill, veterans presumed to be disabled as a result of service, are to be reduced to 25 per cent, but may remain on the rolls until October 31, unless their injuries are found not to be service connected.

Boards are to be set up by the President to review the presumptive cases.

Men who entered the service after November 11, 1918, and before the peace treaty was signed in 1921, are not to receive benefits as under existing authority.

Pensions to widows and children or dependent parents of veterans who died of service connected or presumptive ailments are to be continued at the rate paid on March 20, 1933.

Under the new regulations, no directly service-connected disability compensation is reduced more than 25 per cent, with the average at 18 per cent.

In a White House statement, it was said:

"Under this regulation the service-connected Spanish-American War veterans and some of the peace-time veterans will receive payments substantially in excess of those which they were receiving prior to the passage of the economy act.

"With respect to World War veterans, this regulation increases the payments to those suffering from specific injuries such as $150 a month for those who have lost both hands or both feet and one hand or foot, or in any case where the person is so helpless as to be in need of regular aid or attendance, and in addition, in the case of the more severely injured, the President's new regulations increase the allowance from $150 per month to $175 per month."

Spanish War Increases.

In the case of the Spanish War Veteran over 62 years of age and who had served 90 days or more, even though they may be suffering from non-service-connected disabilities, rates are increased from $6 to $15 a month, and in the case of either Spanish-American War or World War veterans who are permanently and totally disabled, the rate is increased from $20 to $30 a month.

The new regulation also liberalizes allowances pertaining to burial and funeral expenses to veterans; provides that pensions shall continue to be payable to children of deceased veterans up to the age of 18 years, and in the event of a child being in an approved school or college, the pension may continue for an additional period until completion of the course, but not beyond the age of 21 years.

First 5-Person Board Is Named for Schools

Special to The Washington Post.

Moorefield, W. Va., June 10.—The first five-person school board to be constituted under the newly-enacted county unit plan for West Virginia has been named for Hardy County.

Word from W. W. Trent, State superintendent of schools, charged with setting up such a board in each of the 55 counties before July 1, was received yesterday, saying he had named for this county the following: Joseph T. Frye, Capon District; C. C. Fisher, South Fork District; Howard Beals, Lost River District; H. C. Welton, Moorefield District. These four, it was stated, are to select the fifth member.

Alexandria Odd Fellows Elect C. A. Padgett Head

Potomac Lodge of Odd Fellows, of Alexandria, has elected these officers for the ensuing six months: C. A. Padgett, noble grand; J. R. Walter, vice grand; George W. Bontz, treasurer. The new officers will be installed on July 7.

A committee of the lodge is perfecting plans for the annual picnic, to be given at some nearby resort in Maryland.

The Arlington Chapter, No. 149, United Daughters of Confederacy, has elected as its president Mrs. Pemmie Roger Yetton; Miss Frances McLean, vice president; Mrs. Eleanor Freeman Hatcher, treasurer; Mrs. Bessie H. Palmer, historian; Mrs. Lulu McLean Taylor, recording secretary; Mrs. Anne M. Ferguson, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Eula Turman Maffett, chaplain.

Alexandria Grand Jury To Weigh Murder Case

A grand jury has been summoned to meet in the Corporation Court of Alexandria tomorrow, to consider one murder case, one of manslaughter, and several of minor assault.

Those summoned to serve on the jury are John D. Normoyle, Carroll Pierce, A. C. Howard, O. H. Kirk, Thomas E. Sebrell, Joseph H. Newell, and J. E. W. Timberman.

Cemetery Is Restrained From Abolishing Drives

Special to The Washington Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., June 10.—An injunction restraining Greenhill Cemetary Co. here from cutting up driveways in the cemetery to make room for further burial plots has been upheld by West Virginia Court of Appeals.

"Only Game Fish Swim Upstream"

By GEORGE D. RILEY

WITH the moon just right, no nor'easter in sight, the tide and current predictions arranged satisfactorily, and the weather in every way perfect, the "old regulars" of the Coast and Geodetic Survey Fishing Club trekked to Shady Side last Saturday, where Capt. Crandall Trott took them where they landed 29 hardheads.

Of course, Commodore Jim Griffin just had to land an eel and a toadfish, but Capt. N. H. Heck did the same thing, which put him in the Griffin class.

Those who had fish on the supper table both Sunday and Monday were James M. Griffin, Clement L. Garner, N. H. Heck, D. L. Parkhurst, Henry G. Avers, Louis B. Diggins, Francis L. Gallen, N. G. Henry and C. C. Weidemann. Anglers are looking forward to the fishing rodeo to which reference has been made by The Washington Post Federal Diary.

DEFILING OF WATER.

With the increasing activity of awakening industry and the hot weather the pollution of streams is brought strongly to the attention of the public, particularly the fisherman who is pursuing his sport in many cases along the banks of the defiled waters, officials of the American Game Association declare.

And now comes the United Sportsmen (Inc.) of Indiana with a legal-tight plan to stop pollution in that State. This plan, with modifications, can be made to work in every State in the Union—stopping once and for all the pollution of streams, officials of the association believe. The idea is to make pollution too expensive for the polluters.

"The only cry remaining to the polluters is the excuse that it will cost too much money to correct their evil practices," Howard M. Meyer, president of the United Sportsmen, and himself a leading attorney of Indianapolis, said in explaining the plan. "United Sportsmen propose to teach as a fundamental fact of economics that however much it may cost now in dollars to make proper disposal of municipal and industrial wastes it is going to cost more dollars to continue pollution of public waters—and suits for damages.

"Under the laws of this State (and of most other States) a landowner whose property is injured may recover substantial damages from the individual or corporation causing the damage. Each landowner through or beside whose land flows a polluted stream obviously is damaged by the pollution of that stream. United Sportsmen propose to furnish proper assistance to unfortunate landowners whose lands are damaged, and, within the law, to assist in recovering substantial damages from the polluter so long as the pollution continues. For example: Let us say that 25 of these landowners bring 25 suits for damages against the polluter and changes of venue are taken so that the polluter will be fighting 25 lawsuits in at least five or more counties. Legal history leads us to believe that damages will be awarded the landowner in each of the actions. . . . We will keep filing new suits for damages against the polluter so long as the pollution continues," Mr. Meyer concluded.

I WONDER how many know the painted bunting of the nonpareil. It is a bird upon whose plumage nature has lavished her richest colors. The correct spelling is "pape," the French for pope. The name "nonpareil" means "none can equal." This is the gaudiest of all North American birds.

The following colors decorate its pretty feathers: Indigo, gold, blue, green, dull red and bright red.

The bright creatures live alike in city and country, in lawns and gardens and in brushy pastures and thickets, but never in thick, heavy woods.

The song of the nonpareil is short, loud and clear. Its pleasing notes are heard early in the morning, and one who gets up early in the morning during May and June is almost certain to hear him call, "Pew-cata, pew-cata, I eat—you—too," as he balances himself on the topmost branch of a tall tree.

Failing to make its spring call at Martha's Vineyard, authorities and scientists fear the world's most famous bird, the last surviving heath hen, is dead. In fact, a reward has been offered to the finder of the bird with its leg bands to certify the authenticity.

LET us ramble over to the Eastern Shore and see what the boys are bragging about. We don't blame them for boasting about the "Shore" because God made it as near perfect as possible. Here we find copious all that appeases.

We will take the good motor ship John M. Dennis for Claiborne or the equally fine Governor Albert C. Ritchie for Matapeake, either will save you time and mileage to the best fishing grounds on the Eastern seaboard. After leaving the pier at Claiborne or Matapeake we journey a short distance to Tilghman Island. Here we will find experienced fishing guides who can put you on the "spot." We learn that large catches of hardhead, rock, trout and blues are being taken, with favorable weather conditions, daily. You will find Tilghman an ideal fishing location with every advantage. Rates and overnight accommodations are moderate and Eastern Shore hospitality prevails.

From all reports we probably would like to try our luck in Eastern Bay, Prospect Bay and Choptank River. These tributaries of the mighty Chesapeake Bay are in the vicinity of Claiborne and Matapeake. Numerous fishing camps are situated on and near these waters with experienced guides at nominal cost. Facilities for week-end fishing trips are most inviting. A trip worthy of greater effort and expense lies within the reach of the alert angler. A few minutes will tell us that these fish are being caught by trolling or still fishing, this being optional to the fisherman but suggestive by the captain, who knows his fish. Peeler crab is the common bait and is proving most satisfactory.

For the surf fisherman, let us motor over to Bowers Beach, Del., and work down the coast to Rehoboth Beach, Del., Ocean City, Md., Wachapreague and Cheriton on the Eastern Shore of Virginia. All of the mentioned resorts are excellent for surf fishing as well as trolling or still fishing. Here we have the deep-sea or surf. Reports are most favorable to the extent that fisherman are taking species of channel bass, trout, rock and blues that are realized mostly in fish stories. You will be told that the large species are taken by trolling. The Hunnington spoon is being used to a good advantage.

General fishing conditions and the run of fish are par excellent. It was the pleasure of many fishermen to note that last season (1932 fishing season) was most extraordinary and to their sorrow would not return in 1933. But they are wrong. Returning with prosperity is a bigger and better fishing 1933 season.

FRANCIS P. LEITHISER.

THE District of Columbia Federation of Citizens Associations, on June 8, upon recommendation of a joint committee composed of its city planning and highways, park and waterways committees, placed itself upon record sponsoring construction of a municipal sewage disposal plant by passage of the following resolution:

Whereas the District of Columbia is pumping an average of about 90,000,000 gallons of sewage per day into the Potomac River, with a maximum of 100,000,000 gallons per day;

And whereas, the District of Columbia has at present no facilities for treatment of this sewage to avoid pollution of the Potomac River, other than a coarse screen for the removal of the larger solids and trash suspended therein;

And whereas, the United States Public Health Service in its report of January 16, 1933, on Disposal of Sewage in the Potomac River, known as Public Document 172, of Seventy-second Congress, second session, has reported a degree of pollution resulting from the flow of sewage into the river and its tributaries from the District of Columbia, Alexandria, Va., Arlington County, Va., and certain of the suburban communities of the Washington Metropolitan Area of Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties, Md., which has assumed the proportions of a major public health problem, as well as maintenance by this District of a nuisance condition;

And whereas the aforesaid report of the U. S. Public Health Service has recommended as a present remedy for this condition the construction of primary sewage treatment works, later to be fitted into a final completed scheme of sewage treatment;

Therefore, be it resolved that the District of Columbia Federation of Citizens Associations in regular meeting assembled, this 3d day of June, 1933, goes on record as urging the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to take definite steps to establish a sewage disposal plant for this District to care for its present needs, such plant to embody only primary treatment involving a coarse screening, rapid sedimentation for grit removal, followed by slow sedimentation for removal of settleable solids and either separate sludge digestion, or chemical treatment and filtering of settleable solids;

Be it further resolved that this federation urge the District Commissioners to incorporate in the District's budget for the fiscal year 1935 an item to provide for designs and specifications for such a plant;

Be it further resolved that copies of this resolution be forwarded to the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, to the chairmen of the District of Columbia committees of the United States Senate and of the House of Representatives, and to the National Capital Park and Planning Commission;

And further be it resolved that the attention of the interfederation conference be invited to the condition of pollution of the Potomac and Anacostia Rivers and Rock Creek through flow of domestic or sanitary sewage into those streams within the Washington metropolis area and that its cooperation be requested in the elimination of this condition.

However, the effort of the federation, powerful as it is, means the effort of only one of the District's major civic organizations to place the District of Columbia in line with other municipalities throughout the country which have recognized the necessity of conserving the health of congested centers of population by modern, sanitary devices for sewage treatment and disposal.

The added support of this project with persistent pressure, by the Washington Chamber of Commerce, Board of Trade and Merchants and Manufacturers Association would go far toward making a reality of the federation's recommendation.

SENATE CONFIRMS MANY NOMINATIONS

(Associated Press.)

President Roosevelt's action in sending a rush of last-minute nominations to Capitol Hill yesterday brought the biggets single day's batch of confirmations in history.

More than a hundred major civilian nominations were rushed through the Senate during the day, including many important diplomatic officers and appointments to key positions in the executive branch of the Government.

In addition, the Senate approved 330 Army and 200 Navy nominations, chiefly of a routine nature.

All day long messages from the White House brought additional nominations. Committees were rapidly called together to approve them, and they were pushed through the Senate in record-breaking time.

Only One Opposed.

Serious opposition developed to only one—that of Walter Newton, former secretary to President Hoover, to be a member of the Home Loan Bank Board.

He was finally confirmed by 43 to 30.

Among the more important nominations confirmed were, Robert P. Skinner, of Ohio, Ambassador to Turkey; William E. Dodd, of Illinois, as Ambassador to Germany; John Cudahy, of Wisconsin, as Ambassador to Poland; William Standley, as Chief of Naval Operations; C. B. Merriam, of Kansas and former Senator Blaine (Republican), Wisconsin, to be members of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation Board; Harry E. Payer, of Ohio, to be Assistant Secretary of State, and J. J. Thomas, of Nebraska, and S. Szymczak, of Illinois, as members of the Federal Reserve Board.

Muscle Shoals Posts.

Harcourt A. Morgan, of Tennessee, and David E. Lilienthal, of Wisconsin, were confirmed as members of the Tennessee Valley Authority in charge of the Muscle Shoals development program.

Led by the veteran George W. Norris, of Nebraska, six Independent Republicans joined 24 Democrats in voting against confirmation of Newton. They were defeated, however, when 43 votes were cast for Newton, provided by 24 Republicans and 19 Democrats.

The selection of Newton, once a member of the House from Minnesota, Norris said, was "almost a slap in the face at every Progressive Republican in the United States." Of the nominee, Norris said:

"While this man was at the White House, all sorts of machinations went on there to the detriment of what is known as the Progressive Republican wing."

Newton Is Confirmed.

Cutting, of New Mexico; Johnson, of California, and La Follette, of Wisconsin, active in behalf of the candidacy of President Roosevelt, voted with Norris and Nye and Frazier, of North Dakota, against him.

Nye lost a motion to send the nomination back to the Banking Committee, the usual parliamentary procedure to kill an appointment, by a [illegible] to 33 vote.

White (Republican), Maine, speaking for Newton said he was "a man of ability, character and courage and I believe those qualifications entitle him to nomination by the President and favorable consideration by this body."

Dickinson (Republican), Iowa, keynoter at the last Republican convention, called to Norris' attention that the nomination of former Senator Blaine (Republican), Wisconsin, to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation board was coming up and, referring to Blaine's association with the independents, said:

"This game can be played by both groups on the Republican side."

Diplomats Are Named.

Among those approved almost as fast as their names were called were Francis White, of Maryland, Minister of Czechoslovakia, John Flournoy Montgomery, of California, Minister to Hungary; Robert Granville Caldwell, of Texas, Minister to Portugal; and Alvin Mansfield Owsley, of Texas, Minister to Roumania.

Meanwhile, W. W. Howes, second Assistant Postmaster General, announced formally the appointment of Stephen A. Cisler, of Fort Worth, Tex., to be superintendent of the airmail service. Verification of the naming of Cisler had been given out in advance.

Chase C. Grove, deputy second assistant Postmaster General, was named assistant general superintendent of the railway mail service, and Jesse M. Donaldson, now postoffice inspector in charge at Chattanooga, Tenn., was selected to replace him.

Others Are Confirmed.

At the same time, the Senate was confirming:

John H. Fahey, of Massachusetts, to be a member of the Federal Home Loan Board.

J. Enos Ray, of Maryland, to be collector of internal revenue.

Russell Hawkins, of Oregon, to the Home Loan Bank Board.

Harry F. Payer, of Ohio, to be Assistant Secretary of State.

W. Frank Persons, of District of Columbia, to be director of the United States employment service.

[illegible] Parker, of Kansas, to be [illegible] agent of the Postoffice [illegible]

Arlington to Take Bids On Collection of Refuse

The Arlington County Board will receive bids until 10 a. m. next Saturday for the collection and disposal of garbage, trash, refuse and ashes from August 1 next to June 30, 1934.

A bidder's bond of $1,000 will be required with each proposal and the successful bidder will be required to furnish a surety bond of $30,000 to insure the faithful performance of the contracts. Specification and proposal forms may be obtained from County Manager Roy S. Braden, at the courthouse.

National Depositors Parley Demands Bank Reopenings

Clamoring depositors in closed banks of the country demanded governmental action for release of their money yesterday at the first meeting of the National Depositors Committee at the Mayflower Hotel. Five hundred delegates, representing 20,000,000 depositors having $8,000,000,000 in restricted or closed banks throughout the Nation, assembled at the hotel to plan a relief program.

They applauded when Frank H. Schrenk, Philadelphia banker, chairman of the committee, criticized the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, local committees of the Federal Reserve system and "New York bankers" for their methods.

A resolution passed by the body, calling on Congress to remain in session until relief is granted to depositors in restricted and closed banks, was forwarded to Congress.

Organization and investigation committees will be appointed shortly in each Federal Reserve district and a legal committee will be named to investigate action of clearing house committes to see whether there is need for legal action in the cause of depositors' relief.

Reopening Is Demanded.

The general program provides for liberalization of Reconstruction Corporation loan restrictions and Federal Reserve Banks' rules regarding closed banks' paper. Mr. Schrenk demands 100 per cent reopening of restricted banks and 60 per cent payment to depositors of banks closed before the banking holiday.

The following list of reforms, adopted by the assemblage, will be presented to President Roosevelt tomorrow by Mr. Schrenk, Philadelphia banker, chairman of the committee, and A. Mitchell Palmer, former Attorney General, its counsel.

"1. The Reconstruction Finance Corporation, which has operated with all the rigid rules and regulations of investment bankers, for the purpose of saving losses to the Government, and even making a profit for itself, should adopt a policy of saving losses to depositors without regard for profits to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

R. F. C. Policy Opposed.

"2. The policy of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation should contemplae recovery in business and not universal bankruptcy and the government should await the return of that recovery before liquidating assets which secure deposits frozen during the existing emergency.

"3. The Reconstruction Finance Corporation should release to the closed and restricted banks all their prime and unquestioned assets in order that such banks may reopen and the depositors be credited on their books with such proportion of their deposits as are secured by such assets.

"4. The Reconstruction Finance Corporation should accept in lieu of such unquestioned assets now held by it as security for loans the slow or frozen assets of closed and restricted banks which should be liquidated only over a period of years as prices advance in response to the policies of the administration now being considered or heretofore enacted into law.

Reserve Cooperation Asked.

"5. Such slow or frozen assets should be accepted by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation on the basis of values of 1926 and loans made thereon to the amount of 80 per cent of such values.

"6. Federal Reserve banks during the emergency should accept the rediscountable paper of customers of closed and restricted banks at par.

"7. Income on collateral of closed and restricted banks should be paid to the bank when and as received for the purpose of facilitating their banking business and interest charged to the bank on such loans should not exceed the rate the Government pays on its own loans for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation act.

Accounting Plan Offered.

"8. Credits granted by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and Federal Reserve banks to closed and restricted banks after the deposit of collateral should be carried on the borrowing banks' books as cash.

"9. The Reconstruction Finance Corporation should purchase capital stock of restricted banks dollar for dollar of the amount which is sold by the bank, including sales to its own depositors to be paid for out of balances now tied up in such banks.

"10. The various local Reconstruction Finance committees which pass on collateral submitted by restricted and closed banks are the representatives of the larger and open banks of the communities and these banks, as a class, do not want the restricted banks to be reopened. The depositors of restricted banks can not secure fair play from present existing committees. These committees should be reorganized to include representatives of restricted and closed banks.

"11. The depositors of closed banks which do not reopen under the plan above set forth should be immediately repaid by the Federal Government 80 per cent of their frozen deposits and the Government should accept from said depositors assignment of their bank balances and from their banks an assignment of assets which should be liquidated over a period of years and not at present deflated prices.

"12. We urge the prompt enactment of the Glass-Steagall banking reform bill. This legislation is required in the interest of the depositors of every bank in the country and would have been passed long ago, except for the violent and apparently effective opposition of the large banking interests in New York, who plan to destroy the independence of the country banker, and are willing to sacrifice the interests of the suffering depositors to their own ambition to control the banking system of the United States. The insidious and vicious methods by which these interests have sought influence in high places to accomplish these ends is the greatest scandal of the times. Every favorite of these New York banking interests should be driven from public place, and we earnestly, even prayerfully, urge the President to execute the determination expressed in his inaugural address to drive these money changers from the temple."

D. C. Drives Progress.

Locally, the drives for new capital to create the Hamilton National Bank of Washington and reopen Franklin National Bank, continued successfully. The Central Business Men's Association passed the following resolution:

"The Central Business Men's Association heartily indorses the merger of the United States Savings Bank with the new Hamilton National Bank of Washington, believing it to be to the best interests of the depositors, many of whom are members of the Central Business Men's Association."

Robert C. Baldwin, receiver of Commercial National Bank, requests that those Government employes who have deposits in the bank and for whom special hours have been arranged, from 4:30 to 5:30 p. m. from June 5 through June 16, make use of these hours more extensively than the past week has shown, for after June 16 regular banking hours, from 9 a. m. to 3 p. m., for proving claims will prevail.

Mr. Baldwin also states that a clerical force has been provided sufficient to take care of all claims within the 90-day period allowed by law, and at the rate claims are now being filed it is questionable whether all will be filed within that time unless a late rush occurs in August.

Falls Church Firemen To Open Tenth Carnival

The tenth annual carnival of the Volunteer Fire Department of Falls Church, Va., will open next Saturday evening and continue through the week following.

There will be a band concert and dancing each night. Many valuable prizes will be awarded during the week to persons attending the carnival. R. W. Howard is general chairman of the committee on arrangements. The committee on selection and purchases consists of R. E. Kendrick, R. B. Harmon, O. C. Pearson and M. G. Copeland. J. R. Roystoh will have charge of construction, J. V. Birch the program, J. A. Loveday, treasurer, and A. Westman, publicity. Frank Carpenter will act as bandmaster.

Flowers Sent to Sick.

Members of the Alexandria Florists Association yesterday sent flowers free of charge to 150 persons confined to their homes by illness or age. Delivery service was furnished by the Western Union Telegraph Co.

HONOR DEGREE GIVEN DEAN ROSCOE POUND

Legal Writings Win Harvard Professor New Tribute From Cincinnati.

Cincinnati, June 10 (A.P.).—His legal writings described as marking "a definite era in the advance of jurisprudence," Dean Roscoe Pound, of the Harvard University Law School, today was awarded an honorary degree of doctor of laws by the University of Cincinnati.

The degree was presented by Dean M. L. Ferson, of the College of Law of the university, which, with Dean Pound as principal speaker, last night celebrated the centennial of its founding.

"He has made notable contributions in the realms of science, philosophy, linguistics and history," Dean Ferson said of Dean Pound. "His legal writings constitute a definite era in the advance of jurisprudence.

"Widely as his scholarship has ranged, it is even more notable for its depth and significance. His profound scholarship applies to everyday affairs. He is a scholar without pedantry, a theorist who is practical, a philosopher who does not live in abstractions, and a historian who looks forward.

William I. Grubb, of Birmingham, Ala., United States district judge of the Northern District of Alabama, was given the honorary degree of doctor of laws, and John Adam Fleming, acting director of the department of terrestrial magnetism, Carnegie Institution, Washington, doctor of engineering.

Herd Honors Won By Harrison Cows

The average production of the Fairfax County Dairy Herd Improvement Association, No. 1, for the past month was 872.8 pounds of milk and 34.31 pounds of butter fat. An average of more than 40 pounds of butter fat each was made by 174 cows, and 37 of this number produced more than 60 pounds each.

The herd of R. T. Harrison won high honors with an average production of 1,249.3 pounds of milk and 49 pounds of butter fat. The herd of Benjamin Middleton & Son was second with a production of 992.9 pounds of milk and 38.78 pounds of butter fat. The next three ranking herds were owned by W. H. Ellmore, A. S. Harrison & Son and Ravenworth Farm.

The cow winning the highest individual honors was also owned by R. T. Harrison. This cow had an average production of 2,316 pounds of milk and 104 pounds of butter fat. Of the 10 high ranking cows, R. T. Harrison owned two; F. W. Huddleson, four; Ravenworth Farm, two; A. S. Harrison & Sons and Andrew Cornelius, one each. Their production ranged from 1,764 to 2,316 pounds of milk and 68.8 to 104 pounds of butter fat.

Americans Plan Visits to Russia

(Associated Press.)

Many American busines men, editors and educators will visit Soviet Russia this summer. The Soviet Union Information Bureau here has received many inquiries from prospective visitors, interest having been stirred apparently by reports that the United States may extend recognition to the Moscow government.

The bureau's list of those who have arranged trips include:

Edward L. Ames and Grove Patterson, editors, Toledo, Ohio; James E. Bertram, secretary of the Carnegie Foundation, New York City; Fred C. Kelly, author, Peninsula, Ohio; Prof. Coleman B. Cheney, head of department of economics, Skidmore College, Saratoga Springs, N. Y.; Herbert Nelson Fell, insurance expert now working with the United States Government on a new annuities scheme, New York City; Prof. James E. Gillespie, head of the history department, Pennsylvania State College, State College, Pa.; Prof. Frank Nowak, department of history, Boston University, Boston, and Helen M. Sourr, dean of Connecticut College, New London, Conn.

Freeman Leads Service Squadron

(Associated Press.)

Capt. Charles S. Freeman yesterday was ordered to command the special service squadron operating in Central American waters, succeeding Rear Admiral Clark Woodward, who has been made a member of the General Board.

Previous orders to Capt. Sinclair Gannon to command the special service squadron have been canceled. He will remain in the Naval Hospital, San Diego, for treatment.

Capt. Freeman now is coordinator of the Ninth Area, San Francisco.

Bullets and Poison Fail, But Nature Claims Tusko

Seattle, June 10 (A.P.).—Tusko, one of the largest and most publicized elephants in captivity, survived hundreds of death threats and other perils brought on by his temperament, only to die apparently of natural causes here today.

Menaced by bullets, poison and prospective starvation as one owner after another was driven frantic by his gargantuan appetite and rampages, Tusko bore life's vicissitudes bravely until Thursday when Dr. Gus Knudson, superintendent of the Woodland Park Municipal Zoo, said he began to "look pale." He was 42 years old, weight 7 tons 813 pounds.

Litigation in Will Of Pulitzer Ends

New York, June 10 (A.P.).—Surrogate James A. Foley today interpreted the will of Joseph Pulitzer to mean that a trust fund of $8,000,000 may be applied only for the benefit of living grandchildren.

The surrogate dismissed the contention of the administrator of the estate of Margaret Pulitzer, a grandchild, who died July 7, 1930, at the age of 16 months, that her income from the trust fund should accrue to her estate.

Pulitzer, who died in 1911, provided that the trust fund should continue during the lifetime of the two eldest grandchildren, Ralph Pulitzer, jr., now 26, and Seward Webb Pulitzer, 21. Upon their death the principal is to be divided among the surviving grandchildren.

N.Y.U. to Train Doctors As Scientific Detectives

New York, June 10 (A.P.).—The training of doctors to aid in scientific crime detection is the aim of a newly organized department of legal medicine at New York University.

Alcohol-Gasoline Fuel Tested Again

Exhaustive tests of the operating efficiency of alcohol-gasoline blends as motor fuel, which were started on Friday by the contest board of the American Automobile Association under road conditions, were continued yesterday in the laboratories of the U. S. Bureau of Standards, and the final results will be made public early this week.

The importance of the tests to motorists who now use some 14,000,000,000 gallons of gasoline a year, said the A. A. A., is emphasized by legislation now pending in Congress to require the blending of alcohol with gasoline as a means of utilizing surplus farm products.

Under an agreement reached between Ernest N. Smith, executive vice president of the A. A. A., Capt. E. V. Rickenbacker, chairman of the A. A. A. contest board, and Representative E. M. Dirksen, of Illinois, spokesman for the Congressional group sponsoring the alcohol-gasoline legislation, none of the findings in connection with the current tests will be made public until the entire series is completed.

Lehman Without Power in Probe

Albany, N. Y., June 10 (U.P.).—Gov. Lehman is without power to act on protests of the Community Council of New York City that the milk control board is "forgetting" the consumer, he declared today in a letter to the civic organization.

The community council asked a legislative investigation of the milk board.

"The milk board is in no sense a direct agency of the governor, nor may the governor personally prescribe and execute what he might consider to be proper rules or policies in different instances," Lehman wrote. He also informed the community council's appointment of a legislative investigating committee was "beyond my powers."

Witherspoon Seeks Divorce.

Reno, Nev., June 10 (A.P.).—Arthur E. Witherspoon, prominent in New York society, filed suit here today for a divorce from Edith Ransom Witherspoon, of Englewood, N. J., whom he married February 4, 1926. He charged desertion.

Medical Meeting Opens Tomorrow

Milwaukee, Wis., June 10 (A.P.).—New advances in treatment, diagnosis and study of such diseases as cancer and heart trouble, now leading causes of death in the United States, will be presented before the eighty-fourth annual meeting of the American Medical Association, opening here Monday.

Latest medical knowledge also about infantile paralysis, diabetes and its prevention, rheumatic disorders, lung and skin diseases, will be described. About 5,000 physicians and many other delegates are expected for the session, which will last through Friday.

Future policies governing many phases of medical practice in the United States will be decided at meetings of the association's house of delegates, representing the 97,000 members, who comprise about two-thirds of all the physicians in the country. Every State and most of the territories and dependencies of the United States will be represented.

PUBLIC TO INSPECT STUDENT GARDENS

Elementary Science Units Will Sponsor Visits Tomorrow.

An opportunity for the people of Washington to see how the program of science in the elementary grades is largely developed around an activity program centering in gardens will be given tomorrow when school gardens of the city will be open to visitors from 9 a. m. until 3 p. m.

Miss Esther W. Scott is in charge fothe gardens in the white schools, and P. J. Rayford in the colored. Commenting on the garden work yesterday Miss Scott said:

"From an educational standpoint, school gardens give pupils real, vital experiences which not only make the work of the classroom more understandable, but help them to interpret the environment when school days are past."

Flower Gardens Listed.

The gardens which consist mainly of flower borders are Benning, Minnesota avenue and Benning road northeast; Bunker Hill, Michigan avenue and Twelfth street northeast; Jackson, R street between Thirtieth and Thirty-first streets northwest; Raymond, Tenth and Spring road northwest; Takoma, Piney Branch road and Dahlia street northwest.

The spring gardens which close when school closes are: Brightwood, Thirteenth and Nicholson streets northwest; Buchanan, E street between Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets southeast; Keene, Rock Creek Church and Biggs roads northwest; Reservoir, Elliott place and Potomac avenue northwest; Shepherd, Fourteenth street and Kalmia road northwest; Whittier, Fifth and Sheridan streets northwest; Wilson Teachers College, Eleventh and Harvard streets northwest; Woodridge, Carlton and Central avenues northeast.

Open Entire Summer.

The following are gardens which remain open all summer: Brookland, Tenth and Monroe streets northeast; Burroughs, Eighteenth and Monroe streets northeast; H. D. Cooke, Seventeenth and Euclid streets northwest; Corcoran, Twenty-eighth and M streets northwest; Fillmore, Thirty-fifth and S streets northwest; Langdon, Twentieth and Franklin streets northeast; Murch, Thirty-sixth and Ellicott streets northwest; Wheatley, Montello avenue and Neal street northeast.

In divisions 10-13 all of the school gardens are vegetable gardens and remain open all summer. The list follows: Barry Farms Playground, Nichols avenue southeast; Bates Road, Fort Totten road and Bates road northwest; Birney, Stanton road and Nichols avenue southeast; Burrville, Division avenue and Hayes street northeast; Crummel, Gallaudet street between Kendall and Providence streets northeast; Deanwood, Whittingham and Lane places northeast; Garfield, Twenty-fifth and Alabama avenue southeast; Military road, Military road near Brightwood northwest; Reno, Howard street and Fessenden place northwest; Giddings, Third and G streets southeast.

Mayoralty Fight Marks Leesburg Voting Tuesday

Special to The Washington Post.

Leesburg, Va., June 10.—Much interest is being shown in the town election, which will be held here on Tuesday, when the present mayor, Charles F. Harrison, is opposed for reelection by George E. Ward, former councilman. There are eight candidates to fill the six places on the town council. These are A. B. Atwell, T. W. Carter, L. C. Rollins, Harry Newton, R. D. Shroy, W. E. Plaster, J. H. Turley and Dr. Herbert Howard. The recorder, E. N. Bradfield, is unopposed.

Other incorporated towns in the county that will select officers on Tuesday are Waterford, Hillsboro, Hamilton, Middleburg, Purcellville and Round Hill.

Christian Science Churches

"God, the Preserver of Man," is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist, today. The Golden-Text is from Psalms 37:28, "For the Lord loveth judgment, and forsaketh not his saints; they are preserved for ever." Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills, from whence cometh my help. My help cometh from the Lord, which made heaven and earth. He will not suffer thy foot to be moved; he that keepeth thee will not slumber. Behold, he that keepeth Israel shall neither slumber nor sleep. The Lord is thy keeper; the Lord is thy shade upon thy right hand. The sun shall not smite thee by day, nor the moon by night. The Lord shall preserve thee from all evil; he shall preserve thy soul. The Lord shall preserve thy going out and thy coming in from this time forth, and even for evermore." (Psalms 121:1-8.)

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science Textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "The history of Christianity furnishes sublime proofs of the supporting influence and protecting power bestowed on man by his heavenly Father, omnipotent Mind, who gives to man faith and understanding whereby to defend himself, not only from temptation, but from bodily suffering." Hoosier Senator's Antics Nearly Bring Noise Ban

Noise became an issue along with a score of pressing National problems in the Senate last night as Congress sought to adjourn.

Senator Robinson (Republican), Indiana, said President Roosevelt was pressing for adjournment "so that next Thursday he may accept 10 per cent on the war debts due then."

He shouted so loudly and gesticulated so wildly that Senator Connally (Democrat), Texas, asked:

"Isn't there some rule about noise that the speaker must observe?"

"I don't know," replied Senator Clark (Democrat), Missouri, who was presiding, "but if the question is raised, I'll rule on it."

THE DIPLOMATIC POUCH

By HAROLD J. T. HORAN

Diplomatic Moves.

SOME time this month or next, Sir John Simon is expected to affix his barrister's signature to a formal decree affecting the destinies of many distinguished diplomatists in his majesty's service. The decree will shift many of the present incumbents in the British service to take care of the irrepressible younger elements who are forging upward and onward. Sir Eric Drummond resigned his position as secretary general of the League of Nations last year. This resignation has put back in circulation the man that Woodrow Wilson chose for the most responsible position in the league and who made good in an outstanding manner. Sir Eric was formerly private secretary to Lord Balfour and Sir Edward Grey and was destined for a career of shining brilliance in the service when he went with the newly formed league. He is expected to replace either Sir Ronald Lindsay here in Washington or Lord Tyrrell as British Ambassador to Paris.

No stranger to Washington, Sir Robert Van Sittart, handsome playwriting permanent undersecretary of the foreign office, may become even better known here if the appointment of Sir Eric Drummond is shifted to Paris instead of Washington.

Like the present British Ambassador, Sir Robert Van Sittart has been married twice, and each time to an American girl, and if he is named to the embassy here, it will undoubtedly become the center of social life in the Capital. Sir Robert was here with Prime Minister MacDonald on his Rapidan call, and finds time to dash off drawing room plays in French after the manner of Noel Coward. He is regarded as the great Francophile of Whitehall.

Lord Tyrrell, in Paris, has almost reached the retirement age, and he is known to be anxious for retirement on account of the abrupt termination of the marriage of his daughter to the secretary of the embassy in Paris, Adrian Holman. This marriage was the first celebrated in Notre Dame in Paris since 1843 between English subjects, and is now in Rome before the Congregation of the Sacred Rota for dissolution. Holman has been transferred to Peiping.

CUBAN SECRETARY JOSE MANUEL LARA imparts a Nijinski-like grace to the Cuban rhumba, the dance that has met with such success in this country. However, in its vulgarized American version, the dance has lost much of its original gracefulness and verve. To see Senor Lara going through the brisk evolutions of the dance is to see it in all its native beauty. Not since the departure of Hungarian Minister Szchenyi has diplomatic Washington been treated to an official exponent of native dancing. Count Szchenyi was an expert at the czardas and his wild whirling to the strains of a gypsy band was indeed something memorable.

Deutschland Uber Alles.

GERMAN AMBASSADOR HANS LUTHER swept into the ponderous German Embassy here and transformed it into a vital machine shop, bursting with vitalized energy and scornful of the aristo-democratic traditions of Baron von Prittwitz. Ambassador Luther has no time for trains. He flies. He flew to New York to see his favorite boxing champion, Max Schmeling defeated. He will fly to Chicago to the exposition. He makes personal contact with all the heads of divisions of the Department of State, meeting them all in succession personally as no other ambassador has done in recent years.

His feverish activity is transmitted to the members of his staff. Counselor Leitner is hurrying to take a country house earlier than usual this summer. First Secretary Ernst Meyer has sold his smaller car and has acquired a powerful motor that will enable him to commute between the summer embassy and his home in record time. The two youthful attaches, Gustav Struve and Gerrit von Haeften, have engaged a Bavarian cook who formerly worked in Hollywood for Marlene Deitrich and have asked her to come to Washington immediately. She is coming here by plane.

DR. OTTO KIEP, former counselor of the German Embassy here and now consul general in New York of the German government, recently became the father of a baby girl. That was his reason for cutting short his trip to Germany, where he talked with Chancellor Hitler and President von Hindenburg.

The German diplomatist was pacing the corridors of the hospital in anticipation of the event. One of the nurses happened to come out of the room and looked around for some one. Just then she heard the head nurse address the consul general as "Doctor" and rushing forward the nurse inquired:

"Oh, Doctor, are you assisting this case?"

Kiep gently smiled and said: "No, I have already assisted."

Correction.

EVER since Talleyrand consecrated that delightful habit of "sweetnesses" as an all-important adjunct of diplomacy of the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries, diplomats have been wary of the use of gifts. The members of the Washington corps are no exception to the rule. The fulsome largess that has attended the departure of Col. Stimson, Ambassador Claudel and most recently Minister Radeff has caused several members of the corps here to protest at the costliness of the gifts that were offered. A similar sentiment was wrongly ascribed to South African Minister Eric H. Louw in this column last week. Minister Louw declares that such a statement does him a grave injustice. Furthermore, he states:

"I have never contributed more willingly to a presentation fund and so far from raising any objections, I actually complained that the gifts were not sufficiently valuable."

The notation that Minister Louw put on the margin of the subscription list was to the effect that he did not think that for the departing Secretary of State and Undersecretary the offerings were of sufficient value for the money paid. French Ambassador Claudel, as dean of the corps, had ordered the gifts at Cartier's.

This tempest in a gift box was a matter of $11.25, which was the quota of every diplomat. The cost of the flowers to every diplomat at the occasion of the death of former President Coolidge was $1.95 and the diplomats who contributed to the magnificent silver plate offered to Bulgarian Minister Radeff on his departure paid $9.14 each.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR CONVENTION BEGINS

Special to The Washington Post.

Frederick, Md., June 10.—Between 300 and 400 delegates attended the opening session of the Maryland State Christian Endeavor Union convention at Hood College today. At a preliminary session last night the Rev. Dr. G. D. Batdorff, bishop of the East Pennsylvania area of the United Brethren Church, made the principal address.

The union comprises 500 subordinate unions, 46 of which are in Frederick County. Dr. Joseph H. Apple, president of Hood College, welcomed the delegates on behalf of the college and the Rev. Dewitt P. Zuse, secretary of the Ministerial Association, welcomed them on behalf of the clergy. J. Britain Winter, Baltimore, State president, presided.

CADET CORPS DRILL ENDS V. M. I. RITES

Lexington, Va., June 10 (A.P.).—As hundreds of spectators watched, the Virginia Military Institute cadet corps paraded smartly today as a feature of the final exercises of the school.

Col. John Magruder, commandant, presented to Cadet Capt. Steidtman, of Company C, the Garnett-Andrews Cup, which is awarded for highest proficiency throughout the year in all lines of endeavor.

Cadet Captain Bozel received the intramural cup for his company, which scored the highest in the yearly competition in intramural athletics. Cadet Capt. Berkeley received the company rifle cup for B Company, the infantry R. O. T. C. company, which scored the highest record in range practice.

Cadet Private Redding was awarded the individual rifle cup as the best shot in school. Redding has been a member of the rifle team for three years.

The day's festivities closed with the monogram hop.

PAPAL ENVOY IS G. U. OFFICER TOMORROW

Senior Class Exercises Open 134th Annual Program of Commencement.

Announcement that the apostolic delegate to the United States, the Most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, will preside at the commencement exercises of Georgetown University tomorrow afternoon, was made last night at senior class exercises, which opened the 134th annual commencement week program of the university.

A tribute was paid to the memory of the late Prof. Howard Boyd at the School of Law last night as part of the class-day program. An oil portrait of Prof. Boyd, who was stricken last October, shortly after leaving his class, was presented by the Class of 1933 as a gift to the school. The presentation was made by Frederick Barrett Quirk, president of the morning section, and accepted by Dean George E. Hamilton on behalf of the faculty.

The class valedictorian, Bernard H. Fishgrund, of Paterson, N. J., also paid a tribute to Prof. Boyd's memory as a teacher and jurisprudence, in his address at the exercises.

Class History Presented.

A son of Prof. Boyd, Ralph S. Boyd, president of the afternoon section, presided. Edward Patrick Arliss gave the bachelor's oration. The class history was presented by Edward Leo Cox, jr., for the morning section and Stephen Aloysius Fanning for the afternoon section. Class prophecies were made by John Joseph Evers, jr., for the morning section and Robert Walton Criscuola for the afternoon section. The concluding address to the students was made by the Rev. Francis E. Lucey, S. J., regent of the law school.

After the exercises many of the law students and alumni went to the Hilltop where the senior college exercises had just begun. Bathed in light, the new Gravenor-White building and its fountain presented an impressive sight in honor of the occasion.

Alumni and seniors had gathered in the quadrangle, where there was singing and music. Henry B. Herrick, jr., of Newtonville, Mass., the class valedictorian, delivered the traditional Cohonguroton oration.

Procession This Morning.

It was the seniors' farewell to the Potomac River, on whose banks they have spent the last four years. Cohonguroton was the name applied to the river by the Indians and, translated, means the River of Swans. Members of the Mask and Bauble Club also presented a class play.

This morning at 10 o'clock faculties and seniors will march in a procession to Dahlgren Chapel for the baccalaureate mass and sermon, which will be preached by the Rev. Philip X. Walsh, of the Jesuit House of Studies at Woodstock, Md.

Featuring the program tonight, following President Coleman Nevils' reception for alumni, will be the Tropaia exercises on the porch of old North Hall at 9 o'clock. Scholastic prizes will be awarded to honor students in the various departments.

Preparatory School Rites.

Among the graduates tomorrow will be approximately 90 from the District of Columbia and nearby Maryland and Virginia. First Lieut. Paul W. Caraway, U. S. A., a son of Senator Hattie W. Caraway, of Arkansas, will receive a degree of bachelor of laws.

The Georgetown Preparatory School at Garrett Park, Md., will hold its annual commencement exercises this afternoon at 3 o'clock. There will be 24 graduates.

Dr. Edmund A. Walsh, S. J., vice president of the Georgetown University and regent of the school of foreign service, will make the commencement address.

Graduation Procession Is Led by Mrs. Hoover

Whittier, Calif., June 10 (A.P.).—A processional to the graduating exercises of 107 students at Whittier College was led today by Mrs. Herbert Hoover, wife of the former President, who holds a degree of doctor of literature from the college.

It was the largest group of graduates ever to receive diplomas from the Quaker college.

QUOTA PLAN KILLED, SAVING MANY JOBS

partment heads to follow in making separations from the service.

The Senate altered this provision to provide for dismissal on the basis of "efficiency and apportionment." Several House members, notably House Appropriations Chairman James P. Buchanan, insisted this dual standard was "contradictory," and would not work.

Representative Buchanan, who attended last night's session as a conferee, favored efficiency as the sole standard. Another House conferee, Representative Woodrum (Democrat), Virginia, was just as heartily opposed to an appointment basis of dismissals. Combined with strong opposition in the Senate conference group, they were able wholly to eliminate the clause.

30-Year Employes.

Conference action in striking out the plan for optional retirement of 30-year Federal employes was not entirely unexpected. It was known that most of the House conferees would fight for the House provision, which provided that a 30-year employe must be "involuntarily" separated from the service before he could draw a retirement pension.

In support of this change, it was argued that the more efficient 30-year employes would leave the Government at once and take outside employment if they were granted a pension and the right to retire at their option. Inversely, it was contended that inefficient employes would hold on to their jobs, and decrease the efficiency standard of the service.

Provisions of the bill authorizing department heads to invoke a uniform system of rotative furloughs in taking up reorganization and economy slack, were left untouched by the conferees.

Anticipating favorable action, the Postoffice Department and the Civil Service Commission already have announced they use rotative furloughs in lieu of dismissals. Other departments and independent agencies are expected to follow their lead.

James Roosevelt's Theme Civic Duty

New York, June 10 (U.P.).—James Roosevelt, while commending in general terms the industrial control bill, warned in a speech tonight that its danger lay in the temptation of the citizenry to leave too much of their own responsibility in the hands of Government.

"The day when we fall back on some one else to guide us," the President's son said at the annual forum of the New York Young Men's Board of Trade, "is the day when this country will be obliterated as the world's greatest nation."

Young Roosevelt visualized government, as it seems to the average citizen, as a policeman whose duty it is to protect and promote the general good. He urged each citizen to see that the policeman does a good job, and specifically he recommended that everybody devote a minimum of 30 minutes a week to objective study of government and means to better it.

Ohio Steel Mills Reach 50 Per Cent Production

Youngstown, Ohio, June 10 (U.P.). For the first time in more than two years, average production in steel mills of the Mahoning Valley will rise to 50 per cent of capacity next week.

Advanced schedules announced today by the major companies showed several substantial increases in operations planned for next week. Production on a 50 per cent of capacity basis will show an increase of more than 350 per cent over the 14 per cent basis on which district mills were operating in early March of this year.

Secretary Ickes Given Degree by Lake Forest

Lake Forest, Ill., June 10 (A.P.).—Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes received the honorary degree of doctor of laws today at the fifty-fifth annual commencement of Lake Forest College. He delivered the commencement address before 55 graduates.

Arson Is Probed In Celluloid Fire

North Arlington, N. J., June 10 (A. P.).—Weighing the theory that the disaster may have been caused by business-racketeering incendiarism, local, county and State authorities tonight pressed investigations into last night's celluloid factory explosion that left a toll of eight dead, one missing and more than 75 injured.

Lieut. John E. Guidetti, a county detective, announced that a preliminary search of the wrecked plant had produced evidence of arson.

At the same time he said he had been informed that Alex Scheinzeit, operator of the plant, had recently been threatened by celluloid business rivals with a "bitter fight" to decide which of them would remain in the business longest.

Trotzky Denies Return Efforts.

Istanbul, Turkey, June 10 (A.P.).—Leon Trotzky issued a formal denial today that negotiations were proceeding for his return to Soviet Russia. He is in exile on Prinkipo Island.

GOLD MINING BOOM NOTED IN CALIFORNIA

Suspension of Gold Payments Gives Impetus to Industry on Coast.

San Francisco, June 10 (A.P.).—America's suspension of gold payments has given an impetus to mining in California, leading gold producer of the Union, that presages the greatest activity the industry has known in nearly a quarter of a century, a survey conducted by the State division of mines indicates.

A canvass of equipment dealers disclosed the sale of nearly $4,000,000 worth of mining machinery this season. This concrete evidence of the expansion of lode mining is paralleled by the increased number of surface or placers miners, recruited principally from the ranks of the unemployed.

The number of licensed gold buyers has increased from 100 to 140 in a year, and approximately 90 of this number have paid the fee which authorizes them to purchase gold in more than $1,000 lots. A considerably smaller number last season took out the large-lot license.

Invasion of Prospectors.

The army of 12,000 to 14,000 amateur gold seekers who last season combed the hills, valleys and deserts for the precious metal will look small in comparison to the number that will invade the open spaces this year, early indications disclose. Although the peak will not be reached until July or August, the number already out is far ahead of last year.

With the benefit of a year's experience in panning and washing gold, a majority of the number have reason to be optimistic about increasing their earnings this season, in the opinion of Walter W. Bradley, State mineralogist.

Snow Found Benefit.

It was estimated the amateur army averaged about 40 cents a day last year, but this year the snow has remained on the ground in the high altitudes several weeks longer than usual, which means that water for sluicing operations will be spread out over a longer period. This factor, and the knowledge of ground and mining gained last season, should result in a greater recovery, Bradley believes. He foresees the possibility the amateurs may collect three quarters to a million dollars worth of new gold.

While reports from other western mining States indicate enhanced silver quotations already have stimulated mining, Bradley does not expect the effect to be felt materially in this State until lead prices improve. The bulk of the silver in California is produced as a by-product of lead.

Friday, June 9, 1933.

Present: Presiding Judge William J. Graham, and Associate Judges Oscar E. Bland, Charles S. Hatfield, Finis J. Garrett, and Irvine L. Lenroot.

It is ordered that the vacation period of this court, insofar as it affects the postponement by stipulation of the filing of appellants' and appellees' briefs in customs appeals, as provided in paragraph 3 of Rule XIX, and insofar as it affects the postponement of the printing of records and the filing of appellants' and appellees' briefs in patent appeals as provided in paragraph 1 of Rule XXVI and in paragraphs 3 and 4 of Rule XXVII, shall commence on the 9th day of June, A. D. 1933.

It is ordered that the special order of March 6, 1933, relative to the extension of time for filing briefs, and for the deposit of fees for printing transcripts be, and the same is hereby, revoked, as of this day.

Whereupon, the court adjourned from day to day.

MOUTHS that are UNAFRAID . . .

Smile . . . laugh . . . with full confidence that you will be unembarrassed by obvious dental aids, when you use bridgework or plates designed by Dr. Freiot. . . . Through more than a quarter of a century of experience, thorough training, modern methods and complete facilities this office has achieved a perfection in dental aids that give the appearance, and service of natural teeth together with superior comfort and lower cost . . . No higher type of dental service—in all its branches—can possibly be obtained than that available here!

Price Schedule
Plates, $10, $15, $20
Crown and Bridgework
$5.00 Per Tooth
Extractions, $1.00
Under Anesthetics, $2

We believe that the cost of dental service should be known in advance by every client. For that reason we frankly advertise our prices. Examinations and consultations are made without charge.

Greeks' Outing Today Is Sponsored by Church

The Greek population of Washington will hold its first picnic of the season today at Kent Springs, Md. The outing is sponsored by St. Sophia's Church and various Greek societies.

That We May Bring Joy Into the Hearts of Our People!

QUICK FACTS ABOUT THE CIVIC FUND

2. Organized in 1929 to co-ordinate all such fund-raising activities under one publicly recognized administrative system.
3. There is no public appropriation covering the activities sponsored by the Fund—other than the Fund itself.
4. The activities of the Fund represent a legimate, desirable and necessary field of communal entertainment and cultural pursuit vital in the life of a great and dignified city.

A group of public-spirited citizens have organized to put joy into the hearts of Washington people. This group of well known men and women is incorporated to guarantee and support programs of community, civic and patriotic activity which are approved by the appropriate officials and are NOT conducted for private profit.

To date the National Capital Civic Fund has sponsored Washington's 4th of July celebration, the Summer Festivals at the Sylvan Theater, the Community Institute, the Model Aircraft League, the Drama Guild of Washington, the National Community Christmas Tree and the Public Athletic Program . . . attended by hundreds of thousands of Washington people.

Formerly a member of the Community Chest the Fund used to receive an allotment from the Chest for it's purposes, but, this year, owing to overwhelming relief needs, the Fund did not request an allotment.

The Budget needs for 1933 amount to approximately $5,000. This $5,000 is to be distributed over a series of 100 joy-impelling events, that everyone, regardless of race, creed, financial or political opinions, may enjoy.

Won't you join this group and help bring such joy into the hearts of Washington people? Donate $1 or more, to the Fund and become a member for 1933. Mail the coupon with your remittance today!!!

Evening hours bring a wealth of diversions and recreations far removed from business or household cares. Daytime hours bring constant reminders of needs—food, household appliances, business requirements, etc., which require prompt attention and to which The Washington Post advertising columns provide a convenient directory.

The Washington Post offers an honest, responsive circulation to the families who do the bulk of the buying in Washington stores—at the time when their needs are most apparent and when they can be immediately satisfied. In addition, The Washington Post is the only newspaper in Washington that has brought advertising costs in line with today's economic conditions.

These facts are being increasingly recognized by Washington merchants and are resulting in consistent advertising gains despite the most adverse conditions. Because The Washington Post does not require any guarantees of space or number of insertions, these gains provide most conclusive proof that advertisers get maximum RESULTS from The Washington Post.

Throughout the country, the ratio of advertising is 3 to 1 in favor of morning newspapers. The wise "owls" of advertising are proving the reasons for this situation by increasing use of—

FENWAY PARK, Boston, Mass., June 10.—Mr. Tom Yawkey, the New York multimillionaire, who unfurled his healthy checkbook and bought the Red Sox last winter, took leave of Wall street today and spent a painful afternoon amid his new possessions. He saw his employes throw the ball around with such vigor that they deposited a 7-to-5 ball game into the laps of the Nats. The Nats gained a game and a half on the Yanks by virtue of the double defeat of the Yanks at the hands of the A's.

The Nats stole everything but Rick Ferrell's contract in the course of the proceedings. Vice President Eddie Collins, sitting with Yawkey in a field box, actually held his hands to his head in despair as the Nats extracted run after run from the groggy Boston infield, with Johnny Hodapp the chief culprit.

Ruth Poles Two and Foxx One in 9-5 and 8-7 Games.

PHILADELPHIA, June 10 (A.P.).—The Athletics did a thorough job of shattering the New York Yankee "jinx" today by winning both games of a double-header from the world champions, 9 to 5 and 8 to 7, before a capacity crowd of 35,000, the largest of the season. The triumph sent the A's into third place, ahead of the defeated Chicago White Sox.

Even Babe Ruth's thirteenth and fourteenth home runs of the season and Lefty Grove's stunt of fanning five times to equal the major league record of batting futility couldn't stop the A's in the first game as Pinky Higgins smacked a four-bagger, with two on base, in the eighth to clinch the game.

Five More Homers In Games.

Five more homers, including Jimmie Foxx's thirteenth of the year and two by Arndt Jorgens, Yankee catcher, marked the second game, Philadelphia won this contest in the

Baer Revived Memories Of Dempsey, Beating Foe With Man-Killer Finish

Had a License to Win—and Used It, Though Fighting a Dirty Fight; But He May Be Smart

By SHIRLEY L. POVICH (Sports Editor of The Post.)

BOSTON, Mass., June 10.—Max Adelbert Baer, the greatest since Dempsey. The roughest, toughest hombre who has stepped into the big league prize ring since the old Manassa Mauler was laying 'em out horizontal. The wildest-sock-em-rock-sonofagun who ever pulled a 6-ounce glove over a loaded fist. And that may go for Dempsey.

Or is he?

This commentator was one of the hundreds in the ringside circle at Yankee Stadium Thursday night who went bilious and took it on the lam as Max Adelbert boomeranged our pro-Schmeling predictions into our gaping faces. I had the consolation of plenty of company in my plight, but we were as dead wrong as the guy who paid cash for Brooklyn Bridge.

But this Baer. He's a guy to conjure with. It wasn't the heat that stopped Schmeling. It was Baer. He fought a dirty fight, but he didn't have to fight dirty to win. He slapped and he heeled. He thumbed and he hit low, back-handed Schmeling almost every time he missed with his swishing right. But these old barroom dodges didn't help him to win. He had a right to win—and he used it.

But he had no license to win with that finishing right that he started from deep center field in the tenth round. He had no license to hit Schmeling with that kind of a punch. The veriest third rater should have ducked that right with the ease of a sparrow ducking the Graf Zeppelin. But Schmeling, still in full possession of all his faculties, forgot to duck. And, forgetting to duck, he was blasted off his pins for the nine count that paved the way to his finish.

Baer Still Laughing And Clowning.

The Baer, who has been laughing and clowning his way through life and the heavyweight division, even then was the clown. With Schmeling grovelling on the floor, Baer hopped, skipped and jumped to a neutral corner, grinning through his white gum protector, and even then in the heat of the greatest battle of his career, on the threshold of his greatest triumph he took time out to clown some more. He took his eyes from the flattened Schmeling, flung a wide smile to the folks in his own corner, touched his forehead with his glove and gave his handlers a big "I'm in" wave.

But a moment later he had turned his attention to Schmeling again. And then he was the wild man of the ring. The man who had killed Frankie Campbell out on the Coast four years back. He was after Schmel-

Japanese Netmen Win Over Germans

Berlin, June 10 (A.P.).—Germany, winner in the European zone of Davis Cup competition last year, was eliminated from the 1933 competition today in the quarter final round as Jiro Satoh and R. Nunoi, of Japan, defeated Baron Gottfried von Cramm and E. Nourney, 6—2, 6—3, 3—6, 6—1, for the third straight Japanese victory in the five-match series.

Satoh and Nunoi defeated Von Cramm and G. Jaenecke, respectively, in the opening singles matches yesterday.

Von Cramm and Dr. Daniel Prenn comprised the German Cup team last year, but Prenn was barred from the 1933 squad because of his Jewish blood.

The United States just barely nosed out Germany in the interzone final last year, Ellsworth Vines, jr., winning both his singles matches and John Van Ryn and Wilmer Allison winning the doubles for a 3-2 victory. Prenn and Von Cramm both defeated Frank X. Shields, the other United States singles player.

Johnson Watches Tribe Beat Browns

Cleveland, June 10 (A.P.).—Walter Johnson, the Cleveland Indians' new manager, watched the Tribe have its way over the St. Louis Browns today, 5 to 2, and thereby break a losing streak of five straight games.

High lights were home runs by Earl Averill, who clouted out his first circuit-maker of the season, and Wes Ferrell, who got the first round trip he has ever had at the local stadium.

Nat-Red Sox Player Deal Brewing

Name of Rick Ferrell Believed Entering in Discussion.

Special to The Washington Post.

BOSTON, Mass., June 10.—A Washington-Red Sox deal was brewing tonight after Manager Joe Cronin, of the Nats, emerged from a long bantering session with Owner Tom Yawkey and Vice President Eddie Collins, of the Red Sox.

With the limit on intraleague deals expiring at midnight next Thursday, the new Boston owner is seeking frantically to bolster his last place club, now backed with unlimited wealth.

None would divulge the trend of the trade talk. The name of Rick Ferrell, Red Sox catcher, was believed to have been prominently mentioned, however. Boston needs infield and outfield talent.

Jack Dempsey to Watch Carnera Work Out Today

New York, June 10 (U.P.).—Jack Dempsey, who promoted the Baer-Schmeling bout, will take a Bushman's holiday tomorrow when he visits Pompton Lakes, N. J., to watch Primo Carnera, the big Italian, work out for his championship bout with Jack Sharkey.

Dempsey will visit Sharkey at Orangeburgh, N. Y., Wednesday. It was believed he might seek understandings with Carnera and Sharkey for a September title fight with Baer.

Parker and Lott Meet In Kentucky Final Today

Louisville, Ky., June 10 (A.P.).—Frankie Parker, of Milwaukee, defeated John McDiarmid, of Fort Worth, 6—4, 8—6, 6—2, in the semifinals of the Kentucky State Tennis Tournament here today.

Parker will play in the finals tomorrow against George Lott, Chicago, who eliminated Arnold Simons, Louisville, in the other semifinal yesterday.

Guldahl, Putting for Tie, Rims Cup After Staging Brilliant Uphill Battle

Amateur Clings to Lead Despite 76; Wood's 290 Third; Hagen Adds Fine 66 to Tie Armour for Fourth.

By GEORGE KIRKSEY.

NORTH SHORE GOLF CLUB, Glen View, Ill., June 10 (U.P.). Johnny Goodman, a slight, 23-year-old Nebraska amateur, stayed out in front of the world's greatest golf players for 36 holes today and won the National Open golf championship with a 72-hole total of 287 strokes.

Goodman kept in front of the pack in withering heat, playing his shots and shooting his game for glory and a golf medal. He had his ups and downs in the final hectic round when it seemed, until the very last shot, that an unknown—Ralph Guldahl, 23-year-old St. Louis professional—might tie him for the crown.

But Guldahl failed and Johnny Goodman mounted the pedestal last occupied by the greatest of them all, Bobby Jones.

Goodman, who first flashed across the golf horizon when he beat Bobby Jones in the national amateur championship at Pebble Beach in 1929, stroked his way to greater heights today in one of the most dramatic finishes in the history of open competition.

There was every reason to expect that he would crack in the grueling grind from the halfway mark to the finish and he did temporarily on the first nine holes of his final round, but he had enough stamina, skill and courage to settle down on his last nine and play his shots out to the last cup, without losing his head or his strokes.

His 287 came within 1 stroke of the open record set by Chick Evans in 1916 and equaled by Gene Sarazen, the dethroned champion, in winning the title last year at Fresh Meadow. In all the 37 years the U. S. open has been played there are only two scores—those by Evans and Sarazen—lower than Goodman's.

The deciding stroke, however, was not supplied by Goodman. It was by Guldahl, the 195-pound curly-haired, round-shouldered Texan, who migrated to St. Louis four years ago.

With a gallery of 5,000 gathered around the eighteenth green, Guldahl, after a miraculous uphill battle, was within 1 stroke of tying Goodman for the title. His ball lay 4 feet from the pin, after a beautiful

Nimbus Is 2d, While Union Runs 3d

15,000 See Widener's Horse Finish Two Lengths Ahead.

By ORLO ROBERTSON.

NEW YORK, June 10 (A.P.).—With long, hungry strides fairly eating up the ground in a great stretch run, Joseph E. Widener's Hurry Off, a slim, bay son of Haste, today won the sixty-fifth running of the Belmont Stakes at Belmont Park and further scrambled the 3-year-old championship situation.

Hurry Off was so lightly regarded by the crowd of 15,000 that he was quoted at 12 to 1 to win the richest 3-year-old purse of the year, which grossed $64,490 and gave the winner $49,490. For the first one and a quarter miles he justified his odds, running far back and apparently not given a serious contender.

Then, like a shot out of a cannon, he answered the call of his veteran jockey, Mack Garner, as the field of nine swung into the stretch. Marshall Field's Nimbus was winging along in front, striving gallantly to stave off the challenge of M. L. Schwartz's Union.

Comes Up Fom Fourth.

From fourth position, out in the middle of the track, the Widener colt made his bid. In a few quick strides he had collared the leaders and a few faster strides carried him out in front, from where he galloped across the finish line with two lengths to spare over Nimbus. Union trailed another four lengths back, just managing to defeat C. V. Whitney's The Darb, winner of the Withers Mile and the favorite at 8-to-2.

Union might have offered more of an argument if his jockey, Silvio Coucci, had not been injured in the run for the judges. Driving along on the rail, Union was carried in by Nimbus, with Sonny Workman up, and for one-sixteenth of a mile the left leg of the little "Bronx express" scraped along the fence. Soon after the finish, Coucci fell from his horse, but after first-aid treatment was able to ride in the next race.

Coucci lodged a claim of a foul against Workman, but through some misunderstanding, the stewards did not receive the claim and before Max Hirsch, trainer of Union, could offer any further argument the official board had been posted. As the result the second place purse of $7,500 went to Marshall Field, while Schwartz had to be content with third money of $3,000.

Beats Time of Faireno.

Hurry Off, winner of only two previous races, one of them this year, ran the 1½ miles in 2:32 3-5, a fifth of a second faster than Faireno's winning time last year, but nearly 4 seconds slower than Man o' War's track record.

W. S. Kilmer's Sun Apollo was the first away from the barrier after a delay of 10 minutes and for the first mile he set the pace with W. R. Coe's Pompoleon and Dark Winter, also from Kilmer's barns, close behind. Hurry Off, Nimbus and Union trailed far back.

Rounding the sweeping turn leading into the home stretch, the three leaders weakened and in a rapid change of positions, Nimbus assumed command. Union went into second place and Hurry Off moved into third place. That is the way they were running when the field straightened out for the last mad dash down the stretch.

With the crowd watching Nimbus and Union and paying little attention to the Widnener colt, Garner gave the son of Haste a few cracks of the whip and Hurry Off answered with his winning burst of speed. The Darb was the victim of an ill-judged ride on the part of Alfred Robertson. The Withers winner was in a good position on the back stretch, but Robertson attempted to go through on the rail and found Pompoleon barring his way. He then took his mount to the outside, but the task of making up the added ground was too great and although The Darb finished strong he was no match for the winner.

Tower View Pigeon Wins 600-Mile Race

Tower View Lofts won the best average speed diploma in the National Capital Concourse Association old bird series of pigeon races with a speed of 1,309.62 yards per minute.

W. S. Hixson was second with a speed of 1,265.95 yards per minute and R. E. Boswell third with 1,259.76.

The sixth pigeon race from Attalia, Ala., and airline distance of 600 miles, found 379 birds competing from 48 lofts.

The percentage diploma went to J. R. Dougherty with 75 per cent returns the second day, six birds home out of eight shipped.

Below is the speed flown in yards per minute of the first return to each loft.

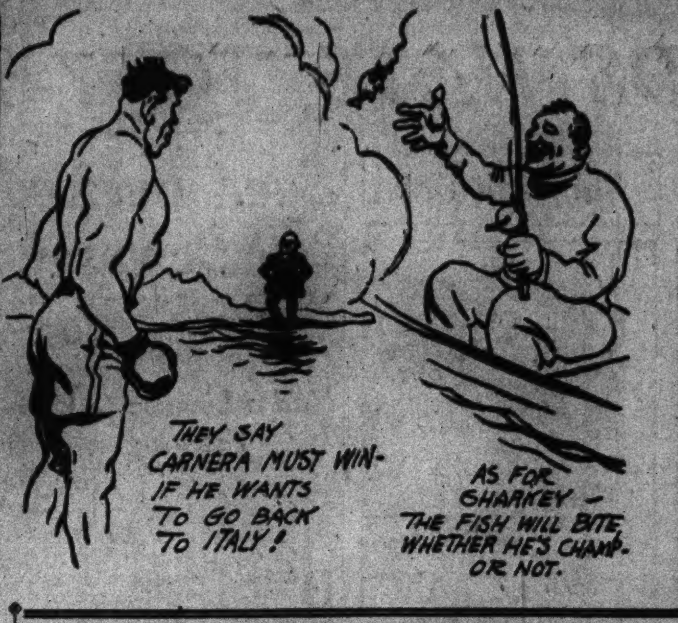
TWO SOULS WITH BUT A SINGLE THOUGHT—KNOCKOUT —By Robert Edgren



Carnera Gaining Ring Skill, May Give Sharkey Battle

Champ Growing Older, but Desire to Avenge Schaaf May Spur Him to Great Heights in Coming Title Fight.

By ROBERT EDGREN.

THIS may be something of an off season in the "fighting game," and gates are not what they were in Tex Rickard's time, but after all this match between Jack Sharkey and Primo Carnera at the end of this month is for a world's championship, and championship fights always are interesting. When they go in there, "shooting for a championship" there's action.

Besides, there are several points that make this fight a bit out of the ordinary. Sharkey is a very good boxer and he can punch. Carnera is the biggest and perhaps the most powerful man who ever had a chance to fight for the big title. It is true Primo seems to have been shrinking since coming to this country, but he's still big enough. The first advance notices gave his height at 6 feet 10 inches and his weight at 285 pounds.

Carnera Has Shrunk to 6 Feet 6½.

After his first arrival in America his manager admitted he was only 6 feet 9, then 6 feet 8, and two years ago at Cleveland, Leon See told me Carnera is really 6 feet 6½. That's about Willard's height, but in muscular bulk Carnera dwarfs even a Willard. He is the most impressive hunk of bone and sinew ever seen in a ring, which is one of the reasons he has had so few chances to fight heavyweights claiming to be "contenders" for the big crown.

Now Carnera has learned how to move around without falling over his own feet, and uses a swift and demoralizing jab with his huge ham of a left hand. This past year his present management has been satisfied to put him in with anyone and take any chance.

The scores of inferior bouts they put Carnera through in the early days made him dangerous. Any man who can put some speed and direction behind a fist weighing about ten pounds is dangerous. And Carnera has another advantage. He can take a tremendous sock on the chin, and it only makes him mad. Stribling floored the big Italian three times in the two fights they had when Carnera was just a big novice. Each time Carnera jumped up, surprised and indignant, and chased Stribling all over the ring.

Sharkey Could Not Keep Carnera Down.

Sharkey knocked him down in their former fight—but couldn't keep him down or put him down again. He's tough. That may count a lot in his favor in the coming fight. Fifteen rounds is a long way to go, punching a man who shows no signs of being hurt. Sharkey did it before, but that was two years ago, and since then Jack has advanced to over 30 and Carnera is six years younger than the champion. The two years have improved Carnera, and undoubtedly have softened Sharkey to some extent.

Carnera has the ambition of a man who wants to be champion. Sharkey was weary of fighting long before he won the title, and thinks more of fishing and hunting than of boxing. Also Sharkey has earned and kept enough money to retire on comfortably and live as he pleases in the future without any more fighting. Nothing softens a fighter more than the knowledge that he doesn't have to fight to get a living.

Still, Sharkey has plenty of pride. He likes that title and intends to hold it as long as he can, and retire without being beaten. A former champ, retired undefeated, remains something of a figure in the sporting world the rest of his life. The knocked-out champions are soon forgotten.

Bit of Sentiment in Sharkey.

And there may be a bit of sentiment in Sharkey. He and Buckley managed Ernie Schaaf for several years—were managing him when Ernie was struck down by Primo's big left fist and never got up again. There were stories in the papers that Schaaf and Sharkey had quarreled—that there was jealousy between them and that Schaaf was leaving the Sharkey-Buckley management to be in a position to challenge Sharkey for the title. But it is a general opinion among those who knew the combination well that Sharkey and Schaaf never quarreled, that Sharkey rated Schaaf as his equal as a fighter and intended to retire in such a way that Ernie would get the title—and go on managing a champion when he was through with boxing himself. It is likely, as Sharkey is giving Carnera the first chance at his title, that he is moved by a desire to avenge his friend, Schaaf.

Sharkey showed confidence in his ability when he jumped in two years ago and took a Carnera fight—Max Schmeling having ducked out of a contract to fight the giant. He put up one of the best fights of his career to beat Carnera, and won decisively, on points.

But Jack always believed he should have finished Carnera and would have finished him if Carnera hadn't been given a chance to rest for a further count when he started up and dropped back to his knees. No doubt he has the same confidence now—or he'd be taking on some easier mark.

Carnera has shown a punch in several fights. He knocked out big Campolo in two rounds and Jose Santa, the 6 foot 9 inch Portuguese, in six. Santa had nothing else, but he was very tough. Last year Primo had 35 bouts, winning 18 with knockouts. He beat several pretty good heavyweights, and he lost two ten-round decisions, being outboxed by Larry Gains in England and Stanley Poreda in America. His best fight, of course, was in the unfortunate affair with Ernie Schaaf, who was a 212-pounder, and a very clever and experienced boxer. It is likely Schaaf would have decisioned Carnera, but was still suffering some damage incurred when he was knocked out for five minutes in the last eight seconds of his fight with Baer, although he had boxed and beaten Poreda in the meantime.

Carnera's manager has announced that if Carnera beats Sharkey he will give any heavyweight a chance.

Jack Sharkey says that if he wins he'll fight once more, next year—and then retire to his fishing camp and forget all about fighting. To date, Gene Tunney has been the only heavyweight champion wise enough to make such a resolution—and keep it.

Sazerac, 56-1, Winner at Chicago

Polydorous Is Second, Sidney Grant Third; Tred Avon Bows.

By CHARLES DUNKLEY.

CHICAGO, June 10 (A.P.).—Sazerac, a 50-to-1 shot in the betting, won the seventh running of the Robert M. Sweitzer Handicap at a mile and a furlong, closing the eighteen-day meeting at Washington Park today, before a surprised crowd of 12,000.

The winner, owned by August B. Letellier, of New Orleans, and named after a famous New Orleans cocktail of before-prohibition days, was out in front by the shortest of margins, only a nose separating the winner and Polydorus, which just missed capturing the prize, worth $2,465 to the winner. Sidney Grant, coupled with Polydorus as an entry, was third. Tred Avon, the "Old Gray Mare" from Maryland, even-money favorite, was fifth in a field of twelve.

Sazerac, which was almost left at the post, made a desperate challenge to catch the leaders, Tred Avon and Ever Gold, in the stretch, under a clever ride by Jockey H. Schutte. The winner paid $114.34 to win, $33.10 to place and $39.72 to show. The place price on Polydorus was $4.80. The show price on the entry was $5.44.

Sazerac ran the mile and a furlong in 1:51 2-5.

RACING SELECTIONS

Godwin Faces Nichols on June 19

Bout at Twin City Is Expected to Draw Large Crowd.

BOB GODWIN and George Nichols, both former National Boxing Association light-heavyweight champions, will stage their ten-round brawl at Twin City Arena, near Laurel, Md., on Monday night, June 19.

Two reasons were assigned by Promoter Charlie Cornell for the postponement of the match, originally booked for tomorrow night.

The first, and most important, was a desire on the part of Twin City officials to complete necessary revisions for their new outdoor plant, which, when finished, promises to shape up with the best of its type. The second reason was in the form of a request from Nichols' manager for more time to train for the fight, indicating that Godwin is one of the most feared boxers in his class.

Better Ring View If Offered.

A 50-foot shift of the ring places it within 10 feet of the bleacher seats. The ring also has been centralized to such an extent that a good view from all angles is offered spectators.

Promoter Cornell, carrying out a promise to insure high-class entertainment, announced that Donald (Red) Barry and Tony Galento, Newark heavyweight, had been rematched for a ten-rounder at Twin City June 26. Galento knocked out Barry in the first round of the main preliminary bout to the Baer-Schmeling card at Yankee Stadium.

Efforts also are being made to pit Benny Bass, former featherweight champion, against Petey Sarron, on the following week at Twin City.

Large Crowd Expected To See Fight.

The Godwin-Nichols bout promises to lure a large crowd to the arena. Godwin is anxious to redeem himself for the defeat suffered at the hands of Maxie Rosenbloom in the world's championship match at Madison Square Garden a few months ago. It is interesting to note that the N. B. A. title was taken away from Nichols after he lost to Joe Knight, and it was Godwin who beat Knight for the championship.

Godwin has pitched his camp at Herald Harbor, and is training energetically for the match. Recently he knocked out Joe King down South in a warm-up fight.

A strong preliminary card has been arranged for the Nichols-Godwin tiff. Harry Kersey, lanky Jacksonville lad, will box Cary Wright, unbeaten local junior welterweight, in a six-rounder. Jack Harmon, Godwin's stablemate, a featherweight, will meet Ray Bowen in a six. Doug Swetnam and Sammy Lucas have been matched for six, while Bill Bullock, of Philadelphia, will engage Tad Lewis, of Hagerstown, in the opening four.

Hot Mat Bout Promised Londos

Zaharias, Who Threw Champ Once, Is Out to Repeat.

THE only man in the rassle game today to have taken two falls out of Jim Londos since he has been champion and one of only four men to have so much as once tumbled the gorgeous Greek, George Zaharias, tries again Thursday night.

Ray Steele, Jim McMillan and Joe Savoldi, all peak workers, are the only others to have wrested a fall out of Londos, who goes to a finish with Zaharias on a show being staged as a benefit for a food fund for Washington's needy at Griffith Stadium Thursday night.

Zaharias One of Game's Toughest.

While some 20,000 looked on in a Pacific Coast setting about eight months ago, Zaharias set the fans in an uproar by savagely body-slamming Londos into submission in jig time. Semigroggy, the Greek was virtually out on his feet upon resumption of hostilities, but, through a superlative display of stamina, he managed to rally sufficiently to hold his own.

Earning this return with Londos due to his spectacular defeat of "Uncrowned Champion" Hans Steinke this past Thursday, Zaharias is determined to make the most of his impending opportunity. Convinced that Champion Jim is none too handy at "taking it" and well stocked with rough-house tactics, the 24-year-old Pueblo, Colo., hurricane will be out to make a whirlwind mix-up of it all the way.

Londos Appears to Be in Best Form.

Londos himself has shown real championship form of late, having impressively tossed everything sent against him following that questionable decision awarded Joe Savoldi over him in Chicago.

Supporting the main event is a blistering semifinal in which human firebrands, Ernie Dusek and Frank Speers, meet over a prescribed 45-minute distance.

Likeable Pat O'Shocker comes back against Dick Baines, Abe Coleman faces Andy Brown and Paul Jones engages George Kotsonaros in shorts.

Due to the staging of this show as a benefit, the free list will be suspended, full price being asked of ladies.

NATIONALS ENTERTAIN PHILADELPHIA ATHLETICS TODAY

Crowder Due To Face Macks

Nats Thankful for A's Victory Over Leading Yanks.

Berg Will Get More Chances to Work Behind Plate.

Special to The Washington Post.

BOSTON, Mass., June 10.—Triumphant in three of the four games with the Red Sox, the Nats were en route home this evening, still warm on the scent of the Yankees, who have been marking time in Philadelphia during their last four games with the A's.

The Nats will find these same Athletics awaiting them for a lone battle at Griffith Stadium tomorrow with memories (not fond) of what happened at Philadelphia earlier in the week, when the best that the Nats could negotiate was a tie in one of their three encounters.

Manager Joe Cronin has assigned Alvin Crowder the task of stopping the A's tomorrow, despite Crowder's sad failure in this role in Philadelphia. You can write your own ticket on the identity of the A's pitcher. Connie Mack has been known to outguess even his own prediction, but there may be consolation for the Nats in the fact that Lefty Grove will not face them except in a relief role, which, of course, may be plenty.

Nats Thankful to Macks.

The Nats are indeed indebted to the A's for holding the Yanks in check after the New York Club had socked Philadelphia for eight straight victories in their previous battles. It was beginning to look as if the Nats would have to overhaul the Yanks by their own efforts, so the Macks' three victories in four games over the Yankees at Philly was encouraging news.

Monte Weaver's ailing arm was under the baking light again today, but Trainer Mike Martin dismissed it as trivial and Monte should be ready to take his regular turn in the West.

Henceforth Moe Berg is due for more regular action behind the plate. In his recent starts, he has proven a capable substitute for Luke Sewell, who appreciated the hot weather relief. And Moe's hitting for long distances is proving no drawback.

Thursday at midnight is the deadline for intraleague trades, but Manager Cronin is very secretive concerning any deals. The best tip, however, says the acquisition of Pitcher Sam Gray from the Browns in a cash deal is a certainty. It needs only the announcement.

Mound Failures Costly To Nats.

Pitching alone is responsible for the Nats' present position four games behind the Yankees. There have been periods when Whitehill, Crowder and Stewart were more harmful than helpful to the Nats.

A record was set at Fenway Park today when big Dale Alexander, a right-handed hitter, actually hit two balls into left field. Alex has never before been known to pull a ball into left. Cronin plays him directly behind second base.

The woman hit in the face by a foul off Cronin's bat on Friday was revealed to be the wife of the Red Sox announcer. She was the recipient of a huge bouquet of flowers today from Cronin, who ordered best medical attention at his expense. She is recovering nicely from a bruised cheek and blackened eye.

Forbes Field, Pittsburgh, June 10 (U.P.).—The Pittsburgh Pirates won their second straight game from the Cincinnati Reds, 4 to 3.

Floyd Vaughan and the Waner brothers led the Pirates' offensive, getting seven of the nine hits off Ray Kolp. Vaughan hit three doubles, Paul Waner two and Lloyd a double and single. Bill Swift settled down after the first inning, in which the Reds scored two runs on four hits and held Cincinnati to five hits during the remainder of the game, including a home run by Pinch Hitter George Grantham in the ninth inning.

Southern Rowing Meet Here July 22

Southern Rowing Association's annual regatta will be held Saturday, July 22, over the Washington Channel course off Potomac Park, it was announced yesterday. Potomac Boat Club will sponsor the event.

Numerous foreign clubs are expected to send men here for the races which are open to members of all recognized amateur rowing clubs, colleges and schools. It is the first time that the regatta has been open to teams outside of the association.

Ten events are listed: Junior single sculls, double sculls, quadruple sculls, four-oared gig, and eight-oared shell; and intermediate single sculls, association single sculls, senior single sculls, senor double sculls and senior four-oared gig. All will be over a 1-mile course. Races will be added if a sufficient number of clubs enter.

Entries have been received from the Virginia Boat Club, Richmond, Va.; Arundel Boat Club, Baltimore, and Old Dominion Club, of Alexandria, and teams are expected from rowing clubs in New York and Philadelphia.

Goslin Stars, Nats Down Sox, 7-5

Gets Homer and Two Singles and Steals Couple of Bases.

Washington stole four bases, engineered a double steal that landed a runner at the plate and was generally running wild on the paths, particularly Goose Goslin, who stole second in the fourth inning and stole third in the sixth in addition to hitting a home run with a man on base in the seventh, which, put together with two singles, gave him a large afternoon.

There was a trace of balm for Mr. Yawkey. His employes won the home run sideshow, 2 to 1, with Roy Johnson and Big Dale Alexander each clouting one of Walter Stewart's pitches into the center field bleachers, but, as Mr. Yawkey probably observed when they hung up the final score, they don't pay off only on the round trip tickets.

Henry Johnson had a 1-to-0 lead to work with against the Nats when Roy Johnson, no kin, except in a cousinly way to Washington as later events proved, pounded out his homer off Stewart in the third inning. The Nats erased this advantage in their next turn at bat and then laid waste to Johnson with three runs in the sixth and two in the seventh with the kind assistance of some dizzy fielding by Mr. Yawkey's employes. They tacked on their seventh run legitimately in the eighth inning.

Red Sox Rally in Ninth.

The Red Sox closed the gap a bit in the ninth when they reached Walter Stewart for three consecutive solid blows, the last of which was a whistling homer by Alexander with two on base that reduced the Nats' when Stewart disposed of Oliver and lead to 7-5, at which point it stood Werber for the last outs.

Reaching base on a single in the fourth inning, Goslin set sail on a steal of second and the decision would have been close if somebody had covered the bag, but both Hodapp and Werber were marked absent, or absent minded, or something, and the Goose skipped to third when Ferrell's throw proceeded across the bag into center. Schulte scored him with a single to right to tie the score at 1-1.

Goslin was the pivotal man in the 3-run uprising in the sixth. He slashed a double play ball to Werber with Manush on first, and Hodapp barely reached the bag in time to make the throw. For some reason he attempted to complete a double play to first and when he threw the ball over Alexander's head, Goslin proceeded to second. With this nice workout under his belt, the Goose then pilfered third cleanly.

Schulte Gets Lone Hit of 3-Run Inning.

Cronin had reached base on a pass and Schulte scored Goslin with a single to right, the only hit of what was to be a three-run inning. One-a-day Roy Johnson then entered the proceedings with a perfect muff of Kuhel's high fly that enabled Cronin to score and sent Schulte to third. At this point, Mr. Yawkey and Mr. Collins began to doubt the wisdom of their purchase, but you have heard comparatively nothing yet.

Kuhel, from first, set sail for second in what developed into a double steal with Schulte galloping home. Ferrell's heave to Hodapp was perfect, but Hodapp's return to the plate was something else again and Schulte slid in safely under Ferrell's 2-foot leap for the throw.

Two were out in the seventh when Manush singled and came home on Goslin's line drive homer into center to give the Nats a 6-1 lead.

Stewart had a four-hit game in his possession for six innings, but was weakening fast in the ninth, only to pull himself together after Alexander's circuit wallop accounted for three runs.

Dodgers Defeat Braves To Advance in League

Brooklyn, June 10 (A.P.).—The Dodgers moved back into sixth place in the National League today by bunching their hits in the early innings to defeat the Boston Braves, 3 to 2. The game was a mound duel between Ray Benge and Ed Brandt, in which each allowed six hits. Joe Mawry made half of Boston's blows.

Ralph Boyle, recruit outfielder, clouted a triple and scored on his first appearance at bat as a Dodger. The other two runs came in the fourth, when Tony Cuccinello drew a pass and Joe Stripp and Chick Outen followed with a pair of doubles.

GIANTS WIN, NOW LEAD LEAGUE

Beat Phils, 5 to 2, as Fitzsimmons Cops Seventh of Year.

NEW YORK, June 10 (A.P.).—The Giants continued their winning ways at the expense of the Phillies today and regained first place in the National League, going a half game ahead of the St. Louis Cardinals by defeating the last-place club, 5 to 2.

One inning was all Bill Terry's wrecking crew needed to win its ninth triumph in ten starts against the Phils. They scored four runs off Eddie Holley, then "coasted" through behind the superb pitching of Fred Fitzsimmons and Adolph Luque. Fitzsimmons granted only four hits in the seven innings he worked to gain his seventh victory of the season while Luque pitched hitless ball in the last two frames.

Joe Moore and Hughey Critz opened the Giants' big inning with a pair of singles, and they both came home on a two-bagger by Mel Ott. After Bill Terry flied out, Johnny Vergez smacked a drive against the upper deck of the left field stands for a home run that completed the outburst.

Roy Hansen Hurls Good Ball.

Roy Hansen went to the hill in the second and pitched good ball until he was lifted for a pinch hitter in the seventh. He gave up only two hits, but they were bunched for the Giants' fifth run in the fifth inning. Blondy Ryan singled, went to second and third on Fitzsimmons' sacrifice and Moore's infield out and tallied on Critz's single.

The Phils scored both their runs in the second on singles by Pinky Whitney and Hal Lee, a walk and an error by Critz that let the first two runners score.

Five Home Runs Are Feature of Game; Sorrell Wins.

CHICAGO, June 10 (A.P.).—After starting out with a flurry of five home runs in the first four innings, Detroit's game with the White Sox was decided on a basis of singles today, and the Tigers won, 6 to 4.

White and Gehringer hit home runs for Detroit in the first inning, and Kress hit for the circuit for the Sox in both the second and fourth innings. Al Simmons also hit his season's seventh homer in the fourth inning. None was on base when each of the five blows was hit.

Vic Sorrell, who went the route for Detroit, steadied after the trio of long blows, however, while the Tigers bunched four short hits off Paul Gregory for two runs in the fifth, and added single runs off him in the sixth and seventh. Heving finished for the Sox. Detroit got ten hits and Chicago eight.

Simmons Increases Average.

White featured for Detroit with a triple as well as his homer, while Simmons, the American League's leading hitter, increased his average with a .500 day, getting a single as well as a homer in four times at bat.

Cubs Knock Cards Out of First Place

St. Louis, June 10 (A.P.).—The Chicago Cubs knocked the St. Louis Cardinals out of first place in the National League race by winning the final game of the series, today 4 to 3. The Giants won from the Phillies and regained the top.

The Cubs got four of their seven hits in the first inning off Haines, which combined with a walk and an error gave them three runs. Root was effective in the pinches and was given good support, two double plays taking him out of holes. It was the Cards' fourth defeat in twenty games.

18 Home Runs in American Yesterday Sets New Mark

AMERICAN LEAGUE home-run clouters broke a major league record yesterday when a total of 18 round-trippers were pounded in and over stands and over fences in four parks of the junior circuit. Nearly half of this total was manufactured in Shibe Park, where the Athletics were giving the leading New York Yankees the one-two punch. In these two games alone, Babe Ruth and Art Jorgens hit two apiece, with Jimmy Foxx, Ed Coleman, Frank Higgins and Dib Williams crashed out one each. Others in the league credited with "grand slams" were, Kress (White Sox), 2; and Johnson and Alexander (Red Sox), White and Gehringer (Tigers), Averill and Ferrell (Indians), Goslin (Nats) and Simmons (White Sox), one apiece.

Yesterday's slugging surpassed the previous high for one league in one day in the majors by a margin of two. On June 1, 1930, National League clubs playing six games, one more than was played in the American yesterday, pounded out 16. The previous mark in the American was 15, first set in six games on May 22, 1930, and then equaled in eight games on the following Decoration Day.

Had the National League sluggers done their stuff yesterday, the record for most homers by both leagues on the same day, 27, might have fallen, too, but only Vergez, of the Giants, and Grantham, of the Reds, managed to connect in the four games played in the elder loop.

Johnson Day Set Aside in Cleveland

New Indian Manager, to Hurl First Ball at Ceremonies.

CLEVELAND, June 10 (A.P.).—Walter Johnson—who probably has watched more President's pitch openning game baseballs than any other major leaguer alive—is going to do a little ceremonious heaving himself tomorrow when he becomes manager of the Indians.

It will be "Walter Johnson Day" in Cleveland, so proclaimed by Mayor Ray T. Miller with all the proper seals. And when the veteran speed artist of another day stands up to put over his "opening day" pitch, he will formally become manager of the Tribe for the rest of this season and all of next year.

Told about the ceremonies on his arrival from Washington today, the "Big Train" laughed heartily.

"I haven't had any spring training," he said, "but I guess I still have enough stuff left in my arm to get one over."

It looked like "Walter Johnson Day" at the station today when the new manager came in. The fans were there in force, as was Mayor Miller's welcoming committee of 50, and all the baseball moguls Cleveland could muster.

Amid the exuberance and fanfare, Johnson smiled somewhat shyly, but he was not to be led into rosy predictions for the Indians under his tutelage.

There was talk galore among the experts today about trades and shifts under the new manager, but Johnson was content to let them guess at it. He pointed out that he hadn't seen many of the Cleveland players perform, and hadn't even seen a single ball game this season.

"We'll decide what we'll do—if anything in particular—after we've looked them over," he said.

REPUBLICAN NINE OUTSLUGS DEMOCRATS TO WIN 18-16 GAME

8-Run Rally In 8th Wins For G.O.P.

Hartley's Homer Big Blow of Annual Solons' Battle.

By LEWIS F. ATCHISON.

ADMINISTRATION forces suffered their first major reversal of the season yesterda yat Griffith Stadium, where the boys who still swear by the principles of the G. O. P. engulfed their Democratic opponents in an eighth-inning uprising that netted eight runs and produced an 18-16 victory, their second straight.

The sun conveniently hid itself behind a couple of stray clouds during most of the game, and the lawmakers made the most of their opportunity to scamper around without fear of suffering a sunstroke. Later Old Sol looked in on the proceedings and took all the starch out of the players.

Before the teams started the endurance contest George Zaharias and Everett Marshall, two contenders for the world heavyweight wrestling championship, struggled 15 minutes to no decision. Joe Turner, former middleweight champion and now promoter, tossed Dutch Green in quick order.

Altrock Decisions Jolson.

Still a third match was staged to the huge delight of the crowd, Nick Altrock testing the mettle of Al Jolson, popular singer and well-known stage star. The pair went at it hammer and tongue for 10 minutes stripped to the waist. Altrock was given the decision over the "Mammy" warbler. Later Jolson was drafted as base umpire to help Gene Tunney, but he was shy and modestly retired to the sidelines early in the fray.

The game developed into a genuine political battle from the opening pitch. The Democrats touched Vincent (Nick) Carter for three runs in the first inning, as many more in the third and six in the fifth to assume an 11-2 lead over their opponents. Representative Millard Caldwell, who resembled Walter Johnson on the mound with the single exception that he was not as effective as the new Cleveland manager, started for Mr. Roosevelt's forces and did very well until the fifth. At this stage four runs were gleaned from his offerings and he retired in favor of Ray Cannon.

Cannon was no better, and after granting one hit and walking two men he was yanked in favor of Charles West, of Texas. West finished out the game, but he took plenty of punishment.

Hartley Slams Out Homer.

Representative Fred Hartley, baby of the House last year, knocked a man-sized home run to deep left field in the seventh inning. However, it was a lusty double by Representative Lambertson, the shortstop, that tallied Carter and Withrow with the game-winning runs in round eight.

Kelly, Meade, Richards, McMillan and Elzey led the Democratic attack, all of them getting three hits. Carter, Blanchard and Allen did the most effective stickwork for the winning team.

Despite the prolific scoring the game was interesting. Oddly enough there wasn't a single argument about the decisions Gene Tunney called at first base. Around 5 o'clock a voice boomed over the public-address system announcing that a roll call was scheduled at 6 o'clock on the veterans bill now before the House. After a hasty conference the Republicans, who were behind at the time, announced that they would play the full nine innings or bust, and were prepared to rush to the House in their uniforms for the vote.

Edward F. Colladay, Republican national committeeman from the District, presented the Pearson & Crain trophy to Vincent Carter, captain of the victorious forces, immediately following the game, after which all retired to the dressing room where a keg of beer had been freshly tapped.

Vines Leaves For British Net Play

Leads U. S. Party of Four; Sees Bright Davis Cup Chance.

NEW YORK, June 10 (A.P.).—More intent on helping win back the Davis Cup than defending his Wimbledon title, Ellsworth Vines, jr., United States champion and the first-ranking tennis player of the world, today headed a delegation of four United States players sailing on the liner Paris to play in the all-England championships.

The Wimbledon play will be only secondary, Vines indicated, and it is the Davis Cup competition which holds his interest as the United States makes another attempt to wrest from France the international tennis trophy taken by the "Three Musketeers" in 1927 and successfully defended since.

Sailing with Vines were Keith Gledhill, with whom Vines holds the United States doubles title; Lester Stoefen, another Californian, and Cliff Sutter, third ranking United States player and a member of the Davis Cup team in the series with Mexico in May.

"I think our chances in the Davis Cup matches are better this year than last," Vines said, as he boarded the ship. "As to our interzone final opponent, I think England will win through and whether we can lick them or not I wouldn't like to say."

All four players reported they were in good condition and would have no alibis if they lost.

Gledhill, Stoefen and Sutter are not officially members of the United States Davis Cup squad and it depends largely on their showing at London whether they will be taken across the channel to Paris to try out there for the team.

The other members of the cup team, none of whom will compete at Wimbledon, are Wilmer Allison, John Van Ryn and George Lott. They plan to sail July 1 directly for Paris and will be joined there by Vines, and possibly the other three players, after the close of Wimbledon July 8.

The play at Wimbledon begins June 26 with Vines defending the men's singles title and Mrs. Helen Wills Moody the women's singles title. Mrs. Moody already is in England as are also Helen Jacobs, United States champion, Mrs. Dorothy Andrus Burke and Elizabeth Ryan, the former Californian now resident of London and Mrs. Moody's doubles partner. All will play in the famed London tournament.

Virginia U. Ball Game To Varsity Nine, 11-8

University, Va., June 10 (A.P.).—Virginia's varsity baseball team came from behind today to win an 11-to-8 decision over an alumni team of youngsters and veterans.

The alumni players, ranging all the way from the team of 1893 to the team of 1932, were off to an early lead, but the varsity put on a 6-run scoring splurge in the sixth frame to settle the issue.

Two distinguished Richmonders formed the alumni battery that opened the game. Murray M. McGuire, cocaptain of the team of '93, was pitching, and Julian Hill, of the team of '98, was catching, but they soon gave way to players of more recent date.

Greasy Neale, who coached Cavalier teams for six seasons, directed the play of the veterans.

There were plenty of extra base hits. Purcis, of the varsity, and Bryant and Pinder, of the alumni nine, smashed home runs.

POST MORTEMS . . .

Paul Runyan's honesty, coupled with the U. S. G. A. rules, probably cost him a share in the prize money in the open golf championship at Glenview yesterday . . . only six strokes behind the leader going into the third round, he noticed that his second round score, already posted, showed him with a 149 instead of 150 . . . on calling attention to the error, which was in his favor, he was disqualified under the rules. . . . They say that any error found after cards have been posted call for automatic disqualification. . . . Les Kennedy, recent conqueror over Stanley Poreda, also holds a slashing decision over Max Baer . . . he now is a sparring partner for Primo Carnera . . . and at $25 per day and keeps and is the highest paid man in the Italian's camp. . . . Mae West's dad used to be a prize-fighter in Brooklyn . . . maybe that's why she can be so "hard" on the stage and screen. . . . Ellsworth Vines lost a set to Hector Cattaruzza, of the Argentine team, and later bowed to Sidney Wood in the Dixie Invitation championship tourney . . . many see in these happenings signs of the world's champion cracking. . . . Ernie Dusek will meet another tough customer in Frank Speers at Griffith Stadium Thursday . . . but the rougher they come the easier Ernie seems to take them.

Representative Ed Kelly, of Illinois, looked like the only ball player on the field in yesterday's Democratic-Republican game . . . he used to play pro ball in the good old days. . . . "Prof" Drissell violated a rule which had not been broken for five years when he caught a fly in the Eastern-Tech faculty game played Friday . . . he played center for Eastern . . . and Mike Kelley, at short for the same team, lost 4 pounds worrying about the outcome of the game. . . . Arthur Robinson, a one-armed golfer, won the fifth flight in the West Potomac Park championships yesterday . . , and J. B. Much captured second-flight honors although he has played the game but three months. . . . While the Boston Red Sox want to make a deal with the Nats and talked to Manager Joe Cronin about it yesterday, President Clark Griffith states that the Beaneaters are offering a biscuit for a barrel of flour . . . so probably there will be nothing doing. . . . Earl Mattingly, former Washington sandlotter who once played with the Broklyn Dodgers, is now starring on the mound for the Baltimore Orioles.

ing like a panther, blood on his palate and craving more. He roared out of his cave swinging like fury on the helpless German, crossing rights and lefts to his head, eagerly prying Schmeling's guard away and pasting him from corner to corner. He hit the German with everything but Hitler and there might have been another tragedy had not Referee Donovan humanely stopped the slaughter.

Only two scenes in prize ring history have paralleled that last round massacre. Dempsey's ripping start against Willard in that boiling pine cauldron at Toledo in 1919, and the same Dempsey's exploding fists dynamiting Luis Firpo at Boyle's Thirty Acres in 1923.

Baer was the counterpart of Dempsey, his mentor, in that tenth round. Hitting, slashing, mauling until somebody dropped. A new Dempsey in the fistic firmament, the product, perhaps, of the old Dempsey himself. There was shining evidence of the fine old hand of Dempsey in Baer's fight against Schmeling. Dempsey himself was never the one to hew to the Marquis of Queensberry rules. Baer was hitting low even as Dempsey used to hit low. He was elbowing and mauling in the clinches even as Dempsey used to maul. He paid no heed to the referee's warnings even as Dempsey paid no heed.

Public and Its Money To Consider.

Dempsey always knew that they never would stop one of his big fights on a technicality. There was the public and the good money they paid to consider. And Baer acted Thursday night as if they couldn't and wouldn't stop his foul play. Perhaps at the suggestion of Dempsey himself.

But this Baer may be smart, too. He went out in front and then laid off the pace. He socked Schmeling smartly in the first two rounds and then appeared to be dogging it. He was in retreat through the fifth, sixth and seventh. Punched out, the ringsiders thought, and ready for Schmeling's well known rallies. The smoking socks he had launched at Schmeling had not hurt the German much. Schmeling would wear him down like he wore Stribling and Walker down.

But came the eighth and Baer was no longer in retreat. Schmeling was supposed to come out of his shell then, but it was Baer who took the offensive and the German was busy covering up at the risk of getting his head knocked from his shoulders by one of the round-house swings that Baer swished back and forth across the top of his scalp.

It was the same story in the ninth, with Baer still in there swinging and Schmeling obliged to cover. The German had no chance to show his own punches. Baer had taken them all in the earlier rounds and laughed in his face. He could take it. He said so, and he proved it. Schmeling was plainly discouraged.

And when the bell sounded the end of the ninth, Baer was still in there swinging to Schmeling's head in a neutral corner. He did not hear the bell and cared not. The German shot a brief appealing look to the distant referee and then was forced to fight back for his protection. But he couldn't swap punches with Baer, the punching fool then, and he took a half dozen goodly wallops to the head that well might have paved the way to the finish in the tenth. Every one was a foul punch with bell having rung, but Baer was not fighting according to rules.

Justified Predictions Of Dempsey.

That's Baer, the rip snorting, fire eating, wild man from the West. Winning the greatest fight of his career and justifying the predictions of Dempsey who saw in him his own counterpart two years ago.

But is he that great? Decision must be reserved on that point. The fact remains that the Schmeling that Baer knocked out in the tenth round was not the Schmeling of the Sharkey, Walker and Stribling fights.

Baer didn't beat a great heavyweight Thursday night. He beat a slow, loggy, shuffling Schmeling who lacked spark, fire and punch. A Schmeling who was not the Schmeling who outboxed Sharkey at times. A strange Schmeling who was a sucker for a ponderous right hand, who had ducked the lightning rights of Stribling and Sharkey, yet who permitted himself to be knocked down by the roundhouse right that Baer unloosed.

Something had snapped in Schmeling. Baer, as wide open as the western plains he was reared on, was inviting a finishing punch for ten rounds. But Schmeling didn't have it Thursday night. Baer took it, but he wasn't taking Schmeling's best. The German's best had been left in the training camp or somewhere during the year he spent out of the ring. How good is Baer? He knocked out Schmeling, who knocked out Stribling and Walker and beat Sharkey. But Sharkey says he'll make Baer eat his left hand. Baer is awkward, without form or grace, he may eat Sharkey's left, digest it with no more trouble than gulping down 3.2 and then serve Sharkey some of his own heavy courses. The guy can punch, they can't take that away from him, and when he's in there punching he's got a chance. A great chance. A damn good chance, if you ask me.

John Beck's 151 Wins St. George's Vase Golf

Sandwich, England, June 10 (A.P.). John Beck, of Sunridge, today won the St. George's Vase golf tournament with a total of 74—77—151 for the 36 holes. C. Ross (Sandy) Somerville, Canadian, holder of the United States Amateur title, was far down in the list with 83—76—159.

Somerville was decidedly off his game in the morning round, played in a cold wind and with occasional rain squalls, and his 76 of the afternoon was not good enough to overcome the handicap. John Nash, Somerville's fellow Canadian, from London, Ontario, scored 168.

FOR the second consecutive year Washington's two great bowling behemoths, Lorraine Gulli and Ollie Pacini, were accorded duckpin's highest award when the National Duck Pin Bowling Congress in releasing its list of the leading shooters of the country again selected them the No. 1 ranking rollers for the 1932-33 season.

Pacini is the first to successfully defend his laurels while Miss Gulli proved she is in a class by herself by gaining the honors for the fifth straight time.

Additional honors went to Miss Gulli, who with Nick Tronsky, of the famous Connecticut Blue Ribbons team, were chosen as the two most valuable shooters in the country. Tronsky was placed at the top of the honorary list.

Ray Von Dreele, Baltimore's 1929-30 ranking star with 25 years of brilliant rolling back of him, was rated second with Ray Barnes, another Oriole, being placed third after general averages were compiled by George Isemann, secretary of the congress.

Baltimore also supplied the second choice in the women's division, with Lotta Janowitz running back of Miss Gulli. Third and ninth places went to Capital girls, Billie Butler winning the former position and Catherine Quigley the latter place.

Three other District men were awarded places in the first ten, Joe Harrison winning fourth, with Dutch Newman and Astor Clarke claiming seventh and eighth places, respectively.

In the second ranking ten, Washington places five shooters. Whip Litchfield tops the list, with Paul Harrison, Jack Talbert, Ed Blakeny and Eddie Espey gaining places. Marie Whalen, Irene Scott, Rena Levy and Catherine Forteney were among the "second ten" to give the Capital a fair share of the topnotchers for the year.

Cadet Kostainsek Given Cup at V.M.I.

Lexington, Va., June 1 (A.P.).—The Porter Cup, presented annually to the best all-round athlete at Virginia Military Institute, was awarded to Cadet Ed Kostainsek at the monogram hop here tonight. Kostainsek, captain and fullback of the football team last year, also was a member of the boxing team, fighting in the heavyweight class.

To his outstanding ability as an athlete, Kostainsek added versatility, playing at practically every position on the football team. After playing at tackle as a freshman, he was shifted to guard the following year. In his junior year he was moved to center and played well enough to win positions on several all-star combinations. This past season when Coach Bill Raftery needed a full back, Kostainsek was called on to fill the bill and performed in remarkable fashion.

The cup was presented during an intermission that followed the monogram figure. Col. H. M. Read, director of publicity at V. M. I., and coach of the track team, in awarding the cup, praised Kostainsek's record as an athlete, a cadet and a gentleman.

MAJESTICS TO TRAVEL.

Swim Meet June 19 At Glen Echo Park

Outstanding men and women natators from Washington are casting wistful eyes toward the swimming meet to be staged Monday night, June 19, at the Glen Echo Park pool, under auspices of Glen Echo Park and with the sanction of the District of Columbia A. A. U.

There will be no entry fee, and entries will close next Friday at the director's office at Glen Echo. Gold, silver and bronze medals will be awarded.

Events for men are scheduled as follows: Sixty-yard free style, 120-yard free style and 120-yard breast stroke. The feminine swimmers will compete in the 60-yard free style, 120-yard free style and 60-yard backstroke.

Considerable interest has been aroused in the high board diving championships for both sexes. Plain front dive, backward, half gainer, backward jackknife and front dive with half twist are scheduled.

Hartnett Placed at Top In National League Poll

Chicago, June 10 (A.P.).—Leo "Gabby" Hartnett, slugging catcher of the Chicago Cubs, was at the top of the heap today as National League fans voted in the poll to determine the lineup for the all-star American-National League game here July 6.

Hartnett's total vote, 94,804, topped that of Chuck Klein, of the Phillies by nearby 800 and was better by nearly 1,000 than that of Pie Traynor of the Pirates.

The leaders, their positions and votes cast to date follow:

FIRST BASE—Terry, New York, 76,961.
SECOND BASE—Frisch, St. Louis, 74,517.
THIRD BASE—Traynor, Pittsburgh, 93,957.
SHORT STOP—Bartell, Philadelphia, 61,583.
CATCHER—Hartnett, Chicago, 94,804.
PITCHERS—Warneke, Chicago, 88,457; Hubbell, New York, 84,783; Lucas, Cincinnati, 34,849.

Eastbourne, Eng., June 10 (A.P.).—With the series already won by England, which swept three matches, Giorgio de Stefani, Italy's tennis ace, today defeated Fred Perry, of England, 5—7, 6—4, 6—4, 6—4, in the first of the last two singles encounters of the Davis Cup series between the two countries.

Henry W. (Bunny) Austin defeated Baron Humbert de Morpurgo, 6—4, 6—3, 6—2, in the final singles match to make the scores, England, 4 matches; Italy, 1.

England meets Czechoslovakia in the semifinal round.

MARATHON TO MINNOCH.

Herkimer, N. Y., June 10 (U.P.).—Jack Minnoch, Milrose A. A., New York City, won the 10-mile marathon, feature race of the A. A. U. Adirondack district championship meet, here today. Mike Plomp, Johnstown, was second, and Joe Wood, Amsterdam, third.

St. Joe, Dor-A Game Tops Today

Clash to Feature 11-Game Capital City League Card.

THRICE winner of Capital City League pennants and runner-up in numerous other campaigns, the veteran St. Joseph's Club clashes with Dor-A's youthful but ambitious team today for the leadership of the 1933 championship race. The game features a program of eleven contests, five of which involve unlimited teams.

St. Joseph's suffered an 11-0 drubbing at the hands of the Stantons two weeks ago, but came back strong last week to take the measure of its old rival, Congress Heights, by a score of 5-4 in a game which was as close as the score indicates. Today Manager Frank Cinotti believes his charges will go to the front of the field by trimming the suburbanites.

Dor-A Team Off to Good Start.

Dor-A got off to a good start with a 5-4 victory over the Colonials in its league debut two weeks ago and followed up with a surprise 2-0 triumph over Griffith-Consumers last Sunday. Last season the Hyattsville crew finished a poor second to the Millers in the senior division, but new blood and the old fighting spirit have given the team a new outlook. The game will be played at 3 o'clock on diamond No. 4.

But while the battle for first place is on there will be lively action among the other teams. The Millers face the Griffs at University of Maryland's stadium in a game that will have an important bearing on the outcome of the race. Both are tied for second with Certified Barbers, all of whom have won two of their three games. Defeat for either team will drop it out of the tie and seriously hinder its titular hopes.

The Barbers are reasonably certain to retain their standing as they tangle with Congress Heights, which has played in-and-out ball thus far. The Burruto boys stamped the first defeat the Stantons have suffered this season on the latter last week by virtue of a four-run rally in the tenth inning, but this time they hope to have the decision in the bag in regulation time.

Goodacre-Oxon Hill in Junior Feature.

The outstanding game in the junior division brings together the leading Goodacre's Club against Oxon Hill. Rosedale will be the battleground, starting at 3 o'clock. Goodacre's stock soared after the restaurant men lambasted Georgia Avenue Business Men's Association, 1932 champions, with a fusillade of hits that produced an 18-8 victory last week.

Versis and Washington Maid Midgets occupy the feature spot in the midget class, although the Montrose-Savoy game will be bidding for recognition. Corbett A. C. faces the Potomac Fish Co., with high hopes of breaking its losing streak and escaping from the cellar.

Printers, Celtics To Battle Today

Special to The Washington Post.

Alexandria, Va., June 10.—Union Printers, typo champions in 1932, will clash with the St. Mary's Celtic nine tomorrow in the feature game to be played at Baggett's stadium at 3 o'clock.

The Alexandrians have won seven consecutive home games.

Either Dreifus or Riley will twirl for the locals. Roudabush, Heany or Hutchinson will pitch for the Printers.

The Arrow Service nine and the Phoenix A. C. clash in a twin-bill in Potomac tomorrow. The first game will begin at 1:30 o'clock. Gardiner and Curtis will pitch for the locals.

The Alexandria Eagles will play out of town tomorrow. Director Berman is after a game. He can be reached by phoning Alexandria, 2713.

Silver Spring Loses To Front Royal Stars

Special to The Washington Post.

Front Royal, Va., June 10.—The Front Royal All Stars defeated the Silver Spring (Md.) Giants here this afternoon by the score of 5 to 3. The game developed into a tight pitching duel between Larry Boerner for the Giants and Lefty Kalb for the All Stars. Each pitcher allowed 7 hits.

A 3-run rally in the eighth by the Stars overcame the visitors' 1-run lead and iced the game for the locals. B. Grubb, Goodwin and Casarotti were the only hitters to connect safely for them once. Spectacular catches by Jewett and Casarotti provided the fielding features.

MIDDLE ATLANTIC GOLF DRAWS AMATEURS THIS WEEK

Rolling Road To Be Host Of Stars

District to Send Its Best for Opening Wednesday.

Baltimore, Virginia Also Will Have Strong Entries.

By DAVE HERMAN.

CRACK amateur golfers from Washington, Baltimore and Virginia will answer the call to arms Wednesday at the Rolling Road Club, Catonsville, Md., where the annual Middle Atlantic Association battle will be waged over a four-day period.

The District is sending practically all of its big guns, including Harry Pitt, of Manor, champion in 1928; Roger Peacock, of Indian Spring, the District titleholder, and Maury Nee, Columbia's shooting star.

They will contest for the title that Ernie Caldwell, of Hillendale, carried off last year at Columbia by defeating E. K. Lanman, former member of Indian Spring, in the finals. It might be well to remember that Caldwell put a high polish to his 1932 play by blasting out a 68. Byrne Curtiss, of Beaver Dam; LeRoy Sasscer, of Indian Spring, and Tom Sasscer, of Maryland Country Club, tied for medal honors.

Virginia to Be Well Represented.

Virginia linksmen will roar their challenge. Richmond will bank heavily on Billy Howell, 1931 national amateur semifinalist, 1932 Walker Cup team member and runner-up to Johnny Fischer in the national intercollegiate championship, to win back the Middle Atlantic titles he captured in his home town in 1930 and again in 1931 at Virginia Beach.

Portsmouth, Va., will pin its hopes on lanky Chandler Harper, Virginia open champion and former amateur titleholder in his State. Harper led the sectional qualifiers here last year. Buddy Clements, of Roanoke; A. B. Connor, of Hampton; Roland Wright, Jack Howard, John B. Reed, Charlie Kent and Malcolm Jones, of Richmond, are among the other Virginians expected to participate.

Baltimore Entrants Big Threats.

Baltimore's entrants are always threats. Alex Knapp, B. Warren Corkran, Howard E. Crook, Spencer Overton, W. W. Symington, Donald McPhail, Talbot Speer, Harry Parr 3d and Dave Crook will be sturdy contenders for Caldwell's crown.

The Middle Atlantic always has attracted a healthy entry list. Golfers in this section regard it as the most important event, with the excepion of the sectional qualifying rounds for the National Amateur.

Dick Lunn May Not Compete.

Dick Lunn, strapping youngster who won the Chevy Chase Invitation and recently tied Nee's course mark of 67 at Chevy Chase, has indicated he will be unable to compete in the Middle Atlantic because of certain scholastic examinations.

Among other District amateurs expected to participate are Parker Nolan, Tom Belshe, and J. W. Harvey, jr., Indian Spring; Capt. Kendall J. Fielder and Maj. E. A. Noyes, Army and Navy; Billy Dettweiler, 15-year-old Manor star; Franklin Parks, Jack McCarron, and Luther Steward, jr., Congressional; Martin F. McCarthy, of Beaver Dam; Tom Webb, jr., long-driving Washington Golf and Country Club player, and Miller B. Stevinson, Columbia's veteran.

There will be 18 holes of qualifying play Wednesday and Thursday, with Friday and Saturday devoted to match play.

Seeks Crown

MAURICE NEE.

Mrs. Morrow Wins Title in Md. Golf

Mrs. Haynes Beaten, 4 and 3, in Final at Five Farms.

Special to The Washington Post.

BALTIMORE, Md., June 10.—Playing her best golf of the Maryland State tournament at Five Farms this afternoon, Mrs. E. Boyd Morrow, of the Elkridge Hunt Club, won the crown for the seventh time by defeating Mrs. J. Marvin Haynes, of the Columbia Country Club, 4 and 3.

After the match Mrs. Morrow announced her retirement from State title play.

Mrs. Morrow shot a brilliant game, scoring 39—women's par—out, and getting off exceptionally long drives, despite her very slight build. She played a consistent game practically throughout.

Matching men's par at seven of the first nine holes, Mrs. Morrow made the turn with a lead of 3 up, and Mrs. Haynes never was able to reduce this advantage. As a matter of fact, Mrs. Haynes won only two holes in the contest, the first and seventh. Mrs. Morrow was in the traps at both of these holes.

Mrs. Haynes Scores 42 on Nine.

Tschiffely Trophy Golfwomen's Goal

The Tschiffely Trophy tournament, an event staged annually in honor of Mrs. Douglas Tschiffely, golf chairman, will hold the interest of feminine players at the Washington Golf and Country Club Wednesday and Thursday of this week.

It will be in the form of a 36-hole medal tournament, 18 holes each day, with a handicap allowance up to 25. Entries will be accepted up to the day of the event by Mrs. Tschiffely. She may be reached at Adams 9042. Already 31 women have entered.

Prizes are donated by Mrs. Tschiffely, Mrs. J. E. McCabe and Mrs. C. H. Merillat.

The pairings to date, as announced yesterday by Mrs. C. B. Stewart, of the golf committee, follow:

9:30—Mrs. William F. Hall, Mrs. J. L. Fleser, Mrs. R. N. Sutton; 9:35—Mrs. C. B. Stewart, Mrs. Douglas Tschiffely, Mrs. J. H. Wooton; 9:40—Mrs. C. H. Merillat, Mrs. J. E. McCabe, Mrs. P. W. Bradbury; 9:45—Mrs. G. S. Bogan, Mrs. G. C. Roney, Mrs. O. Thacker; 9:50—Mrs. J. H. Powell, Mrs. Byron Price, Mrs. M. S. Whaley; 9:55—Mrs. R. P. Brandt, Mrs. L. Brubaker, Mrs. P. Nesbit.

10:00—Mrs. O. S. Applegate, Mrs. M. Palmer, Miss Peggy Barker; 10:10—Mrs. G. R. Fenwick, Mrs. A. B. Moore, Mrs. H. B. Willey; 10:20—Mrs. F. B. Coggswell, Mrs. P. A. McLendon, Mrs. D. C. Gruver; 10:30—Miss Ida L. Claggett, Mrs. K. P. Wood; 10:40—Miss A. Hinderliter, Mrs. Norman Landreau.

Competition Is Keen, But Favorites Win Their Matches.

WARDMAN courts resounded with the steady twang of a tennis ball coming in contact with a racquet from early morning until late afternoon yesterday as two score of Washington's rising young tennis stars opened the annual junior and boys tournaments. Keen competition was the order of the day, although none of the more favored players fell by the wayside.

One near upset enlivened the proceedings in the junior ranks when Sam Meloy forced George Cranston into an extra set before succumbing. Cranston lost the first set, 3—6, and succeeded in taking the second by an 8—6 margin only after his opponent had deuced the score and threatened to assume the lead. Cranston finally fell into his true stride in the deciding cluster of games to win by a score of 6—4.

Gilbert Hunt Routs Joe Warthen.

Gilbert Hunt won easily from Joe Warthen in straight sets, and Frank Williams, Episcopal High School ace, who with Hunt is a heavy favorite to reach the finals, disposed of Ed Harned, also in straight sets.

Little Billy Turner waged a gallant but futile battle against the bigger Harry McGinnis before losing, 11—9, 6—8. Turner, a wee mite of a chap who wasn't a great deal higher than the net, was obliged to take about two steps to one by his rival and McGinnis wore him out with some well placed shots.

Both tournaments will recess today and play will be resumed tomorrow and continue every day until champions have been crowned. The finals probably will be played Thursday.

JUNIORS.

First round—Cranston defeated Meloy, 3—6, 8—6, 6—4; Williams defeated Harned, 6—1, 6—4; Schaeffer defeated Finnegan, 6—0, 6—1; Doyle defeated Whittle, 6—2, 3—6, 7—5; Robinette defeated Mintz, 6—3, 6—1; Hunt defeated Warthen, 6—1, 6—4; Moore defeated Kendall, 6—4, 6—4; Langtry defeated Glocksler, 6—2, 6—2; Rosenberg defeated Kay, 6—3, 6—2. Second round—Boyle defeated Haske, 6—3, 9—11, 6—2; Howell defeated Rhoades, 6—1, 7—5.

BOYS.

First round—Dennison defeated Coward, 6—1, 6—0; McGinnis defeated Turner, 11—9, 6—3. Second round—Thompson defeated Ashton, 4—6, 6—1, 6—3; Johnson defeated Smith, 6—2, 6—3; Robbins defeated March, 6—4, 6—4; Bernstein defeated Sense, 6—1, 6—1; Adair defeated Corwin, 6—0, 6—1.

One Bad Hole Costly To Maj. Sutherland

One bad hole, the 504-yard thirteenth, where he took a 7, cost Maj. R. K. Sutherland, Army and Navy Club champion, his chances for turning in a subpar score yesterday at his home course. Maj. Sutherland shot a 72, negotiating the outgoing nine in 34, 2 below par. Par for the course is 72.

He was playing with Maj. Robertson, who carded a 74.

Maj. Sutherland's card follows:

Out—4 5 3 4 4 4 3 3 4—34
In— 3 3 4 7 4 5 4 4 4—38—72

Army-Navy Handicap Is Won by Maj. Noyes

Maj. E. A. Noyes yesterday won the spring handicap match play championship of the Army and Navy Country Club by canquering Maj. A. C. Dearing in the finals, 3 and 2. Two up at the turn, Maj. Noyes finished strong, turning in a 76 medal.

Shooting 13 straight pars, Capt. E. R. Shipp defeated W. B. Downs by 7 and 5 to win second flight honors. Capt. Shipp rounded the turn in 36 and shot 3-4-4-4 until the match ended.

Lieut. Comdr. Vann beat Maj. O. F. Wood, 3 and 1, in the third flight.

First flight consolation prize went to Leonard Thrasher, who beat Dr. W. I. Ogus, 5 and 3. In the second flight, Gen. F. Kramer won from Commander M. C. Robertson, 5 and 4.

West Potomac Title Is Landed by Messick

J. E. Messick, playing rock-steady golf throughout, defeated Herman Allen by 2 and 1 yesterday to win the West Potomac Unlimited golf championship.

A protege of the veteran pro Jack Tucker, the new West Potomac titleholder was 4 up at the turn on Allen, the big favorite. It was Messick who eliminated the medalist, Claude Rippy.

In the finals of the second flight, J. B. Much beat George Lee by 2 and 1. Paul White won third honors by whipping Al Simon, 6 and 5. Abram Jones conquered M. R. Sexton by 1 up in the fourth-flight finals, while Arthur Robinson, one-armed golfer, took Dave Walsh in tow by 6 and 5 to capture the fifth flight.

Crawford Beats Kirby In Davis Cup Net Play

London, June 10 (A.P.).—Jack Crawford sent Australia away winging in its bid for a semifinal berth in the European zone of Davis Cup play today as he defeated V. G. Kirby, veteran South African internationalist, 8—6, 6—1, 6—3, in the first match of their five-match series.

Vivian McGrath, Australian boy prodigy, made it two victories for the day as he defeated C. J. J. Robbins, South Africa, 7—5, 6—4, 4—6, 10—8.

Australia tonight thus needed only one more victory to clinch the series and the right to meet Japan in the next round.

George Washington Netmen Still Tied With Rock Creek

ROCK CREEK and George Washington clung to first and second places, respectively, in the Women's District Tennis League, as a result of last week's matches.

Rock Creek has won 8 and lost 2 and George Washington 10 and 4. The Nationals, aided by four victories by Mary Louise Braselton, advanced to third place in the standings.

Mrs. Charles P. Stone, playing No. 1 on Edgemoore, tops the league in percentage and number of victories, having five without a loss.

Goodman's 287 Wins Open By Stroke Over Guldahl

Today's spectacular victory for Johnny Goodman brought to a climax the career of a struggling youth who set out, like a golfing David, to take a few healthy wallops at the Goliaths of the game and finally succeeded, beyond the fondest hopes of his partisans, after five meteoric seasons.

Four years ago, at Pebble Beach, officials debated whether Johnny's amateur standing was jeopardized by his part-time work in a sporting goods store, decided finally in his favor and then saw him flash to fame by beating Bob Jones in the first round of the national amateur championship. That same year he made his first start in the national open and finished with 318 at Winged Foot, while Jones slaughtered Al Espinosa in a play-off for the title.

Less than a year ago Goodman's record wasn't considered good enough to give him a place on the American Walker Cup team. That was before he finished as low amateur in the open, tied for fourteenth. Subsequently, he soundly whipped a good share of the Walker Cup stars, including Capt. Ouimet, and reached the finals of the national amateur, losing to Ross Somerville, of Canada.

Weighing 30 pounds heavier and, by his own frank admission, hitting a much longer ball than ever, Goodman sailed into this tournament chock full of confidence and primed for the big "killing" of his career.

They didn't mention his name seriously in the pretournament speculation. Professional betting men stamped him a 20-to-1 shot in a field of 150 of the greatest shot makers in America, led by the double champion, Gene Sarazen.

There wasn't, in fact, much for Omaha and the Goodman marching and cheering section to root about after Johnny finished the first round in 75, 7 strokes back of the seasoned, brilliant Tommy Armour, who had a course record of 68. But from there on, the slim, hatless youth from the great American midlands was the whole show.

With the same nonchalance that marked his rise as at 19 to stardom, Goodman coolly ripped the North Shore course to ribbons with a 66, 6 under par, equaling the all-time tournament record, and giving him a 2-stroke lead over the faltering Armour.

Treats Gallery to 70 Round.

He came back on the third round this morning with a huge gallery stampeding his course, to crack par again with a 70. On two rounds in succession he was 8 under par, and well-nigh miraculous around the greens. On each he took only 26 putts, 10 under par for this specialty. Literally, the Nebraskan chipped and putted the greatest of American professionals to rout.

This glittering streak lasted three more holes, at the outset of the final round, before Goodman struck the inevitable slump. Three under par on the fourth round, and 9 strokes ahead, Johnny made the mistake of trying to "coast" and had six bad holes in a row before he regained control. The title might have slipped then and there from his grasp, but this little gamester. From the rear came the rumblings of the final pursuit, the last charge of the professional cavalry, but the gap was too big to close for all but Guldahl and he didn't quite have the luck that would have turned defeat into at least a tie and an 18-hole play-off tomorrow.

Guldahl Gives Battle.

Guldahl, a strapping Texas youngster, who has never figured in a previous national championship fight, came out of the beaten pack to give Goodman a rousing battle. He was longer and straighter than Johnny up to the greens throughout the last nine, but missed a half-dozen chances to take the title. He 3-putted two greens, the first and fifteenth of the last round. He missed four putts of less than 4 feet, including a fatal 4-footer on the last green that dribbled away by not much over a foot.

Craig Wood, big blond from New Jersey and largest money winner of the year, boomed forward to challenge Johnny, but he, too, lacked the "Goodman touch" around the greens and, despite two splendid finishing rounds, was three strokes behind, in third place, with 73—76—71—72—290.

Walter Hagen, Ryder Cup captain, trailed Goodman by fifteen strokes starting the last round, but shot a record-equaling 66 to cut away ten shots, and finished in a tie for fourth place with Tommy Armour, at 292. Hagen's round included a two-stroke penalty for driving out of bounds on the seventeenth, on which basis it was probably the greatest eighteen holes ever shot in the American championship. He had seven birdies, and on the hole which penalized him he came back with only three shots to hole out for a 5.

Here was his card:

Out ...... 4 4 3 4 3 4 4 2 4—32
In .... 4 4 4 2 4 4 3 5 4—34—66

Dutra Fades to Seventh.

Olin Dutra, the big P. G. A. champion from Los Angeles, faded back after a good start and finished in a tie for seventh, with Gus Moreland, Texas amateur, at 295. Brother Mortie Dutra nosed into sixth place with 294, and Sarazen, the fallen champion, landed away back in the ruck, tied for twenty-sixth with a total of 303.

That about closed the chief episode marking the victorious path of Goodman, first amateur since Bob Jones to beat the professionals into submission and the fifth to win the American Open. Johnny put himself on the pedestal with such stalwarts as Francis Ouimet, Jerome Travers, Chick Evans and Jones. His winning total, 287, tied the lowest score Jones ever registered in an American Open, although Bob once won the British Open with 285. But for that stretch through the outgoing nine, where he went 6 over par on as many holes, Goodman would have smashed to bits the record score of 286, shared by Evans and Sarazen.

explosion shot out of a sand trap. There it was, just 48 inches from the cup, and all Guldahl had to do was tap it in to collar Goodman and go into an 18-hole playoff tomorrow for the championship.

Ball Rims Cup, Missing Putt.

But he couldn't do it. He took his stance, putted slowly and watched the ball rim the cup, go on past and leave him in second place, 1 stroke behind the little blond-haired amateur. He sank his next putt for a 5, giving him a 70—71 for his last two rounds and a 288, even par, for the 72 holes.

Although Guldahl failed to tie Goodman he won the $1,000 prize for the professional with the lowest score. That was a good break for Guldahl because right at this particular time he hasn't a golfing job. He was with the St. Louis Country Club for two years, but has been unattached since 1932.

Goodman's victory bracketed him with Francis Ouimet (1913), Jerome Travers (1915), Chick Evans (1916) and Bobby Jones (1923, 1926, 1929, 1930) as the only amateur ever to outshoot the professionals in the National Open.

Until today Goodman had never won a major tournament. He started as a caddy at Omaha, bummed his way on a freight train to Denver and won the Trans-Mississippi in 1927. He won it again in 1931. He also has won the Nebraska State Amateur four times in a row, but he never wore a real crown before. Last year he went to the final round of the National Amateur but lost to C. Ross Somerville, the Canadian.

Glenview, Ill., June 10 (A.P.).—Although he failed to win the National Open championship, Ralph Guldahl, young St. Louis professional, who finished one stroke back of the new titleholder, Johnny Goodman, found himself richer by $1,000, the prize money, which customarily goes to the winner, but which was turned over to him because Goodman is an amateur.

Craig Wood, Deal, N. J., added $750 to the $7,000 he won during the winter and spring golf campaigns. Tommy Armour and Walter Hagen, tied for fourth, bagged $600 each. Mortie Dutra got $450 and Olin Dutra, $350. Joe Kirkwood won $156.25; Leo Diegel, $60; MacDonald Smith, Johnny Golden, $50, and Denny Shute, $50, each, and Horton Smith and Abe Espinso, $25, each.

Montrose Takes Lead In Parks Tennis League

STANDINGS.

	W.	L.	Pct.
Montrose	13	5	.722
Rock Creek	11	7	.611
Monument	10	8	.556
Henry Park	10	8	.556
Potomac	5	13	.278
Pierce Mills	5	13	.278

Montrose slipped into the lead in the Public Parks Tennis League yesterday, ahead of Rock Creek, by walloping the Potomac Park team for an 8—1 victory, while Rock Creek was losing to Monument, 5—4. Henry Park scored a 6—3 win over Pierce Mills in the final match of the day.

O'Neill's three-set victory over Tony Latona, which was the lone point registered by Potomac, featured that team's match with Montrose. The veteran O'Neill rallied strongly after the Devitt Prep lad took the first set, 6—3, and won the last two sets in convincing style.

Mitchell beat Herman, 6—2, 3—6, 6—4; O'Neill (Potomac Park) defeated Latona, 3—6, 6—2, 6—1; Buchanan defeated Trigg, 6—4, 6—4; Jacobs defeated R. Sherfy, 6—8, 6—4, 6—1; Heiskell defeated Goldsmith, 6—0, 6—4; R. Smith defeated L. Sherfy, 6—1, 7—5; Mitchell and Buchanan defeated Herman and Trigg, 6—2, 6—4; Jacob and Heiskell defeated O'Neill and R. Sherfy, 7—6, 6—4; Montrose won last doubles by default.

Sidell (H) defeated Ritzenberg, 5—7, 6—3, 6—3; Deck (H) defeated Gould, 6—3, 8—6; Talburtt (H) defeated Stock, 6—2, 7—5; Yeatman (H) defeated Burns, 6—3, 6—2; Tomeldon (P) defeated Krause, 6—3, 6—1; Gardes (P) defeated Grant, 4—6, 6—4, 6—4; Deck and Sidell (H) defeated Gould and Ritzenberg, 6—3, 5—7, 7—5; Talburtt and Yeatman (H) defeated Stock and Burns, 6—3, 6—4; Gardes and Tomeldon (P) defeated Grant and Krause, 3—6, 7—5, 6—3.

CHEVY CHASE WOMEN WIN.

The women's team of Chevy Chase Club beat the Columbia Country Club, 5 to 1, yesterday.

Results:

Marion Prichard (Chevy Chase) defeated Marion Butler (Columbia), 6—3, 6—3; Peggy Keyser (Columbia) defeated Mary Bouve (Chevy Chase), 6—3, 1—6, 6—2; Dorcas Jackson (Chevy Chase) defeated Eleanor Finkel (Columbia), 6—4, 6—2; Doris Ferry (Chevy Chase) defeated Naomi Holt (Columbia), 6—2, 6—1; Adelaide Morgan (Chevy Chase) defeated Virginia Weeks (Columbia), 6—2, 5—7, 6—2.

DOUBLES.

BRINKE WINS GOLF.

Philadelphia, June 10 (A.P.).—Chris Brinke, former Detroit and Louisville star, today won the Philadepia amateur golf championship with a 6 and 5 victory over Harod Cross, jr., of Philadelphia, in the 36-hole final round on the Huntingdon Valley Country Club course.

COLMAR A. C. TO PLAY.

Colmar Athletic Club will play the White Haven tossers on the latter's diamond today at 2:30 o'clock. All players are requested to meet at Manager Dove's home at 1:15 o'clock.

TAKOMA TIGERS PLAY TWICE.

A twin bill is slated between the Takoma Tigers and the Ballston Fireman, beginning at 1:30 on the latter's diamond.

SHARKEY WINS TITLE.

Summit, N. J., June 10 (A.P.).—Jack Sharkey, of Crestmont, today won the State amateur golf championship by defeating Bob Lester, of Baltusrol, 6 and 4. Sharkey held the title in 1929.

Golfwomen In Tourney June 19

Kenwood to Be Host; All Clubs Are Due to Enter Stars.

FEMININE golfers of Washington are tuning up their shots in anticipation of the District championship scheduled the week of June 19 at the Kenwood Golf and Country Club, the home course of the president of the District of Columbia Women's Golf Association, Miss Elizabeth C. Harris.

Entries for the tournament will close on June 17. They should be sent to either Mrs. Douglas Tschiffely, tournament chairman, at 3644 Twenty-fourth street northwest, or to Miss Harris at 1715 R street northwest.

Wednesday and Thursday of this week have been set aside for practice rounds at Woodmont.

The District event is calculated to draw the stars from each of the ten local clubs. Mrs. Dorothy White Nicolson, who defeated Mrs. Everett Synon, of Columbia, for the title last year at Woodmont, will not defend her laurels, according to reports. It was also learned last week that Mrs. Betty Palmer Meckley, 1930-1931 District champion, will not be a participant.

Mrs. Haynes Big Favorite.

With two of the outstanding golfers out of the competition, the big favorite will be Mrs. J. Marvin Haynes, of Columbia, who has not won the championship since 1928. Mrs. Haynes also is Middle Atlantic titleholder.

The host club will present a number of challengers, with Virginia Pope, junior titleholder; Mrs. Leo Walper and Mrs. Katherine May as the chief hopes. Virginia Williams will be a strong contender from Congressional. Others expected to prove serious threats are Miss Susan Hacker and Mrs. Hume Wrong, Chevy Chase; Mrs. Don Scott and Mrs. J. F. Gross, Indian Spring; Mrs. J. W. Beller, Mrs. R. H. Quinter and Mrs. Norman Frost, Columbia; Miss Helen Dettweiler and Mrs. Mack Myers, of Manor; Mrs. W. F. Holtzman, of Army and Navy; Mrs. Jerome Meyer and Mrs. Ralph Goldsmith, of Woodmont, and Mrs. Ora Emge, of Beaver Dam.

Municipal Golfers In Herald Cup Play

Public links feminine players have been extended an invitation to participate in the Herald Cup golf tournament scheduled Friday morning at the Army and Navy Country Club course.

Announcement that the municipal golfers had been asked to play will serve to make the competition all the keener, with such stars as Mrs. Peggy Wooton, recent winner of the Rock Creek public links championship; Mrs. Mae Hill, runner-up; Mrs. Florence Godfrey, Miss Betty Garber and Mrs. Evelyn Glaviss ready to challenge the big guns of the District Clubs.

Entries will be received by Mrs. W. F. Holtzman at Cleveland 5900, and by Mrs. E. K. Wing at Emerson 8716. More than 100 District golfers will compete.

Omaha Plans Welcome To Goodman Wednesday

Omaha, Nebr., June 10 (A.P.).—A civic welcome will greet Johnny Goodman, 23-year-old Omahan, when he returns home Wednesday from Glenview, Ill., where he captured the United States open golf championship today.

From Fair Acres to his former home in Prohibition Hill—opposite ends of the city and the social ladder—his townspeople tonight rejoiced in his feat.

A band, city and State officials and thousands of his admirers will be on hand to join in the welcome. Lieut. Gov. Jurgensen will deliver the address of congratulation. The story of the orphaned lad who overcame poverty and other obstacles to rise from caddy to golf king is known to everyone here. Seven brothers, two sisters and his father share in Johnny's joy in his triumph.

Columbia Golfwomen Lead Team Matches

Kenwood and Chevy Chase will make a determined effort to overhaul Columbia in the first team matches of the District of Columbia Women's Golf Association tomorrow morning at Chevy Chase.

Columbia's women, champions in 1932, are leading the race with 48 points; Kenwood has 42½ and Chevy Chase 42. Chevy Chase is offered the best opportunity, since it engages Columbia at 10 o'clock at No. 1 tee. At No. 10 tee at 9:30 Kenwood faces Woodmont.

Other matches find Beaver Dam opposing Manor at 9 o'clock at No. 1; Congressional meeting Army and Navy at No. 1 and Indian Spring battling Washington at 10 o'clock at No. 10 tee.

Miss Gorczyca, Texas, Wins Dixie Golf Crown

Albany, Ga., June 10 (A.P.).—Miss Aniela Gorczyca, of Fort Worth, Tex., won the Southern Women's golf championship here today and took the title west of the Mississippi River for the first time in history. She beat off a late rally by Mrs. Ben Fitzhugh, defending champion, of Vicksburg, Miss., and won one up in a stirring match.

The last nine holes of play were replete with excitement. Mrs. Fitzhugh, three down to the slender Texan, rallied, took four straight holes and had the match all even at the thirty-third. Miss Gorczyca slipped one up again on the thirty-fourth, but Mrs. Fitzhugh tied the count on the thirty-fifth.

They went to the thirty-sixth tee with the gallery tense with excitement. The Mississippian drove into the rough but recovered nicely. She was on a good spot, but then topped a brassie shot and lost the match. It took her four shots to get on the green and three to sink the ball. The Texan was on in three and down in three more to end the match.

By DAVE HERMAN

WHEN the board of governors of Congressional Country Club last week authorized the holding of an invitation tournament on June 20, 21, 22, 23, it not only spiked all rumors floating about the District that such an event would not take place, but also did something for the good of dear old golf in this section.

Columbia already had called off its invitation, and only the other night Indian Spring decided that it would not be advisable to plan for an invitation tournament this season.

Thus, until Congressional made official the announcement that it would carry out its intended invitation program, the District was faced with a situation that cropped up last year when only two golf clubs, Army and Navy and Chevy Chase, conducted tournaments of this type.

It is unfortunate that with such splendid golfers as the District possesses and with the interest displayed in the most successful invitations conducted by Manor and Chevy Chase, other clubs from the Nation's Capital could not have stuck by their original plans.

Golf Always Popular Here.

Golf will never be anything but a popular sport in Washington. It is a pastime that one enjoys playing and watching. Yet there would be more incentive to play if more competitive events were on the bill.

Interclub rivalry is needed. The District championship and the invitation tournaments usually supply it.

When the annual women's District golf championship opens at Kenwood on June 19 one of the best players in this section will be missing.

She is Mrs. Betty Palmer Meckley, who has announced definitely that she will not be a contestant in the all-important District event.

Illness has prevented Mrs. Meckley from playing golf this spring and at the same time participating in the various tournaments around this way. It probably will be several months before she will be able to play again, and a good feminine golfer will be missed in the District.

It was Mrs. Meckley who qualified with an 88 for the last Women's National championship—the first District woman in 25 years to make the grade. She has every shot in the bag that a woman golfer would want, and is the holder of the feminine course record at Indian Spring, her home links.

Chevy Chase Seniors Busy.

Those venerable senior warriors from Chevy Chase have returned to their golf wars with renewed interest and vigor.

Where a few months ago there was little or perhaps no activity among the veterans, the past week has witnessed an unusually fine turnout by the men for daily rounds. Last season the Chevy Chase Senior Association had the reputation of being one of the most active in the country, and members are making a determined effort to see that there is no slump in competitive events this year.

Of cheering news to the seniors was the announcement a few days ago that handicaps had been rearranged. The rating of the seniors has long been a matter of discussion, but Prof. Willie Hardy Bob Barnett's club maker de luxe, informs us that the new handicaps have met with the unanimous approval of the veteran linksmen. Prof. Hardy, be it known, is as interested in the welfare of the seniors as he is in producing high-powered and high-class wooden clubs in his workshop at Chevy Chase. Smiling Willie, in addition to assisting in conducting the senior tournaments, keeps the most complete book of statistics on the golfers' scoring you have ever seen.

Ask him how Gen. R. H. Allen, the esteemed veteran, scored last year and this season, and Prof. Hardy will dig into his files and emerge armed with the data.

Coming back to the handicaps, we might mention that they have been adjusted on the basis of the five best scores produced by each senior in 1932, with a par of 78—women's par—the prevailing figures for this season.

Gen. Allen Plays From Scratch.

Gen. Allen, than whom there is no whomer so far as the seniors are concerned at Chevy Chevy, and for that matter in the District, is the only golfer in the list entitled to play from scratch. This is an honor richly deserved by the affable 73-year-old gentleman, a most remarkable golfer for his age. Last year Gen. Allen turned in scores as low as 73 and 74, in addition to a flock of others in the high seventies. Reaching into the box the other day, Prof. Hardy pulled out the general's score that showed an 82, although he is believed to have shot much lower since he resumed his golfing last month. L. R. Aiken, another fine senior golfer, had an 82 to his credit, while Admiral C. B. McVey posted an 85.

These scores will be used in the competition for low net and low gross prizes which are contested for each month. Another monthly event of interest is the putting contest, and, as is customary at the club, the ringers' tournament will be continued for several months. Gen. Allen, with a 51, was the ringers' champion last year, while E. M. Talcott won the net ringers' prize with his 53.

Gen. Allen, scratch; C. L. Billard, 16; W. G. Brantley, 18; F. W. Coleman, 6; Ed Clifford, 11; E. K. Campbell, 15; J. W. Childress, 5; C. B. Drake, 7; L. R. Eatkin, 7; H. E. Ely, 6; E. A. Hickman, 10; C. P. Hill, 11; Gen. Frank R. Keefer, 15; E. I. Lewis, 18; W. Beverly Mason, sr., 4; W. C. Menderhall, 11; R. S. Merriman, 6; G. B. Miller, 18; H. P. McCain, 10; Admiral C. B. McVay, M. H. Patrick, 14; W. G. Peter, 3; R. V. Patterson, 14; H. L. Rust, 12; H. C. Sheridan, 10; F. M. Savage, 18; D. C. Shanks, 12; H. R. Stanford, 16; E. M. Talcott, 3; C. G. Treat, 6; W. Van Devanter, 18; C. V. Wheeler, 10; E. O. Wagenhorst, 10; F. S. Wynn, 13.

The senior members recently welcomed the return of Percival S. Ridsdale, who played from scratch last season. Mr. Ridsdale won the District senior championship two years ago and was runner-up to Homer S. Pope, Indian Spring, last year.

There will be plenty of golf balls flying over Indian Spring's course today, and plenty of golfers doing the firing.

The reason for all the heavy traffic along the stiff Donald Ross layout is a number of tournaments—three, to be exact.

Of paramount interest among the members is the second round of match play in the Tidal Bowl championship, which last week saw such favored stars as Craig McKee (the big boy from George Washington University, who clicked off a magnificent subpar 69 in a stirring battle to win medal honors); Tom Belshe, Earl McAleer, Dr. Larry Otell and Parker Nolan coast through their initial matches.

Competition for the Tomahawk Cup, which will be in the form of a 72-hole medal test, will be resumed today, as will the battle for the [illegible] championship.

Ladies' Event Tuesday at Indian Spring.

And speaking of the ladies, there won't be anything on tap for them today, but on Tuesday they will hold their "Ladies' Day" events, a feature of which will be a class in chipping and putting by little George Diffenbaugh. This business of giving instructions free as a part of "Ladies' Day" events is finding favor with the professionals hereabouts. Cliff Spencer, of Beaver Dam, instructs a class of some 25 women each Wednesday. Al Houghton has been giving the women at Kenwood a few pointers just before they tee off for the weekly sweepstakes.

If we remember correctly, it was George Jacobus, dynamic president of the Professional Golfers' Association, who told the Middle Atlantic pros at a meeting at Chevy Chase a few months ago that a "pro never does himself any harm by giving free lessons now and then."

"It's helpful in the long run," Jacobus said.

Golfers at Indian Spring have noted with interest the remarkable progress made in the past few months by one of its members, C. H. Waller.

"One of the most improved golfers at my club," is the way Professional Diffenbaugh put it.

Quite true. Waller has been playing golf just a bit over two years. Before the summer ended in 1932 he was shooting all over the lot for scores bordering around the 105 mark.

Today he is scoring in the high eighties. He is learning to swing his club in the proverbial groove and is reeling off potent drives with his woods and irons. Accuracy is fast coming his way.

Pro Smoothed Parker Nolan's Game.

It has also come to attention that Mr. Diffenbaugh has helped to smooth over some of the rough spots in Parker Nolan's wooden play. Regarded as one of the longest drivers in this section, Nolan is hitting his shots with more consistency, thanks to Diffenbaugh's ability to detect some of his faults.

In addition to being blessed with a fine golf temperament, Nolan is one of the coolest players around this way.

This writer would not miss it far if he stated that Earl McAleer, of Indian Spring, is one of the best left-handed sharpshooters in the country. A deadly putter, McAleer is considered almost as good as the next right-handed golfer in the District by a number of pros.

He clouts tremendous wooden shots, being particularly accurate. He puts a lot of steam into every blow. He plays his irons crisply. Also he is a most courageous golfer.

One of his best admirers is young Frank Ortman, student at St. John's, a good golfer himself. Ortman happens to be left-handed. When McAleer discarded his old set of sticks some time ago Ortman took them over in his possession. He wouldn't trade them for all the tea in China.

J. W. Harvey, jr., towering Indian Spring golfer, surprised his friends the other day at Rolling Road course, Catonsville, Md., at the Maryland State sweepstakes.

After not having swung a golf club in more than a month, Harvey came through with a 73 finishing the last few holes in a driving rainstorm. Ernie Caldwell, Middle Atlantic champion, won the plum with his 72.

Harvey had par in for a 70, but took a six on par 4 17th, and a four on the short 18th.

Peacock, Back From School, Practicing.

Roger Peacock, District champion, returned from his studies at Duke University last week, and immediately opened up a vigorous campaign at his home course here, to prime himself for future tournaments.

Peacock fired away on the first nine for a 33, two below par, to the delight of his golfing father, who found it tough trying to keep pace with his champion son.

Indian Spring golfers are looking forward to an intercity match with Baltimore's All Stars, scheduled within the next two weeks. Twenty men will be selected by the golf committee from Indian Spring, and it is understood that others at the club who believe they are better golfers are at liberty to challenge them for places.

Kraft Keen Student of the Game.

Melvin Kraft, lanky young golfer from Woodmont, who last week won the miniature handicap tournament, bids fair to give Howard Nordlinger, six times club champion, a merry battle for honors this season.

Kraft has been watching Tom Hudgins, pro, play his wooden and iron shots, and is taking a cue from him. It is recalled that when Sarazen and Kirkwood played their exhibition at Chevy Chase, Kraft tried to keep as close to the famous shot-maker as he possibly could, endeavoring to pick up a few pointers. He was even heard asking Sarazen why he used a certain club and why he played a certain shot a certain way.

Kraft shot a 78 at Woodmont last Sunday—quite a nifty score. He is willing and determined. Watch him.

CONFEREES AGREE TO FEDERAL AID ON HIGHWAYS IN D. C.

Liaison Officer Plan for Federal Service Meets Defeat, However.

House and Senate conferees on the President's recovery bill last night agreed to District participation in the $400,000,000 Federal highway aid program, provided in a Senate amendment to the measure.

At the same time, the conferees threw out of the recovery bill the Sirovich plan to set up a Federal liaison officer and a Civil Service board of appeals to arbitrate Federal employes' grievances.

Gets $2,000,000 for Roads.

Under the District highway amendment, Washington would receive a minimum of $2,000,000 for the construction of highways, under a formula in which the District shares proportionally with the States.

Opposition to the Sirovich liaison officer plan was said to have been based chiefly on its late introduction, and the fact that no committee hearings had been held on the proposal.

The highway needs of the District are 50 per cent greater than can be accommodated under the 2-cent gas tax and many improvements authorized by Congress in 1927 have not been accomplished because of shortage of funds, the Washington Board of Trade declared yesterday in a statement replying to the question of the need of the District sharing in the appropriations for highways in the industrial recovery bill.

Gasoline Tax Inadequate.

Returns from the 2-cent gasoline tax would be slightly more than $2,000,000 annually, while the highway needs of the District are conservatively estimated at a sum 50 per cent greater than this amount, it was pointed out.

Little progress has been made in grade-crossing eliminations, many of which were specifically authorized by Congress in 1927, it was complained. Bridges in new locations, badly needed because of increased traffic, have not been scheduled, it was charged.

If the $2,000,000 for highway work becomes available to the District, approximately 60 per cent would be expended on thoroughfare streets abutted by Federal or Federal-controlled property, it was shown. Improvement of these would materially benefit the Federal Government, it was added.

Eisenberg Honor Guest at Banquet

A banquet was held in honor of Boris L. Eisenberg, superintendent of the Jewish Foster Home, last night in celebration of his sixty-second birthday, thirtieth wedding anniversary and tenth year as superintendent of the home.

Isaac Nordlinger, president of the board of the institution, addressed the celebrants gathered at the home and praised Mr. Eisenberg's work. He stated that it was through the superintendent's guidance of the inmates that many of them were able to achieve success.

Others who addressed the gathering were Mrs. Charles A. Goldsmith, Dr. George Nordlinger and William Rosenthal. Mr. Eisenberg received a number of gifts.

It was learned later that the man had been despondent on account of domestic troubles.

Man Amuck

Two Policemen Are Hurt in Subduing Escaped Hospital Patient.

Terror was spread in the vicinity of 1300 Delaware avenue southwest late yesterday when Edward Dixon, 42, colored, an escaped inmate of St. Elizabeths Hospital, ran amuck. Four police cars and two patrol wagons were rushed to the scene before the man was subdued, and in the melee two policemen were struck in the mouth by the crazed man, and several of their teeth knocked out.

Private R. S. Warner, of the Fourth Precinct, was struck while trying to pinion the man's arms, and then Private W. E. Grimes was attacked. He suffered a long gash on his face.

MOTHER OF PISTOL VICTIM DESTITUTE

Mrs. Morrison's Parent Is Unable to Pay Funeral; Holland Still in Jail.

The mother of Mrs. Leila Morrison, 28, who died as the result of a freak shooting in the Franklin Park Apartments early Thursday, was located yesterday in Frederick, Md. She was not informed until then of the tragic death of her daughter.

The slain woman's parent's name is Mrs. Sarah Brooks, of 417 Klinehart's Alley, in the Maryland town. She said she is destitute and unable to bear the cost of her daughter's funeral.

Two sisters are also said to survive Mrs. Morrison, one, Mrs. Pauline Lee, of Frederick, and Mrs. George Haller, of Keedysville, Md.

Meanwhile, Elmer W. Holland, 25, special policeman, is held under $5,000 bond at the District Jail pending grand jury consideration of the case which was referred to that body by a coroner's jury Friday.

Mrs. Morrison's body is held at the W. W. Chambers undertaking establishment. So far no one had undertaken to arrange for her burial. A number of her friends have visited the Chambers establishment to view her body.

POLICE SEEK COUPLE TO PROBE SHOOTING

Pair Leave Hospital While Addresses Are Being Checked.

Police were trying early today to clear up the mystery surrounding the shooting of a young woman who slipped from Emergency Hospital with her escort before a complete explanation was obtained from them.

The young woman, who identified herself as Patricia Devin, 20, 1521 Connecticut avenue, came to the hospital with a man who said he was Jack Levy, 3434 Oakwood Terrace northwest. Two 22 caliber rifle bullets were found lodged in the woman's scalp, but she was not seriously hurt.

Police were called. The couple stated that the woman had been accidentally shot, but while police were checking their addresses, both of them slipped from the hospital. Police found the woman had given a fictitious address, but the man apparently had given his correct residence.

Suspicious because of the noncommittal attitude of the couple and the stealth of their departure, police immediately started a search throughout the city for them. It was stated the bullets apparently had been deadened by ricochetting or by distance when they struck the woman.

2 Murder Trials Begin Tomorrow

Two first-degree murder trials will be started in the District Supreme Court tomorrow, one of them charging George P. Harding, 28 years old, with the slaying of Harry "Doc" Davis, and the other charging that Albert Koch, 78 years old, shot to death his son-in-law, William B. F. Gray.

Harding is charged with having shot "Doc" Davis, a brother of Police Inspector O. T. Davis, in front of a New York avenue restaurant April 20. Davis is said to have attempted to act as a peacemaker between Harding and another man, with the result that he was shot.

Koch, accused of shooting his son-in-law, is said to have shot him when Gray slapped him in a domestic argument.

Society Hears of Marriage Of Huidekoper and Marquise

Surprised by Announcement Couple Were Wed in France Wednesday, After Sudden Unexpected Cancellation of Ceremony Scheduled Here.

The tongue of Washington society, set feverishly wagging several days ago by the sensational postponement of the wedding plans of Col. Frederick L. Huidekoper, of Washington, and Marquise Anna Marie Debrinay de Montmart, of Seine-et-Oise, France, was almost stunned into silence yesterday by the announcement that the couple had been quietly married last Wednesday.

The wedding is just as mysterious as the postponement, for no announcement of where the nuptials took place and the persons attending, if any, and honeymoon plans, if any, was forthcoming last night from the couple. The minister, previously engaged to perform the ceremony, professed that he knew nothing of the wedding and was entirely "in the dark" on the subject.

Primed for one of the social events of the season, society was left "holding the bag" when the 59-year-old clubman and military expert suddenly announced that all wedding plans were off. The ceremonies had been set to take place at the Metropolitan Memorial Church, and the Rev. James Shera Montgomery, chaplain of the House of Representatives, was all ready to make the dashing colonel and the distinguished Frenchwoman man and wife.

But something happened, and the plans were cancelled—just like that. No reason was given and, of course, the tongues wagged delightedly.

No one could understand the colonel's shying at a wedding, for he had trod down the aisle before.

In 1916 the debutantes of Washington were dismayed when the colonel married the beautiful Helene K. Elliot. The wedding was one of the social events of the year

Then, nine years later, the couple's divorce in Paris was another outstanding social event of the year.

To the couple were born two sons, Stuart Elliott and Frederic FitzJames. The family lives at 2339 Massachusetts avenue northwest.

The colonel, a well known Washington attorney, is a member of the Montgomery Country Club, Metropolitan Club, Chevy Chase Club, Riding and Hunt Club, the University Club, of New York, and the Bath Club, of London. He holds several citations and decorations for his service as major during the World War.

Owen Names Men For Fourth of July

Subcommittee chairmen for the District's Fourth of July celebration were announced yesterday by Claude Owen, general chairman in charge.

The subcommittee heads are James G. Yaden, community participation; Winfree Johnson, contests and carnivals; Charles W. Pimper, decorations and illumination; Lloyd B. Wilson, finance; Harry H. R. Helwig, fireworks; Albert Clyde-Burton, grounds; Edgar C. Snyder, invitations; Maj. Gen. Anton Stephan, military, patriotic and veteran participation, and Maj Ernest W. Brown, traffic and public safety.

The celebration, to be climaxed by a fireworks display, will include athletic contests, a carnival and a program at the Sylvan Theater.

Fund Provided for Probe Of Air and Ocean Mail

(Associated Press.)

The Senate yesterday adopted a resolution by Senator Black (Democrat), Alabama, providing $25,000 for an investigation of air and ocean mail contracts.

The resolution authorizing the inquiry was adopted several weeks ago, but Senator Copeland (Democrat), New York, had objected to the measure's providing $75,000 for the investigation. This was cut to $25,000 and Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, the Democratic leader, said Copeland had withdrawn his objections.

Vice President Refuses $52,000 Offer on Radio

(Associated Press.)

Vice President Garner refused an offer yesterday to make $52,000 a year in addition to his Government salary. The Texan was offered $1,000 a week, the year round, to make one speech a week over the air. Garner promptly refused, explaining he did not think it proper for a man in his position to discuss Government or public affairs.

Fund for Religious Education Sought

A house-to-house canvass to raise funds to carry on the work of the Arlington County Council of Religious Education is now in progress. The campaign will close next Sunday. H. S. Omohundro, of Lyon Village, is chairman of the finance committee.

The district captains are, Clarendon, Joseph Ross; Lyon Village, Mrs. S. K. Whitesell; Ballston, T. O. Hardestry; Livingstone Heights, Miss Priscilla Merrill; Walkers Chapel, C. W. Rohrer; Barcroft, W. H. Handy; Glencarlyn, Miss Mary Olcott; Arlington, C. F. Heins; Fort Myer Heights, Mrs. Thomas E. Gilbert, and Woodmont, S. L. Leisear.

Plans are being made to continue the week-day religious education in cooperation with the public schools, beginning with the fall term.

Student of Central Wins Gorgas Prize

Frederick L. Church, jr., a student of Central High School, was announced yesterday as one of the winners of the fifth annual Gorgas Memorial Essay Contest. Prizes ranging from $10 to $500 will be awarded the winners by Admiral Cary T. Grayson, president of the Gorgas Institute, and by the Henry L. Doherty Co., of New York City, donor of the prizes.

The announced winners represented the result of the State and Territory contests. A national winner will be chosen. The subject of the essay contest was "The Problem of the Mosquito and Other Insect Life in Relation to Sanitation, Health and Industry."

The winning State manuscripts are now being considered by the national judges who represent the United States Public Health Service, the United States Office of Education and the American College of Surgeons.

Both Parties in Tribute To Ragon, to Be Judge

(Associated Press.)

Members of the House rose to their feet last night in a cheering tribute to Representative Ragon, Arkansas Democrat, who is expected to resign this week and take office as Federal judge for the Western District of his State

Representative Treadway (Republican), Massachusetts, said the "opposition party feels a deep and sincere regret in the loss of the able gentleman from Arkansas from membership in the House, but knows the Nation gains in his elevation to the Federal bench."

Representative Doughton (Democrat), North Carolina, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, brought more applause when he termed Ragon a man "of great integrity and ability, beloved by his own party."

War Secretaries Leave On Airplane Trip North

(Associated Press.)

Secretary Dern and Assistant Secretary Woodring left here by plane yesterday for the North, Dern headed for West Point and Woodring en route to Boston to join his fiancee, Miss Helen Coolidge, daughter of Senator Coolidge, of Massachusetts. The Secretary of War was to leave the plane at Newark and go on to the Military Academy for graduation exercises.

Miss Coolidge will join Woodring for a tour of inspection of Fort Devens, at Ayer, Mass. The Assistant Secretary planned to visit the Coolidge home at Fitchburg before joining Secretary Dern at the Point.

PHILADELPHIA HOLDS 4 MEN WANTED HERE

Mechanics Bank Robbery Suspects Arraigned There on Similar Charge.

Washington authorities' hopes of bringing four men identified as the robbers who held up the southeast branch of the Washington Mechanics Savings Bank last April to trial here in the near future, was diminished yesterday with their arraignment in Philadelphia in a $40,000 bank robbery there last December.

The men are, Abraham Raifer, 24; Benjamin Berliner, 22, Herbert Sarnowsky, 25, and Max Zove, 36. They were held without bail in Philadelphia in the robbery of a West Philadelphia branch bank.

Descriptive circulars asking for the arrest of Harry Libby, 37, and Charles Thornton (Doc) Bean, 39, well-known police characters with a string of aliases, in connection with the $24,000 robbery of the Woodridge-Langdon Savings & Commercial Bank several months ago, were sent to police in all parts of the country yesterday by Inspector Frank S. W. Burke, chief of detectives.

Warrants for the arrest of the two men were issued by U. S. Commissioner Needham C. Turnage.

The circulars state that a reward of $250 will be paid by the United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co., of Baltimore, for the arrest and conviction of the men. An additional reward of 10 per cent of any of the stolen money that may be recovered also will be paid.

Bean is described as being a drug addict who, nearly always armed, is "dangerous." Both he and Libby are said to have criminal records in other cities, including Baltimore, Philadelphia and New York and have numerous underworld connections.

Hound Lost

Red, With Representative's Office as Headquarters, Is Missing.

Red, a fox hound from Williston, Fla., has disappeared from the House Office Bluilding, where he has been paying a visit to Representative R. A. Green, of Florida.

The dog was brought here by Miles Hammond, of 415 New Jersey avenue southeast, from Florida, where he was raised to hunt fox and wildcats on the plantation of the late Giroud E. Hammond, prominent cattleman and sportsman of Marion County, Fla.

Upon arriving in Washington Red made the office of Representative Green his headquarters. He is 10 years old and walks with a limp.

D.C. COMMISSIONERS NAMING THIS WEEK

President to Make Selections Before He Goes on Trip to New England.

President Roosevelt is expected to name the two new civilian District Commissioners before he goes on his hard-earned vacation, but he is in no hurry to do so. Selections have not been made, it was said authoritatively at the White House yesterday.

Postmaster General James A Farley has had two conferences with the President in the last few days, but no decision has been reached Responsibility for that is to be laid, in part at least, to the extraordinary pressure of national affairs which has engaged the President's attention for most of the hours of each day.

The long list of candidates has been cut down to only a few names. Just what names remain under consideration has not been disclosed. Friends of Melvin C. Hazen are counting on his selection. Supporters of Malcolm S. McConihe are confident he will be named. Those who are backing Joseph J. Cotter also are confident, as are the friends of Ernest G. Walker and the supporters of various other candidates.

Obviously all can not be named and some are going to be disappointed, but the President has given no indication, publicly, of his choice. He is expected to name his men some time this week.

12 REZONING PLEAS WON AND 11 DENIED BY COMMISSIONERS

Six Other Applications Are Either Withdrawn or Action Deferred.

Twelve applications for rezoning were granted, 11 were denied, and 6 were withdrawn or action on them deferred by the District zoning commission, Capt. Hugh P. Oram, executive officer, announced yesterday. An amendment to the zoning act to permit the establishment of automobile repair shops in first commercial zones if owners of 75 per cent of the property within 200-foot radius consent was adopted.

The commission denied the application of the George W. Riggs estate for rezoning 1617 I street northwest from residential to first commercial and also the request of Preston E. Wire, builder, to rezone a tract on the east side of Connecticut avenue, between Morrison and McKinley streets, for the construction of a group of retail stores with front parking facilities.

Applications Granted.

Among other applications granted were:

Change from residential 60 C and 40 A restricted to residential 60 A parcel 70/100, bounded by Sixteenth, Shepherd and Seventeenth streets and Piney Branch parkway.

Change from residential 60 B area to first commercial 60 D area lots 110 and 111, square 4068, on north side of Florida avenue, between Trinidad and Orren street northeast.

Area Changes Made.

Change from residential 40 C area to residential 40 A area the C area on the north side of Pennsylvania avenue, between Branch avenue and a line 550 feet east of Thirtieth street and at right angle to Pennsylvania avenue southeast.

Change from first commercial 60 C area to residential 40 A area part of parcel 143/24 abutting on Rhode Island avenue, between Brentwood road and unnamed street between Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets northeast.

Most of the other changes were on unnamed streets.

N. A. A. Puts Ervin On Contest Board

Maj. R. Gilpin Ervin, flying instructor at Rockwell Field, Calif., during the World War, was named yesterday by former Senator Hiram Bingham, president of the National Aeronautic Association, on the contest committee of the association, succeeding Clifford W. Henderson, who resigned.

The resignation of Mr. Henderson, who was manager of the national air races for several years, follows that of Mrs. Amelia Earhart Putnam, as vice president of the association and a member of its contest committee.

Both resignations are said to have been the result of a feud between the association and independent aviation interests, which are planning an unsanctioned air meet of national importance in Chicago July 1 to 4, in competition with the national air races in Los Angeles at the same time.

Summer Courses To Open at G.W.U.

DETACHED COLONIAL RESIDENCES SHOWN

Homes Built by Matheny in Chevy Chase Combine Attractive Features.

Located in an attractive section of Chevy Chase, south of Chevy Chase Circle, between Connecticut avenue and Rock Creek Park, a new group of charming detached colonial residences have been opened to the public by the Matheny Construction Co., through J. Wesley Buchanan, Inc., realtors. This group is conveniently reached by driving out Connecticut avenue to Chevy Chase Circle, driving right along Western avenue and Rittenhouse street to Utah avenue, and turning left to Thirty-first street.

The exhibit home is at 6145 Thirty-first street northwest. The unusual colonial design, marked by its simplicity and beauty of proportions is carried out in brick with gable slate roof, covered flagstone porch and long green shutters forming a pleasing color harmony with the home set back on a deep, sodded, landscaped lot with detached brick garage, continuing the motif of the home.

The interior reveals spaciousness of plan, beauty of decoration, modern equipment and many conveniences that add to the comfort and utility of the home. The visitor is delighted with the care the builders have shown in the completeness with which every detail has been executed. One enters the reception hall with coat closet and passes into the large living room at the front of the house with its colonial open fireplace.

Bright, spacious and well-planned for attractive furnishing, it sounds a note of real hospitality. The adjoining dining room of ample proportions, leads through French doors to the sunroom, forming a combination of rooms that offers unusual advantages for entertaining. There is an open rear deck entered from the sunroom.

Wives Approve Kitchen.

The kitchen meets with the enthusiastic approval of the housewife. It is bright and well-ventilated, with white-painted walls and a colorful tile pattern of inlaid linoleum on the floor. At one end, through an archway, is a cozy breakfast nook with white-painted table and benches and a colonial china cabinet in the corner. The kitchen equipment includes a double drainboard, white porcelain sink, with window above it, the central feature of a built-in cabinet arrangement, finished in light blue, for dishes, utensils and housecleaning equipment. On the opposite side of the room is an automatic refrigerator and a Roper fully-automatic, table-top gas range with Telechron clock controling both oven and top burners. The range of smart design and permanent beauty, is modern in every respect, with no hinges or bolt-heads showing.

It is compact, saving floor space, steps and cupboard space. The cooking top is acid-resisting porcelain with four-burner lids and parts easily removed for cleaning. The "fresh air" ventilated oven with "lifetime cooking chart" on the door, is thoroughly insulated with rock wool, which will not pack down, deteriorate, crumble or rust. The new radio dial oven heat control can be operated manually or by the Telechron clock. In this type of oven, there are no hot or cold spots. The sliding broiler of cast-aluminum improves the taste of the food. It moves in and out with the broiler door like a drawer, opening to a horizontal position which gives flexibility to its use. There are two roomy utility drawers. The range is of cast-iron construction with acid-resisting porcelain enamel, inside and out, including oven linings, sanitary and easily cleaned.

Modern Cooling Control.

This new improved Insta-Matic range with in-built Telechron clock, automatically lights the burner or burners to be used at any specified time, maintains the oven temperature desired and stops the burner or burners at the correct time. There is also automatic lighting for manual control, accomplished by simply turning the valves. This new creation has been fully tested and approved. It is safe, efficient and positive in operation. The housewife can place her evening meal in the oven, set the simple controls and leave home for the day. While she is away the range will start itself, maintain the exact temperature desired and stop itself at the predetermined time. Upon her return the dinner will be ready to serve, piping hot, without waiting or oven-watching.

Even the top burners have this marvelous control, permitting the preparation of foods on the cooking top for long periods without constant watching. The builders have been alert to the fact that 15,000,000 American housewives find in gas an ideal cooking fuel; that they have found it cheap, clean and dependable, giving instant heat at any time, day or night. With this new range, the housewife will have maximum cooking comfort, plus economy.

The exhibit home at 6145 Thirty-first street northwest, is of the finest construction with furred walls, copper gutters, flashing and down-spouts, copper screens and metal weather-stripping. There are hardwood floors throughout, concealed radiators, quaint wall paper designs, pleasingly combined with ivory-finish trim, convenience outlets, smart brass colonial lighting fixtures and every detail to complete a home of marked charm and refinement. Representatives are on the premises daily and Sunday to explain the many advantages to visitors.

NEW "GAS-CONVENIENCE HOMES" ON THIRTY-FIRST NORTHWEST

Group of new homes offered by J. Wesley Buchanan, Inc., designed by John J. Whelan, architect, and built under his personal supervision by C. R. Matheny. They are located on Thirty-first street northwest, just east of Utah avenue. The houses contain seven rooms, two baths, recreation room, breakfast nook and garage. They are priced according to today's low market. They are reached via Rittenhouse street from Chevy Chase circle, to Utah avenue (at Thirtieth street), then turn left one square to Thirty-first street and right one-half square to the property.

Capital Realtors Move on Chicago

Much interest is being shown in the forthcoming convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, which will be held in Chicago this week, according to H. Clifford Bangs, president of the local board.

In addition to Mr. Bangs, who is accompanied by Mrs. Bangs, the Washington delegation will include:

William C. Miller, national president, and Mrs. Miller; Waverly Taylor, Claud Livingston, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Cafritz, Mr. and Mrs. Homer Phillips, Mr. and Mrs. Roy C. Fristoe, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence F. Donohue, John L. Weaver, past president of the national board and also the local board; Arthur Carr, Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Walker, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur C. Houghton, Worthington Bowie Houghton, Morton J. Luchs, Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Rush, Mr. and Mrs. John F. Maury.

TWO HOMES REMAIN IN GRUVER OFFERING

Well-Designed Dwellings of Solid Brick Construction Offered at $8,750.

Two homes that are in a class by themselves are announced today by that master builder, B. H. Gruver. They are the last two left of a group so excellent that they found immediate purchasers. The exhibit home of these last two is at 412 Ingraham street northwest and is now open for inspection. These homes contain six and seven rooms and two baths and are situated on 158-foot lots. They are offered at $8,750 each.

One reason their neighbors were acquired so rapidly is because they are "B. H. Gruver Built," a term signifying excellence in construction and planning. Mr. Gruver's successful career as a builder of thousands of homes backs the foregoing trademark. The rest of the reasons are to be found in the countless details of refinement and equipment that so obviously characterize homes with far more than the low price at which this group has been offered.

Solid Brick Construction.

Typical of the standard quality of every Gruver-built home, these dwellings of solid brick construction have everything and are built for permanance and everlasting satisfaction to the owner. They have cozy, heated recreation rooms with stippled walls and special process water-proofed floors, two ultra modern baths and kitchens as fine and complete as in a $20,000 home, screened porches, cedar closets, terraced front yards, with brick retaining walls and garages.

To visit these houses, drive out Georgia avenue to Ingraham street and turn right on eastwardly to the exhibit house.

This offering is of great significance to the home-buying public. Not only do these houses fulfill, and even surpass, the requirements of The Washington Post model homes, but the fact that they are "B. H. Gruver Built" commends them to the serious consideration of those who desire all that is good in homes.

Big Savings Offered.

Mr. Gruver has been a leading builder of quality homes for more than a quarter of a century and has established entirely new standards of value. Taking advantage of lower building costs, he has produced substantial savings to the purchaser in these homes, surpassing the long-established standards of his organization.

Thrifty purchasers will realize that they can not afford not to buy such homes as these when they are such a value on the local market.

The exhibit house and its neighbor are typical of the high quality of every "B. H. Gruver Built" home. They are of solid brick construction, have everything that could be desired in an excellent dwelling, and are built for permanence, convenience, beauty, comfort and the eternal satisfaction of their purchasers.

These houses are being presented for sale by the office of William M. Throckmorton, in the Investment Building.

Approval of Architects Given New Structures

The "approval" rating was given to plans for the following structures last week by the Architects Advisory Council.

Ready readers await the offers in Post Classified Ads, the first thing in the morning.

SOCIAL RESTRICTION FEATURE OF SECTION

Westmoreland Hills Shut to Undesirable Elements of Dense Areas.

Westmoreland Hills meets a distinct need in new home communities in the rapid expansion of the Nation's Capital. Obsolescence and deterioration of home and sections of the city, together with the encroachment of undesirable elements of population have brought forcibly to the attention of property owners the desirability of moving to a new community where proper restrictions will protect them against the disadvantages they have suffered in their present location. These objectionable conditions have risen largely in moderately priced home communities in the more densely populated sections of the city.

The family considering locating in a restricted community often believes that homes properly protected by far-reaching restrictions and built to their own requirements are prohibitive in price. In many sections this is actually the case, but Westmoreland Hills was designed to meet the needs of professional people, business executives and Army and Navy officers who require a community of neighbors whose standard of living is in harmony with their own, where homes can be built at prices that they can afford.

The ideal location of Westmoreland Hills makes a distinct appeal to those who love the beauty of a natural setting. Situate on Westmoreland Circle, where Massachusetts avenue crosses the District line, it is easily accessible to the heart of the city by driving along Massachusetts avenue. Lack of traffic congestion permits one to reach the business district in a short 15-minute drive, comparable in point of time with the Bureau of Standards on Connecticut avenue, for Westmoreland Hills is only 5.3 miles from the White House and one-half mile nearer this point than Chevy Chase Circle.

Beautiful Dalecarlia Park.

Bordering on beautiful Dalecarlia Park with vistas of Dalecarlia Lake, its topography offers a variety of gently rolling wooded hills whose contours have been maintained through an attractive plan of development with winding roadways, in sharp contrast to the conventional gridiron plan with its disregard of preservation of scenic beauty and natural advantages. Westmoreland Hills is also close to the exclusive Country Club section of Maryland and is surrounded by types of development in harmony with the plans of the Loughborough Development Corporation for this community.

With regard to restrictions, the developers have wisely provided for architectural control, requiring that all plans for residences by approved by the company. This assures harmony in design and a community free from "architectural eyesores." No lot has a frontage of less than 70 feet, and all homes are set back 38 feet from the curb. These restrictions permit the broadsiding of homes to the street, the use of side driveways and the laying out of ground in the rear of the house for gardens.

While Westmoreland Hills sets no limitation as to the cost of a home, feeling that good taste is not a matter of expense, it offers a combination of advantages which operate to the distinct benefit of the home owner, in providing attractive homes at low cost. The plan of construction includes the design of the home, building and financing. A price is quoted on the ito and home complete, in accordance with the specifications of the architecture on the approved plans.

English Stone Homes.

Prospective home owners who have investigated this plan of construction at Westmoreland Hills have been most agreeably surprised to find that English stone homes and colonial homes of brick and frame with a large lot and detached garage can be acquired at a cost as low as $10,000. In all homes, quality construction is emphasized with the latest equipment, including electrical kitchens, automatic heating and all features of modern design and decoration that make homes comfortable, convenient and express the personality of the owner.

The lower cost of custom-built homes is readily apparent when one realizes that many charges which are essential in ready-built homes due to the uncertainty of sale, advertising and financing are eliminated when a home is built for the owner. It is difficult to estimate the exact amount of these savings, but it is fair to say that a house can be built to meet the owner's requirements for approximately 20 per cent less than a similar, new, ready-built home could be purchased on the market. Under present conditions low building costs also operate to the purchaser's advantage, adding that much extra value to his investment.

Inspection Trips Invited.

Many purchasers have availed themselves of the opportunities offered in Westmoreland Hills and have built their homes under these ideal conditions at prices that mean real savings and profitable investment. When one considers than an individually designed, detached home with garage on a lot with 70-foot frontage can be built for $10,000, using highest grade materials and latest equipment, he is immediately impressed.

In addition the surrounding restrictions for architectural and social control contribute to maintain his investment and assure him of neighbors whose standards of living are in harmony with his own.

Westmoreland Hills is easily reached by driving out Massachusetts avenue past American University to Westmoreland Circle, where this broad highway crosses the District line. Representatives are in attendance at the field office, which is on the circle, daily and Sunday until 7 p. m. and visitors may inspect the homes under construction and go over the plans of the company's architects.

Indian Pestle Unearthed.

Bend, Oreg. (U.P.).—Twelve years ago when plowing in a meadow near here M. W. Knickerbocker unearthed an Indian mortar, the most perfect ever seen in this neighborhood. The other day, while plowing the field again for the first time in twelve years, he unearthed the pestle, in almost identically the same place. Many Indian mortars are found in this part of the State, though few of them are unbroken.

FRIGIDAIRE STEPS UP OUTPUT OF FACTORY

June Production Largest in History of Plant, Manager Says.

Dayton, Ohio, June 10.—Production schedules of Frigidaire Corporation, subsidiary of General Motors, recently were stepped up to such an extent that the number of household electric refrigerators to be built in June will be the greatest for any 30-day period in the history of the company, according to announcement by E. G. Biechler, president and general manager.

At the same time, Mr. Biechler stated, production schedules for the manufacturing of commercial refrigeration equipment will be doubled in comparison with the proposed manufacturing schedule forecast 30 days ago.

Approximately 10,000 men, the largest number since 1929, now are working full time in the company's two plants in Dayton, Mr. Biechler said, to meet orders from virtually every section of the Nation. The buying of household Frigidaires has far exceeded previous estimates, he said, with the result that most of the huge daily shipments leaving Dayton are for immediate installations in purchasers' homes, and not for stock.

"We most assuredly believe," Mr. Biecher said, "that when homeowners begin buying equipment costing in the neighborhood of $100 and up and store owners and restaurateurs begin investing in commercial refrigeration equipment a new deal in buying is here."

Long Island Home Leased.

Douglas L. Elliman & Co., Inc., has leased for W. Plunkett Stewart, of the Philadelphia division of the banking firm of Cassat & Co., his house on East Williston road, Old Westbury, Long Island, furnished, to Paul D. Mills, well-known financier connected with the brokerage firm of Charles D. Barney & Co.

BUILDING PERMITS

The District Government was granted a permit last week by the office of District Building Inspector Oehmann to construct a one-story brick shop at the District Reformatory at Lorton, Va. Its estimated cost is $30,000.

Arthur Kettler, two-story stone and brick residence at 7717 Seventeenth street northwest; cost, $14,000.

C. R. Mann and E. J. Duffy, two-two-story frame and brick veneer residences at 2420 and 2426 Foxhall road; cost, $10,300 each.

Fox Bros., 1½-story brick and tile residence at 6511 Seventh street northwest; cost, $4,250.

Eloise G. Quick, two-story brick and frame dwelling at 3212 Stephenson place northwest; cost, $5,500.

Isaac Dunayer, two-story brick and concrete block residence, store and gasoline station at 4920 Central avenue northeast; cost, $6,000.

U. S. Randle, two 1½-story brick and tile dwellings at 1800 and 1804 Twenty-eighth street southeast; cost, $8,000.

Acciani Construction Co., masonry and frame residence at 3206 Stephenson place northwest; cost, $5,000.

Carl J. and Anna K. Johnson, two-story brick residence at 4517 Twenty-eighth street northwest; cost, $20,000.

I. C. Phillips, two-story brick and frame residence at 705 Oglethorpe street northwest; cost, $5,000.

Nathan Kronman, one-story brick and limestone gas station at 400 New Jersey avenue northwest; cost, $6,000.

Mrs. Charles O'Connor, two-story brick, tile and concrete block dwelling at 4634 Forty-seventh street northwest; cost, $7,000.

Hammering on Rentals Stopping.

Edwin F. Armstrong, of Armstrong & Armstrong, New York, says: "Business seems to be picking up, and the hammering downward in rentals by tenants has eased up considerably. I also note that rent collections are a great deal better than they were a few months ago."

Red Hairs Identify Thief.

Somerville, Mass. (U.P.).—In swearing out a complaint against Peter Bacharewicz in connection with the theft of a cat, Mrs. Mary Trodella declared that several red whiskers allegedly found on the defendant were from the stolen animal.

REALTY MEN SEEK BUSINESS REVIVAL

Chicago, Ill., June 10.—How that badly battered element, public confidence, can be healed, nourished and restored to American business will be described here this week at the first annual meeting of the American Institute of Real Estate Appraisers, to be held at the Stevens Hotel during the sessions of the twenty-sixth annual convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards.

W. W. Butts, past president St. Louis Real Estate Exchange, St. Louis, Mo., will speak Tuesday and tell the realty appraisers the steps that must be taken to induce investors to look again with kindly eyes on mortgages, bonds and debentures.

Officers of the institute state that this is one of the most important addresses on the program because, they assert, there can be no recovery in the real estate market or complete solution of the problems of realty financing until there is a change in the temper and good will of the public.

The two-day program will cover elaborate technical studies made especially for the meeting in addition to the addresses and reports. E. L. Ostendorf, Cleveland, Ohio, will analyze a new study made by Mark Levy, Chicago, on appraising a leasehold under present unusual conditions.

John P. Hooker, Chicago, also will present a comprehensive study that it is expected will be used by men throughout the country as a guide in valuation work. This paper shows the variation in taxes, operating expenses and net income of an operated building over a period of 25 years, which was prepared to indicate how these figures may be anticipated with the maximum accuracy.

Ivan A. Thorson, Los Angeles, Calif., will open the meeting June 14 by telling the appraisers how big their field will be in the future.

Important reports are to be made that day by Ralph D. Baker, Camden, N. J., chairman of the committee on ethics; Joseph B. Hall, Cincinnati, Ohio, chairman of the committee on appraisal procedure, and Joel L. Schlesinger, Newark, N. J., chairman of the committee on the valuation of percentage leases, all of which reports are studies in themselves.

Philip W. Kniskern, New York City, president of the institute, will preside at the sessions. Walter R. Kdehnle, assistant chief deputy assessor of the Cook County real estate department, Chicago, is chairman of the program committee.

Community Buildings Planned.

The Candlewood Isle Holding Co., of which Rodman M. Price is president, is planning to erect a number of community buildings in various sections of the Candlewood, Conn., development. One community lodge has been completed on the eastern tip of the island, overlooking Candlewood Lake. Another clubhouse will be on a site 620 feet by 196 feet.

500,000 Hold Mortgages.

There are 70,000 properties in New York State, on which 500,000 hold mortgages. These loans are participating loans and the face value of the certificates total more than $1,000,000,000.

NEW HOME OPENED IN MICHIGAN MANOR

p. m. are convenient to both bus and street car transportation. Both public and parochial schools are nearby, also churches of many denominations.

From downtown, Michigan Manor is easily reached by automobile via Rhode Island avenue to Twelfth street northeast, then north to Michigan avenue and east to property. From uptown, motorists can drive through Brookland and then directly east on Michigan avenue. An attractive branch sales office has been opened by Lewey, Inc., at Michigan avenue and Fourteenth street northeast, from which home seekers will be directed to the new houses a half-block away. Rhode Island avenue buses go directly by the property.

"The quality of Small-built homes is too well known to need further description," says Arthur Lewey, president of Lewey, Inc. "The low prices, however, will surprise, as they were constructed on the recent low material and labor market. It would cost considerable more to reproduce these houses since the recent increase in construction costs. Fortunate purchasers of the present group of homes will profit by increased value as soon as the next group is built and priced by C. H. Small.

"Michigan Manor is now a well-established community. Home-seekers who have not visited this section for the past year will be surprised at the many new homes and few vacancies, also at the well-paved and landscaped streets."

ARCH DAM SURVEY HELP TO ROOSEVELT

10-Year Study by Engineers of Great Benefit in National Planning.

Problems in construction and in the behavior of materials are brought nearer solution by a ten-year study just completed by the Engineering Foundation, New York, research organization of the major engineering societies of civil, mining and metallurgical, mechanical and electrical engineers.

The findings, it is declared, will advance President Roosevelt's program of national planning, involving development of natural resources, construction of public works and shifts of popualtion.

The foundation's investigation, world wide in scope, centered on problems of construction and designing arch dams, which for centuries had remained unsolved by engineering science. It points the way to economies in construction, according to an announcement by the foundation, and extends scientific knowledge of dams, with which power development, irrigation, water supplies of cities, flood control and security of life and property are bound up.

Four of the most important conclusions are that models of arch dams will react in a manner similar to the structure itself, making possible extensive savings; that some types of tension cracks will not affect the safety of the dam; that the chemically generated heat of the concrete plays an intrinsic part in the serviceability of the structure, and that concrete dams are not stationary, but "flow" to a slight degree in response to water pressure. In other words, concrete is slightly plastic under high pressures.

Because so little was known of arch dams, strong concrete structures with walls curved upstream, the foundation in 1922 appointed the committee on arch dam investigation, with Prof. C. Derleth, jr., of the University of California, as chairman. He was succeeded at the beginning of 1926 by Prof. Charles D. Marx, of Stanford University, former chairman of the engineers' advisory board of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Although many dams of this type had been built previously, the basic facts for use in designing were relatively few, and much was left to assumption grounded on experience and to theory without experimental proof.

Seventy-five organizations contributed more than $125,000 in cash to further the inquiry under the direction of the Engineering Foundation. United States Government bureaus, engineering societies, power companies, manufacturers, constructors and bankers were among those who aided. Contrbutions of services and materials put the total value above $200,000.

In a wild gorge of the Sierras on Stevenson Creek, about 60 miles from Fresno, Calif., an arch dam 60 feet high was built and tested solely for the purpose of uncovering valuable experimental data. Undergoing extreme tests over a period of years and courting destruction in the interest of science, the dam successfully withstood them and the torrents of water that were hurled against it by floods.

LIGHTBOWN OFFERS ATTRACTIVE HOMES

Charming Group of Colonial Architecture Available at Moderate Prices.

The simplicity and charm of early colonial architecture has been pleasingly expressed in the attractive new homes of Cooper C. Lightbown & Sons at Brookmont, Md. This new group of moderately priced, five and six room, brick and frame dwellings is located in a convenient community lying between Conduit road and the Potomac River, one-half mile from the District line. Easily accessible to the city by Conduit road, it is served by street car transportation, has bus service to schools and is close to a neighborhood shopping center.

Many homes in this new operation have been sold to families who appreciate the advantages which such a community offers. Its high elevation and proximity to the Potomac River make it cool and comfortable in summer, enjoying the breezes from the Potomac Valley. The spacious grounds afford ample opportunity for the growing of flowers and the building of attractive gardens, with sufficient room for children to play, removed from the hazards of street traffic. It combines city convenience with the serenity of a suburban community and offers a delightful contrast to the congestion of the city and gives a sense of relaxation after a day's activities in town.

Beautiful Exhibit Home.

The exhibit home at 4102 Maryland drive is marked by its beauty of design, practical plan and modern equipment. It is a two-story, colonial home of brick and clapboard, painted white, with contrasting green, batten shutters with cutout candle design. The entrance leads directly into the spacious living room with brick open fireplace and built-in bookshelves. Connected with this room, through a graceful archway, is the dining room with an attractive bay. From the living room one enters the covered, concrete, screened porch, a delightful place for informal entertaining or for use as an outdoor living room.

The General Electric kitchen charms the housewife with its convenience, modern equipment and lovely color scheme. At one end of the room is a porcelain sink with double drainboard, the central feature of a built-in cabinet group for dishes, silver, and kitchen utensils. There is also a broom closet and space for cleaning equipment. Above the sink is a window, affording light and ventilation. The builders have given careful consideration to the demands of the modern housewife for labor saving equipment in furnishing this room with a G-E Monitor Top refrigerator, a G-E Hotpoint range with fully automatic oven and a smart G-E clock. The color scheme comprises soft tones of buff and apple green, harmonizing with a tiled pattern of inlaid linoleum on the floor.

Bungalow Homes Offered.

In this development there is a second group of two-story bungalow homes with built-in garage and service rooms on the first floor and living room, dining room and bedrooms, kitchen and bath on the second floor. The architecture is distinctive, with painted brick and stained shingles forming a pleasing contrast. In these homes also, the General Electric kitchen is featured.

School Bell to Ring Again.

Monmouth, Oreg. (U.P.).—The old bell at Monmouth Normal School will ring again. For a number of years the bell, which called students to classes for nearly 50 years, has not been rung because the tower in which it hung was deemed unsafe. Now it has been mounted on wheels by a men's fraternity, and will be rung on all appropriate occasions.

EXHIBIT SHOWS HOW HOME IS FINANCED

Chicago.—First-day visitors to Chicago's Century of Progress Exposition learned a scientific financing procedure to own their homes debt-free when they visited Home Planning Hall.

A display presented by the United States Building and Loan League centers attention on an exact replica of the picturesque old house at 4276 Orchard street, Philadelphia, which was the first home ever bought in this country with the aid of a building and loan association mortgage. Bought by the lighter of street lamps of the village of Frankford, Pa., Comly Rich, in the year 1831, this home is used in the exhibit to show the beginnings of cooperation between savers and people who wanted to own homes—a beginning which made possible the long-term mortgage with its sound provisions for paying off the entire debt.

The scene of the 1831 transaction is paralleled in another portion of the exhibit, showing a modern home and the modern savers and home owners who are cooperating toward the ultimate goal of the debt-free home.

The story of home financing as revealed in the building and loan exhibit carries through the hundred-year period of the development of local thrift and home financing institutions and their use of the practical long-term, monthly installment mortgage, so that the family ultimately realizes its ambition of owning property unencumbered. It then brings the Federal Home Loan Bank System into the picture as the beginning of the second great era of financing urban home ownership in America. A graphic depictment of the exact workings of this new home finance reserve system, where the money comes from, and how it is retailed through existing institutions is given a prominent place in the display.

Expedition Seeks Sunken Treasures

Stockholm (U.P.).—A legendary medieval treasure on the bottom of the Baltic Sea, consisting of a large quantity of gems, trinkets, jewels and coins will be sought for by a Swedish-American engineer and professional treasure-seeker, Gunnar Hall, of New York.

About 600 years ago the City of Visby, on the Swedish Island of Gothland, was sacked by the powerful Danish King Waldemar Atterdag, who placed huge vats in the market place and commanded the inhabitants of the city to fill them to the brims with their valuables.

Waldemar collected a large treasure, which he loaded on his galleons and set out for Denmark. His fleet was, however, caught in a heavy gale and sank off the southern coast of Gothland.

Searching for Cheap Rentals Found Hurtful

Elmer F. Andrews, New York State Industrial Commissioner, believes that skipping from one part of Manhattan to another in search for cheaper rentals is an evil factor in our stabilization plans, because it not only scatters the labor market, and hence decreases all-round efficiency, but it is disadvantageous to the business itself.

Movement at this time, however, can be condoned if it be in the direction of the center of the trade. Obviously, out-of-town and resident buyers have little desire to skip all over town after these constantly moving firms.

Americans Great Water Drinkers.

America not only leads the world in the per capita consumption of water, but in devising methods whereby the purity of the water supply is protected until it reaches the lips of the user. Engineers have built gigantic purifying and filtering plants and the plumbers have successfully coped with the problem of supplying water to the 102-story skyscraper.

Accidental Drill Cleared Bank.

Oconto, Wis. (U.P.).—An accidental "robbery drill" cleared a bank here of all patrons and workers. A clerk stumbled over a tear gas bomb and exploded it.

Well 2 Miles Deep Subject of Study

Coalinga, Calif. (U.P.).—Geologists and oil men are studying with interest the results of the test well being drilled near Coalinga by Earl McAdams and associates. The well is down 10,831 feet, the deepest ever drilled in the world.

Oil and gas showings indicated the well may become a profitable producer when brought in. According to drillers, the deep hole has upset many theories of geologists regarding the types of shale to be found at various depths, heretofore unexplored by man.

If the well becomes a profitable producer, oil men believe it will presage a new era of development in the Coalinga-Kettleman field, world famed for its production.

MODERNIZE with Gas

SUPERIOR design and construction—and modern gas appliances—have placed this latest development of the Matheny Construction Company among the most desirable of current home-buying opportunities. Special effort has been made by the builders to insure solid comfort in these homes by protecting them from all kinds of weather with insulation and metal weatherstripping. Appliances have been chosen with the automatic idea in mind to reduce to a minimum all household tasks.

Because of heavy insulation the Ideal Automatic Gas Furnace will provide uniform, effortless heat at the least possible expense. Gas heat has made possible the outstanding wood-paneled recreation rooms which can be used for almost any purpose as a cool retreat on hot summer days. Hot water is supplied without attention by an automatic gas water heater.

A feature of special importance in the ultra-modern kitchen of the model home—6145 31st St. N.W.—is a Roper completely automatic gas range which will allow the owner to cook in the oven or on the top burners without a moment's personal attention. This is the first time in any new home in Washington that this intensely interesting development has been shown.

These homes have seven rooms, including three large bedrooms, dining room, living room, sun room and kitchen. There are two tile baths. Inspect today!

ARMY EXPERIENCE AIDS FOREST CAMPS

Soldiers Ready to Tackle Unique and Hard Problem, Maj. Brown Shows.

Maj. Sidney G. Brown, formerly in charge of the public relations section of the War Department and now on duty at Fort Benning, Ga., has written the following special article for The Post discussing from a general viewpoint the Army's participation in the organization of units for the Civilian Conservation Corps. Fort Benning, Ga., is the largest Army post in the United States and is the home of the Infantry School.

By MAJ. SIDNEY G. BROWN, U. S. A.

The Army's participation in the President's relief program is in many respects unique. Yet it is not the first time it has been called upon to organize and direct civilian groups and their activities. National disaster, earthquake, flood and fire have found the Regular Army ready and equipped to render immediate relief with no delay for organization or special training.

When the President conceived the idea of a Civilian Conservation Corps to relieve the financially distressed and preserve our forests, the details of such an organization were of minor consideration. The money was available and hundreds of thousands of able-bodied men were clamoring for work. The enrollment of the first 25,000 from the larger cities gave an indication of the magnitude of the task and the infinite number of details which must be mastered.

To the casual observer the task probably presented few difficulties. With the three components—the forest areas, the men and the money—there was nothing left to do save assemble the three. From this point on the man in the street is lost in a fog and only those with experience and vision can understand the problem of actually putting the men in the forests. This is the task of the Army.

Situation Akin to War.

Prior to passage and operation of the national defense act of 1920, there existed no agency in the United States capable of assembling, feeding and equipping 275,000 men in the time allotted. The enrolling of this number of men within the brief period prior to July 1, means a daily induction of a greater number of men than was attempted even in the World War, if we except a few days, many months after the entry of the United States in that war when the machinery of the draft act had reached its maximum efficiency. The wisdom of the framers of that military system can now be appreciated.

When the commander in chief called upon the Army for a report of the number of men who could be accommodated in the posts and camps there was no delay and no difficulty, and what is more important those military reservations were ready to receive and care for the men upon their arrival. This of course meant transferring from peacetime activities to a war time footing. It meant an immediate suspension of the Army's educational system, making both students and instructors available for the reception, housing and feeding of the members of the Civilian Conservation Corps. Troops were deprived of 50 per cent of their officers, their best supply sergeants and cooks. Feeding 275,000 men can not be left to chance. Meal hours arrive with surprising regularity, and none of the men can complain of hunger.

Of the many military posts and stations where the men are being received and prepared for their forestry duties, Fort Benning, Ga., is outstanding for its size and facilities. The number of men who will pass through its gates is not yet accurately estimated. There are today more than 7,000 men under canvas and this number will reach 10,000 before the tide recedes. Within this vast camp all seems confusion—yet a second look shows no confusion. The men are organized into companies of some 180 men, and each already knows his place and what is required of him. Those requirements are few during his stay at Fort Benning, and consist almost solely in making the camp comfortable for his own occupancy.

What Was Done at Benning.

The men came to Benning in lots of 50, 100, 200 or more. A telegram sent a few hours before the arrival of the group is the first information received at the post, yet the men are met, guided to their places in camp and the first meal hour after their arrival sees them lined up at the mess tent. And Army "chow" is good. It may lack many of the frills of the tea room but its preparation is by experts. These cooks are no "can openers," nor are they plucked from the general run and told to cook. They are graduates of the cooks and bakers schools, and their knowledge of food and food values would make the average housewife blush for shame.

For the protection of the whole, as well as the individual, the men are given a physical examination and are taught to care for their persons. Shower baths are numerous and in sufficient numbers to assure each man his daily bath and more should he feel so inclined. Facilities for washing clothing are provided and used extensively.

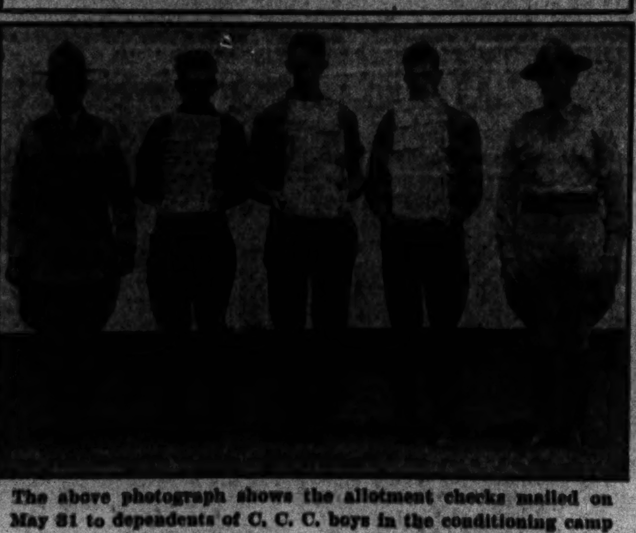
Their stay at Fort Benning is no longer than necessary to examine and equip them and accustom them to the rudiments of camp life. The real work begins when the companies leave for their stations in the forests, but even there the members of the Civilian Conservation Corps are accompanied by their own officers and cooks, who continue the administration of the camps.

The Army has nothing to do with the work the men perform away from their camps. That is outlined and controlled by the Interior Department. But the camps must be administered and they must be sanitary. Food must be purchased and transported to the camps, which are of necessity often isolated. The administration and supply come under the Army system, built up after long years of study and experience.

Odd Fish Story Is True.

Tillamook, Oreg. (U.P.)—Here's a Paul Bunyan yarn told by Jack Moors, who swears it is true. Using clam neck for bait, Moors hooked a 12-inch kelpie. As he hauled it near the surface, a two-foot ling-cod snapped at the kelpie, swallowing it. Before he could land his double catch, a 4-foot ling-cod swallowed about half the length of his smaller brother. A bystander helped him gaff the triple-header. The largest fish weighed 35 pounds and was put on display in a downtown window as proof of his fish story.

CHECKS FOR C. C. C. BOYS



The above photograph shows the allotment checks mailed on May 31 to dependents of C. C. C. boys in the conditioning camp at Fort Benning. Three thousand five hundred checks were mailed. The average amount of the checks was $20, and the area of distribution included Georgia, Alabama, South Carolina, Florida and Louisiana.

D. A. V. APPLYING FOR SCHOLARSHIP

Sons and Daughters Will Be Assisted to Education by Columbus U.

Applications for the scholarship awarded the D. A. V. from Columbus University are now being received for consideration during the summer months. Application is limited to the members of the organization, their sons or daughters, or the sons or daughters of deceased veterans who would have been eligible for membership in the D. A. V. Those desiring to make application should do so at once, mailing same to Joseph Ashl, department commander, 5913 Georgia avenue northwest.

Department Commander Joseph Ashl, and Comrades Church, Purvis and Kochli represented the D. A. V. at the Confederate memorial services at Arlington last week.

On last Friday, Joseph Ashl and George W. Phillips, representing the D. A. V. on the board of trustees for the Community Chest, visited Merry Wood, the summer home of Newbold Noyes, head of the Chest and spent a most enjoyable and profitable afternoon acquainting themselves with officials of the Government and the Community Chest who have been most active in relief work in the District of Columbia.

The regular meeting of the District department executive committee will be held in the board room of the District Building on Wednesday, June 21, at 8 p. m. This being an important meeting all members are requested to attend. The Department of Iowa of the D. A. V. has forwarded certain resolutions which will be considered by the executive committee, with a view to presenting them to the national convention, which meets in Cincinnati the last week of this month.

The monthly meeting of the Women's Auxiliary of the District of Columbia Department of the D. A. V., met at the home of Mrs. Helen Snyder last Tuesday and the charter, having arrived, the permanent officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: Mrs. M. A. Anderson, commander; Mrs. Margaret M. Watson, senior vice commander; Mrs. Ruth Olentine, junior vice commander; Mrs. M. Della Ansley, chaplain, and Mrs. Eva N. Seganish, adjutant and treasurer. Commander Anderson will make appointments of committees and certain other officials of the unit at a later date. Mrs. M. Della Ansley was elected to represent the auxiliary as a delegate from this chapter to the national convention in Cincinnati this month. Commander Anderson will also attend.

Rea Chapter to Attend Convention in Force

Headed by Capt. Walker H. Colston, chapter commander, Rea Chapter, D. A. V., will be represented at the national convention to be held in Cincinnati by one of the largest delegations to ever represent the chapter. All members who have not made reservations for the trip are urged to do so at once. All details can be had by calling Lieut. Carl Beuchert at the Veterans' Bureau.

Joseph J. Idler, chairman of the entertainment committee in charge of the testimonial dance to be held June 30 at the White Flint Golf Club in honor of Past Chapter Commander R. E. Moore, reports that from the advance sale to date the attendance record established last year will be broken. Rea Chapter will meet Friday night at the Hamilton Hotel.

V. F. W. COMMENDS WASHINGTON POST

D. C. Department Votes Its Thanks for Newspaper's "Unselfish Interest."

The Washington Post won warm praise at the last meeting of the District of Columbia Department Veterans of Foreign Wars council of administration, which, in a resolution, unanimously adopted, thanked the paper for the "unselfish interest" shown the department during the last year.

The resolution read:

Whereas, the District of Columbia Department of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States and the fifteen posts thereunder, together with their ladies' auxiliaries, have, during the administrative year now terminating, enjoyed excellent publicity through the medium of the veterans' columns appearing in the Sunday edition of The Washington Post, and,

Whereas, the managing editor and the capable staff of The Washington Post have materially aided this department of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States in the proper compilation of news material for the veterans columns in the Sunday edition of The Washington Post, and

Whereas, the only medium which this department of the Veterans of Foreign Wars has to disseminate news to its membership, numbering in the fifteen posts of the department some 3,000 members, is in the veterans' column of the Sunday edition of The Washington Post,

Be It Resolved, That District of Columbia Department, No. 1, Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States, in meeting assembled this 5th day of June, 1933, do unanimously express by this resolution its thanks and appreciation for the unselfish interest shown this department by the managing editor and staff of The Washington Post.

Delegates Elected By Lincoln Post

At the monthly meeting of Lincoln Post held last Monday night, delegates to the fifteenth annual convention of the Department of the District of Columbia, the American Legion, were elected. Post Commander Porter L. Bush was elected as chairman ex-officio of the delegation, with Comrades C. T. Milne, E. P. Van Hise, Roy Dascher, Herbert McLean and George LeDane elected as delegates. Following the established policy of the post the delegation will attend the convention uninstructed. However, a joint meeting of the executive committee and the delegates will be held prior to the convention at a date to be announced by the commander.

Applications for membership from three World War veterans were favorably voted on, which brought the total membership of the post up to 182. The post employment officer, Dr. David Gates, pleaded for the continued support of the members and the citizens of Columbia Heights in securing jobs for unemployed veterans. No job is too small.

Among the visitors attending the meeting on Monday night were John Arthur Shaw, department employment officer, and Norman Grant, commander of Vincent B. Costello Post, No. 15. No further meetings will be held until September, although plans are being formulated for an outing to be held during July.

Sergt. George Damewood Gets Silver Star Citation

Sergt. George W. Damewood, Company D, Twenty-third Regiment of the Sixth Marine Reserve Brigade, was recently decorated with the Silver Star Citation by Lieut. Col. J. J. Staley.

Jacob Jones Post Meets Tomorrow

Tomorrow the regular monthly meeting of the post will be held at Thomas Circle Club, 1326 Massachusetts avenue northwest. Initiation of all new members will take place.

The "Job a Member" campaign has been extended from June 1 to July 31, and prizes are being offered as follows: Members getting highest number of jobs for veterans during that period, first prize, an American Legion uniform; second prize, an American Legion gold lapel button; for post getting highest number of jobs for veterans during that period, a magnificent loving cup.

The comrades' attention is called to the date of June 19, on which date the chairman of ways and means, Comrade Ella Chambers, and her committee, plan to hold a card party at the Chambers new home, 517 Eleventh street southeast. The committee is prepared to take care of at least 50 tables and hopes that as many of the comrades as possible will attend.

OFFICERS WHO WILL INSPECT NAVAL RESERVE FLIERS

Lieut. M. M. Closkey, commanding officer; Lieut. L. V. Berkner, Ensign T. Wagner, Chief Yeoman Nowicki make a preliminary inspection in preparation for annual inspection of Naval Reserve Squadron VN-6R, Anacostia, D. C., on June 17, 1933. Officers left foreground—Ensign W. E. Coney, Lieut. C. C. Ward, Lieut. R. E. Hess, jr., Lieut. Comdr. Kennedy, Ensign W. Hoke, Lieut. J. Klak. Officers right foreground—Lieut. H. Huester, Ensign W. Carroll, Ensign P. Dalton, Lieut. M. B. Johnson. (See Take-Offs and Landings.)

Take-Offs and Landings

By HARRIS B. HULL

THE Naval Reserve Inspection Board, representing the Bureau of Navigation of the Navy Department, will conduct its annual inspection of the Washington Naval Aviation Reserve, Squadron VN-6R, Saturday afternoon at the Anacostia Naval Air Station. Headed by Capt. Alexander Sharp, U. S. N., as president, the board is composed of Commander C. T. Osborn, Lieut. W. G. Tomlinson, Capt. T. R. Shearer and Capt. F. O. Mulcahy, the latter two of the Marine Corps.

The reserve base and personnel on active duty at Anacostia will be given a detailed inspection. This will include a study of the conditions of planes, the hangars, training quarters, shop equipment, storeroom supplies and office records and files, as well as flight operations and aviation shop training instruction. Squadron VJ1 7MR, of the Marine Corps Reserve will be given a similar inspection.

The officer personnel of the First Aviation Division, VN-6R, is drawn from local men, many of which are engaged in commercial aeronautics. It is one of the most active of the Nation's Reserve Aviation units and has established an outstanding record in the field of flight operation as well as theoretical class room tactical and navigational studies.

The division is headed by Lieut. M. M. Cloukey, commanding officer. Lieut R. L. Earle serves as executive officer; Lieut. L. V. Barkner, as operations officer; Lieut. M. B. Johnson, as gunnery officer; Lieut. C. C. Ward, as assistant operations officer; Lieut. R. C. Southworth, as engineering officer; ensign W. E. Coney, as assistant gunnery officer; Ensign W. S. Carroll, as assistant engineering officer; Lieut. J. J. Klak, communications officer; Ensign P. Dalton, navigation officer; Ensign R. E. Hess, jr., assistant navigation officer; Ensign T. W. Wagner, personnel officer; Lieut. H. J. Huester, educational officer; Ensign J. T. Backiston, assistant educational officer; Ensign E. L. Hoek, supply officer, and Lieut. Comdr. T. J. Kennedy, flight surgeon. In addition to the above officer personnel, the unit has an enlisted strength of 30 men.

The appointments of the officer personnel are all quite recent. All of the officers have had considerable aviation flight training, gaining their designatiins as naval aviators at the various naval stations, including Great Lakes, Hampton Roads and Pensacola.

The officer organization of the Marine Reserve Squadron VJ-7MR includes Capt. G. G. Budwig, commanding officer; First Lieut. W. F. Marshall, executive officer; Second Lieut. J. E. Webb, operations officer; Second Lieut. J. A. Timmons, gunnery officer; First Lieut. G. E. Gardner, engineering officer; Second Lieut. N. Gaunt, communications officer; Second Lieut. R. B. Burchard, educational officer; Second Lieut. W. H. Orton, assistant educational officer, and Second Lieut. W. B. Basher, personnel officer. This unit has an enlisted strength of 28 men.

The adequate maintenance of our national defense requires well trained aviation reserve units which can be called into duty with no delay. The Naval and Marine aviation units are in a position to supply the necessary pilots should the emergency arise. As they are reserve units the cost to the Government to carry on their training is comparatively very little, they are "bargains" in the maintenance of national defense. It is unfortunate at this time that any consideration should be given to talk of cutting the reserve aviation appropriation and it is to be hoped that in the end these units will get their necessary funds and be allowed to carry on their training program which is of such great value to the country's defensive scheme.

THE fact that James Mattern was directly on one of the courses he had under consideration when he landed at Oslo, Norway, and was not blown off his route, was revealed at the Navy Department last week when it was announced at the Hydrographic Office that they had prepared a map for the Texas aviator taking him by way of Norway.

The Navy's navigational experts plotted a course for the round-the-world flier, to Moscow via Oslo, which he followed flying slightly southward of the great circle course from Harbor Grace to Moscow.

Prior to the 1932 flight of Mattern and Griffin to Berlin the Hydrographic Office assisted the pair in plotting their proposed course and after completion of that flight they wrote to Rear Admiral Walter E. Gherardi, U. S. N., chief hydrographer of the Navy, thanking him for his department's assistance.

The Hydrographic Office of the Navy has plotted a number of courses for transatlantic flying. In the minds of the aviators undertaking these flights the Navy is rendering a great service in making available to them the advice of some of the country's greatest navigational experts. In the minds of others the Navy is making a serious mistake in aiding and abetting these transoceanic flights, which for the most part, are "stunt" ventures and have been the subject of criticism and regulations by the aeronautics branch of the Department of Commerce. This column does not take sides in the dispute.

A TWO-WAY crossing of the Atlantic run on a definite schedule, with a pay load, will be undertaken this summer by Roger Q. Williams as one of the outstanding figures of the current transoceanic flying season.

Advices received from Williams state that he will leave New York on the morning of July 24 for Rome, Italy, a distance of 4,500 miles. He will arrive at Rome on the afternoon of July 25. He will leave Rome the morning of July 31 for Athens, a 500-mile flight, which he estimated will take him five hours. He expects to be in Athens the same morning. He will leave Athens the morning of August 6 for Dublin, Ireland, a flight of 1,500 miles, which he expects to make in 13 hours. He will be there that afternoon. He will leave Dublin August 18 for Chicago, Ill., arriving in Chicago August 19 some time in the afternoon.

Two other fliers will accompany Williams, but as yet they have not been selected. A Bellanca airbus, the Flying Southpaw, will be used. It is equipped with a 1,000-pound compartment in which will be carried a pay load of air mail and merchandise.

Good luck, Mr. Williams. I'll see you in Chicago on August 19, at 3:30 p. m., at the Municipal Airport, I hope. We can take in the world's fair together.

FOR three consecutive months Easter Air Transport has broken all its records for passenger volume, it was stated yesterday by Thomas B. Doe, president, of the line. The line operates between New York, Atlanta and Miami, serving 24 other cities including the Capital.

The previous record month was August, 1932, when 3,489 passengers were carried. In March of this year, however, 4,389 passengers flew on the line and this record was broken again in April with 5,209 passengers and last month with 6,359 passengers.

In the first five months of this year more than 21,000 passengers have traveled with E. A. T., compared with 13,643 in the same period of last year.

"This does not necessarily mean the depression is over," said Capt. Doe. "It does mean that air travel, due to its comfort and reliability, is increasing in popularity."

Second Division Post Will Discuss Home

Finance Officer M. Folsom, chairman of the home committee of Second Division Post, American Legion, has made a final report of the findings of his committee to Post Commander Thomas Mason, jr. Final action on the purchase of a post home will be taken at the next post meeting. Past Post Commanders E. J. Brown and K. T. Wright have been appointed by Commander Mason to represent the post at the reunion of the State Association of Virginia to be held at Norfolk June 28 and 29.

SPANISH VETERANS TO ADDRESS SCHOOLS

Patriotic Talks to Be Made on Use of Flag in Visit on Flag Day.

Under the direction of Department Patriotic Instructor Benjamin F. Motley, the department of United Spanish War Veterans, in carrying out the patriotic work started by the Grand Army of the Republic and taken over several years ago by the United Spanish War Veterans, the public schools in the District of Columbia will be visited on Flag Day by veterans, who will deliver short addresses, using the flag as the subject, for the purpose of aiding the coming generation in becoming imbued with the spirit of patriotism.

Department Commander Patrick J. Callan will call the convention of the thirty-fourth department encampment of the department of the District of Columbia, United Spanish War Veterans, to order at 2 p. m. on Saturday in Pythian Temple. After the seating of the delegates and members of the encampment, the reception and introduction of distinguished guests and the reports of officers, will follow the regular order of business, consisting of the passing of resolutions, election and installation of officers for the 1933-1934 term and the closing of the convention.

Harden Camp.

Richard J. Harden Camp, No. 2, was called to order by Commander William O. Ohm. The application of Elmer J. S. Coe, Fourth Regiment, New York Volunteer Artillery, and that of Joseph A. Campbell, First Regiment, District of Columbia Volunteer Infantry, by transfer, were presented. The applicants were elected and duly mustered as active members.

Nomination and election of delegates to the thirty-fourth department encampment resulted in the following being elected as delegates: James J. Fitzpatrick, Thomas A. Hudlow, Charles B. Long, John A. Chisholm, W. T. Conn, Charles Ammann, Joseph J. Harvey, John D. Shaw, H. L. Leslie, William J. Stevens, Bernard R. Lee, Henry W. Bradshaw, John Hamburg and Jacob Orken, and as alternates, John Bright, George C. Shaw, Victor McCloskey, Adam C. Walden, Frank P. Platz, Charles Boogher, E. T. Fitzhugh, W. W. Webber, Walter H. Molan and Charles McK. Stump.

Speakers of the evening were Jacob Orken, Department Commander Patrick J. Callan, Past Department Commanders William L. Mattocks and Benjamin F. Motley, Charles D. Long, Department Recruiting Officer George V. McAlear, Past Commanders Dennis P. Cooney, of Miles Camp; Oscar Feldser, of Astor Camp, and Ivan V. Conklin, of Urell Camp; John Sperry, of McKinley Camp, No. 6, of Chicago, Ill.; C. C. Pitts, of McConnell Camp, No. 5, of Boise, Idaho; Past Commander Emroy B. ARMY INSTRUCTORS DEPART FOR CAMPS

By A. S. DE AGRO.

Three regular Army instructors have been relieved from duty with the local Reserve headquarters and departed last night for stations in the mountain forests of Pennsylvania for duty with the Civilian Conservation Corps. The orders for their detail with the corps were issued from the headquarters, Third Corps Area, and came as a surprise to the members and personnel of the headquarters staff. The instructors transferred are Maj. John M. McDowell, Field Artillery; Maj. Elmore B. Gray, Coast Artillery, and Maj. Turner M. Chambliss, Infantry. The detail is construed to be temporary duty and their return to Washington is dependent on the continuation of the reforestation project. However, Maj. McDowell's permanent station will be Baltimore, as his four-year tour of duty in Washington will be completed in September.

In the orders issued the officers are designated as subdistrict supervisors, exercising command over several of the conservation camps located in their districts. The stations to which they are assigned, all in the State of Pennsylvania, are: Maj. McDowell, Old Forge, Franklin County; Maj. Gray, Loganton, Clinton County, and Maj. Chambliss, Pine Grove Furnace, Cumberland County.

Must Demonstrate Qualifications.

Candidates seeking reserve commissions will hereafter be required to demonstrate that they possess qualifications equivalent to those acquired by a graduate of the blue course of the Citizens' Military Training Camps, in addition to being proficient in the prescribed military knowledge qualifications as outlined in regulations governing appointments in the Officers' Reserve Corps. This requirement, however, is only for appointments in the Infantry, Field Artillery, Cavalry and Signal Corps, according to recent instructions from the War Department. Inasmuch as the C. M. T. C. blue course consists of practical instruction contemplated to qualify the candidate to perform the duties of platoon leader and instructor in practical drills, ceremonies and physical drills, regulations state that if the applicant has not had appropriate and adequate prior military training comparable to the C. M. T. C. blue course, the practical test, or, in other words, the examination given, before the board of officers should be in consonance with the training principles indicated for blue course students.

Troops are required to be used in the demonstration of ability qualifications. If troops are not available, which will probably be the case in many localities where boards are convened, the board should evolve a practical test that will show whether or not the candidate seeking commission possesses the essential qualities of leadership and the ability to conduct practical drill and instruction of the unit he would normally command if called to active duty.

The tests consisting entirely of oral questions on the subjects included in the military knowledge examinations, as has been the practice in the past, are not acceptable to the War Department. Enlisted service will not be accepted as evidence of satisfactory practical military training unless the applicant has served in the grade of sergeant or higher and then only when it is clearly shown that the service of the applicant has been of such a character as to leave no doubt that it has included actual demonstration of the ability in leadership, instruction and handling of enlisted men that is considered appropriate and necessary for appointment under consideration.

Assigned to Observation Squadron.

Thirteen District Air Corps officers have been assigned to the 393d Observation Squadron according to an order issued by the Headquarters Third Corps Area. The officers are Capts. Charles W. Carneal, of the Washington Airport; Irvin L. Clark, of 212 Ethan Allen avenue, Takoma Park; Otis F. Tabler, of 117 Oxford street, Chevy Chase, and Donald O. Woolf, of 5001 Massachusetts avenue northwest; First Lieuts. Ernest A. Cutrell, of the Department of Commerce; Marco Falso, of the Park Lane Apartments; Howard W. McKinley, of 134 Beech street, Clarendon, Va.; Jack H. Neale, of 4000 Cathedral avenue, and Donald H. Stuart, of 319 Carroll street, Takoma Park; Second Lieuts. Elmer G. Gross, of 811 Quincy street northwest; Noble C. Shilt, of 2218 Kearney street; John G. Tilton, of the Washington-Hoover Airport, and Archibald R. Towner, of 1526 Seventeenth street northwest. Lieut. Col. Harry H. Blee, of the Aeronautics Branch, Department of Commerce, and Maj. Henry A. Molter, secretary of the Reserve Officers' Association of the United States, both of the Air Corps Reserve, have been assigned to the Eighth Corps Area Service Command.

The following District officers recently appointed in the Judge Advocate General's Department have been assigned to the Eightieth Division, with headquarters at Richmond, Va.: Capt. Edward M. Welliver, of 1667 Monroe street northwest; James D. Cunningham, of 1348 Girard street northwest; Andrew H. Haley, of 334 House Office Building, and John F. Richter, of 4143 New Hampshire avenue. Other assignments made are Capt. Tracy E. Huber and Second Lieut. Joseph W. Crim, both of the Army Medical Center, to the 1311th Service Unit; First Lieut. Seymour J. Rosenberg, of 5600 Nebraska avenue, to the 364th Medical Regiment; Second Lieut. Jeff. J. McNamme, of 308 Delafield place northwest, to 466th Motor Transport Company; Second Lieut. Byrnes F. Bentley, of 1734 Webster street, to 503d Post Headquarters; Lieuts. Robert L. Clifford, 3130 P street; John F. Korham, 2720 Thirty-fifth street northwest, and William L. Parker, of 1 East Kirke street, Chevy Chase, Md., assigned to the 313th Field Artillery; Second Lieut. Richard R. Eanes, jr., care of the Adjutant General, to the 315th Field Artillery; Capt. William L. Lawhon, Adjutant General Reserve, General Delivery, Washington, to the 1300th Service Unit; Capt. Fred E. Walker, of 1116 Vermont avenue, and Second Lieut. Charles C. Clark, jr., of 21 West Irving street northwest, assigned to the Sixty-second Cavalry Division.

Crickets Worry Farmers.

Boise, Idaho (U.P.).—Farmers around the Fort Hall Indian Reservation country are worried over the reappearance of Mormon crickets, an unusually destructive crop pest, which did much damage to Idaho crops last year. F. A. Cross, superintendent of the reservation, is seeking a [illegible] appropriation with which to [illegible] the pest.

Stocks Continue Climbing, Defying Drives for Profits

Utility Issues Make Best Showing on Trading in 2,786,440 Shares.

New York, June 10 (A.P.).—Markets were most vigorous in the commodity departments today, though stocks came through ripples of week-end profit-taking with a small average net advance.

Wall street got a big surprise in overnight news that the Senate had approved removal of the tax exemption privileges of Government and municipal bonds. The financial community went home without information on this point, though financial news ticker advices from Washington reported that the amendment was not likely to survive conference.

On the stock exchange, utility shares made the best group showing, their composite going well into new high ground. Consolidated Gas, Stone & Webster, North American Water Works, Electric Power & Light, Standard Gas, American Water Works and others firmed 1 to more than 2. American Telephone, after touching the new top of 124½, lost its gain.

Rails, to which some sections of Wall street are looking for leadership during the market's next phase, reacted moderately nothwithstanding cheerful freight loading statistics.

Several leading industrials finished slightly off, while Case, Du Pont, the Armour issues and Allied Chemical lost more substantially. Western Union and Postal preferred were still soggy. Timken, Uni..a Bag & Paper, General Railway Signal, motor products, Harbison Walker and International Business Machines added about 1 to 5 points. Volume dropped to 2,786,440 shares.

CURB CLOSES FIRM ON LIGHTER TRADING

New York, June 10 (A.P.).—Strength in utility shares featured the curb market today. The general list was somewhat irregular, due to week-end profit-taking, but strength in the power group was sufficient to give the market a firm appearance at the close.

Transfers approximated 737,000 shares, compared to 840,000 last Saturday.

Electric Bond & Share was conspicuously strong, rising nearly 2 points to close at its best quotation. American Gas & Electric and Niagara Hudson Power added a point each. Consolidated Gas of Baltimore soared nearly 7 points in moderate trading, while Standard Power & Light preferred ran up 9 points.

Oils were mostly narrow and steady, excepting Humble, which advanced 3.

Unfilled U. S. Steel Orders Gain 65,241 Tons in May

New York, June 10 (A.P.).—Unfilled orders of the United States Steel Corporation increased 65,241 tons in May to a total of 1,920,815 tons, the corporation announced today. In April the tonnage increased 23,572 tons, making the first gain in backlog since October last year.

Wall street had counted on gain in unfilled orders in spite of the accelerated rate of shipments during the month as reflected by the sharp stepup in mill operating schedules.

Current ingot production of the country, now well above 40 per cent of capacity, compares with about 20 per cent a month ago.

Calculations of a further improvement in the corporation's backlog were based on the repeated statements of the steel trade reviews during the month that the automobile industry and miscellaneous consumer were continuing to order steel on a broadening scale.

The record low point in tonnage, 1,841,002 tons was reported as of March 31 last.

Rubber Closes Irregular.

New York, June 10 (A.P.).—Crude rubber futures closed irregular. July, 6.47*; September, 6.73†; December, 6.95-98; January, 7.05†.

Smoked ribbed spot closed 6.43†.

*—Asked; †—Nominal.

Bar Silver Higher.

New York, June 10 (A.P.).—Silver firmed today, bar metal rising one-half cent to 36⅝ cents an ounce. The year's high is 37¼. Futures were moderately active, up about one-quarter cent an ounce net.

Hop Prices Quiet.

BOND MARKET SAGS UNDER PROFIT SALES

New York, June 10 (A.P.).—Profit-taking in semispeculative issues brought an irregularly lower drift to the bond market today, although the trading volume dwindled noticeably on the moderate decline.

Sales totaled only $7,649,000, par value, against $10,697,000 last Saturday, while the average for 60 domestic corporate loans eased one-tenth of a point.

The market for Government, municipal and State bonds was somewhat disorganized as the result of the Senate's action in voting to cancel tax exempt privileges. United States listed securities, however, were only fractionally lower, as uncertainty developed as to the ultimate enactment of this tax exempt amendment to the industrial control bill.

CLEARING HOUSE STATEMENT

New York, June 10 (A.P.).—The weekly statement of the New York Clearing House shows: Total surplus and undivided profits, $617,165,000 (unchanged); total net demand deposits (average), $63,060,000 (increase); time deposits (average), $1,540,000 (decrease); clearings week ended today, $3,100,695,209; clearings week ended June 3 (five days), $3,288,344,913.

GOODS MARKET.

New York, June 10 (A.P.).—Textile markets closed very firmly today in anticipation of the enactment of the industrial recovery act. Further advances are looked for on all lines beginning when the act goes to the President. Cotton goods are being bought actively where agents have not withdrawn them. Worsted dress goods are active. Rayon advances are becoming general. Burlaps hold firm.

THE METAL MARKETS.

TIN—Barely steady; spot and nearby, 44.75; future, 45.00.

Stocks.

Advances were continued in defiance of profit takers. The best showing was made by utilities. Gains averaged six-tenths of a point. Sales for the half session fell off to 2,786,440 shares.

Bonds.

Profit-taking forced a lower drift in bonds. The average loss was one-tenth of a point. Sales volume totaled $7,649,000.

Curb.

Strength in utilities was a feature. The general list turned somewhat irregular, due to profit-taking. Prices were firm at closing. Sales in the short session dropped to 737,000 shares.

Wheat.

Wheat soared to peak prices since 1930. Other grains followed the advance. Renewal of speculative buying aided the market. July wheat sold at 76⅛ to 76¾ cents.

Cotton.

Prices were firm and advanced in spite of earlier losses. The general market was up 5 to 9 points. July sold at 9.25; October, 9.49. Liverpool market closed on account of holiday.

Dried Fruits Steady.

Wall St. Briefs

New York, June 10 (A.P.).—The first of a series of conferences for developing a code of practice for the oil industry under provisions of the National Industrial Recovery act will be held in Chicago on June 15. Producing company representatives from all sections of the country will attend. Plans are under way for a similar meeting of marketing associations, also to be held in Chicago.

This week's gold movement, as reported by the New York Federal Reserve Bank, comprised a withdrawal of $1,445,000 from earmark for German account.

Directors of Singer Manufacturing Co. today declared a quarterly dividend of $1.50 a share, payable June 30 to stock of record June 10. Three months ago the dividend was reduced to $1.50 from $2.

Owens-Illinois Glass Co. has called for redemption July 1, at 101¼, its 10-year 5 per cent sinking fund gold debentures, due January 1, 1939.

Unfavorable dividend changes in the past week numbered 27, as against 17 in the previous week, says the Standard Statistics Co. compilation. Favorable revisions totaled 13, compared with 10. Payments were resumed on nine stocks.

Sugar melt of 13 American refiners from January 1 to June 3 totaled 1,580,000 long tons, an increase of 40,000 tons over the same period of 1932. Deliveries aggregated 1,405,000 tons, compared with 1,345,000 a year ago.

WHEAT VALUES SOAR TO PEAK SINCE 1930

Renewal of Buying Advances All Grain Prices on Broad Lines.

Chicago, June 10 (A.P.).—Swift soaring of prices took wheat and oats today to above any peaks which future deliveries have heretofore reached since May 1930.

A big renewal of public speculative buying followed official reports that indicated 36,500,000 bushels destruction of winter wheat in the past 30 days, with spring wheat now facing its critical period and showing a condition below a 10-year average. Giving brisk further impetus to buyers were advices of widespread intense heat today causing wheat firing in Illinois and the Ohio Valley areas, that up to this time have been regarded as in the best condition of any in the United States.

Despite huge selling to take profits, wheat closed strong at virtually the day's top point, 1¼ to 1¾ above yesterday's finish; oats, 1 to 1½ up; corn, ⅛ to ½ advanced, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 7 cents.

With only scant hopes of immediate relief from destructive high temperatures and absence of moisture, trade anxiety became acute regarding wheat and oats crops in eastern sections of the grain belt.

COTTON PRICES RISE IN SPITE OF LOSSES

July Sells at 9.25 With General Market Up 5 to 9 Points.

New York, June 10 (A.P.).—Cotton was firm today but the market failed to hold an early advance in its entirety.

There was an early advance of about 17 to 18 points on overnight reports from Washington concerning appropriation for the Secretary of Agriculture under the provisions of the agricultural adjustment act. This was followed by reactions under realizing and hedge selling.

October contracts after advancing to 9.60, or 18 points net higher, and 45 points above the low level of Friday morning, declined to 9.47 and closed at 9.49. The general market closed barely steady at a net advance of 5 to 9 points.

The opening was firm at an advance of 13 to 17 points, with active months soon showing net gains of 16 to 18 points on a general demand promoted by the more optimistic views of prospects for curtailment of this year's crop.

July sold off from 9.34 to 9.22 and December from 9.76 to 9.63, making reactions of about 11 to 13 points from the best and closing quotations were within 2 or 3 points from the lowest.

Amendments to the industrial recovery bill adopted by the Senate, providing an appropriation of $100,000,000, and also authorizing the Secretary of Agriculture to use Government financed or owned cotton as part payment for abandoned land, were considered the chief factors on the opening advance.

TIN LEADS METALS IN PRICE ADVANCES

New York, June 10 (A.P.).—Sharp advances were recorded in tin quotations this week on active consumer buying stimulated by heavy operations of plate mills, strength of sterling exchange, and concern over limited supplies available through international tin pool quotas.

For the week, prices were 3½ cents per pound higher, slight reactions from the best having occurred in the late transactions influenced by easiness at London.

Copper held steady at 8 cents for electrolytic in the Connecticut Valley, although demand was restricted and the trade was said to be awaiting developments at Washington. There was no selling pressure, with the exception of occasional nearby resale lots which appeared at slight concessions.

Lead Is Advanced.

Lead was advanced $2 per ton late in the week following a period of brisk purchasing which was absorbing daily ore intake of smelters. Demand was principally for July delivery and came from practically all types of consuming trades.

Cable manufacturers, corroders and oxide makers were outstanding buyers.

Zinc was quiet but steady. Inquiry was limited to small prompt lots. A favorable view of May statistics, firmness of ore prices, and reports of increasing operations by the steel industry checked first hand selling pressure, although resale metal appeared from time to time.

Antimony Is Quiet.

Antimony was quiet. Buyers were not inclined to follow the recent advances in asking prices, but sellers held steady.

Demand for steel was stimulated by expectations of increased prices through the provisions of the industrial recovery bill which would regulate working hours and minimum wages. Miscellaneous buying and continued demand from automobile manufacturers were noted, but sellers were reluctant to book ahead in view of the uncertainties on costs of production.

Prices were firmly maintained. Ingot production was estimated at 44 per cent of capacity, a gain of 3 points for the week.

BELIEF IN UTILITIES IS URGED BY BABSON

By ROGER W. BABSON.

Babson Park, Mass., June 10.—Public utility companies have been suffering from a variety of troubles, but in spite of these there is a more optimistic side to the picture.

Just as they were overboomed during the new-era days of 1929, so these utility companies are now underestimated in the minds of the investing public.

The one central point to remember in connection with public service corporations is their tremendous burden of overhead. The companies must meet their capital charges. If the public demands rates too low to allow the companies to do this, the public suffers as much through poor service as the holders of the utility securities through financial receiverships. To strike a sane balance between the optimistic and the unfavorable factors, it is essential to have a clear understanding of the outlook for this basic industry.

Public Utility Troubles.

Chief among the adverse factors in the public's mind are: The continued and widespread agitation for rate reductions, threats of utility holding company regulation, bills before Congress shifting the tax from the consumer of domestic and commercial lighting to the producer, and the Muscle Shoals program.

These influences are basic and should be watched in judging the longer term prospects. Some say that inflation will hurt the utilities. So far we have had little inflation and even if it should happen there is still a long way to go before increased operating expenses can offset the benefits of increased business activity and power consumption.

Hence, the threat of inflation, though generally considered unfavorable to utilities on account of their fixed rates, will at first help them rather than harm them.

Watch Political Developments.

Public utilities, in every period of depression, are political targets. Their heavy fixed charges make utility companies vulnerable to political attacks, especially in the line of rate reductions and increased taxation.

Conditions today are not unusual in this respect, but I believe that this undesirable feature may now gradually be forgotten until the next depression. My own opinion is that many of the best, soundest, most honestly managed companies will soon share in this forthcoming period of business improvement.

I see no reason why the public utility industry should not return to favor, but I would certainly watch the trend of public utility political thought. Kilowatt hours are bound to increase. You can not stop it. Only rate reductions, based on revaluations or franchise expirations, are to be feared. Moral: Pick with care your utilities.

G. B. CHIPMAN JOINS LAIDLAW & COMPANY

By THOMAS M. CAHILL.

Retirement of G. Bowie Chipman, July 1, as a resident partner of Harriman & Co., to represent Laidlaw & Co., members of the New York Stock Exchange, in Washington, was announced yesterday.

Coincident with this announcement came information that the local offices of Laidlaw & Co. will be the handsome building at 727 Fifteenth street northwest. Extensive improvements are being made here for the new firm which will provide it with an excellent board room and all customers' facilities.

Mr. Chipman, who has been in the brokerage business continuously for more than 40 years, is well known in Washington and has a large following of friends and customers.

Old Wall Street Firm.

Laidlaw & Co. is one of the oldest and best known Wall street houses, with its main office at 26 Broadway, New York City. The firm was established in 1842, and now consists of Edward Roesler, Gilbert U. Burdett, Elliot C. R. Laidlaw, Manuel J. Johnson, Henry W. Brower, Edward Roesler, jr., Lorraine F. Pitman, Isabella W. Laidlaw, special, and Henry McSweeney, special.

It has been a member of the New York Stock Exchange since 1878. The firm also has membership on the New York Curb Exchange, Metals Exchange and Chicago Board of Trade.

It has branch offices in Boston, Oil City, Pa., Montreal, Toronto and Rutland, Vt. For the convenience of customers coming to New York it also has a branch office at 252 Park avenue. The firm does strictly a commission business and does not participate in underwritings or syndicates.

Meeting of Stockholders.

At the annual stockholders' meeting of the Real Estate Mortgage & Guaranty Corporation, held last week, the following directors were elected: Henry L. Breuninger, L. E. Breuninger, Arthur Carr, Wade H. Cooper, Fred Drew, Harry S. Dulin, C. S. Duncan, Sol Lansburgh, William Muehleisen, Horace G. Smithy, Thomas Somerville, Thomas Somerville, jr., Anton Stephan and W. F. Stickle.

Just after the meeting of the stockholders the board of directors met and the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: L. E. Breuninger, chairman of the board; Arthur Carr, president; Thomas Somerville and Horace G. Smithy, vice presidents; Anton Stephan, treasurer; Wilmer F. Stickle, secreary; Roy E. Bebermeyer, assistant secretary, and Robert E. Hazell, auditor.

L. Harold Sothoron, member of the firm of Quinter & Sothoron, was elected a member of the board of directors and the firm of Quinter & Sothoron was reappointed counsel for the ensuing year.

Loading of Freight Down 33,075 Cars

The American Railway Association announced yesterday that loadings of revenue freight for the week ended June 3 were 508,434 cars, a decrease of 33,075 below the preceding week, but an increase of 60,822 over the same week in 1932.

Comparisons showed that all commodities for the week ended June 3 registered increases over the corresponding week last year, which is the real basis of comparison, with the exception of merchandise less than carlot freight.

Miscellaneous freight loaded was 196,382 cars, a decrease of 11,009 under the preceding week, but 26,196 over 1932; less than carlot freight, 147,992, decrease, 18,412 and 6,818; grain and grain products, 34,204, decrease, 135, but 10,899 above last year; forest products, 22,783, increase, 174 and 6,364; ore, 8,517, decrease, 1,582 below the week before, but an increase of 6,332 over 1932; coal, 78,632, decrease, 2,283 over the preceding week, but 15,536 over 1932; coke, 4,591, increase, 454 and 1,580, and live stock, 15,133, decrease, 282 below the preceding week, but an increase of 733 over last year.

Statistics Indicate Rise in Business

New York, June 10 (A.P.).—Statistics appearing during the past week indicated a further rise in business, according to Moody's index figures for freight car loadings, electric power production and steel ingot output.

These index figures are adjusted for seasonal variation—that is, if the change from the previous week should coincide with the normal seasonal change, the index figure would be unchanged.

TRADE TRENDS.

(Associated Press.)

Automobiles—All indications point to the probability that June volume of sales of new passenger cars will exceed the same month last year by a wider margin than the May sales exceeded last year's figures, says Dun & Bradstreet, Inc.

Cotton goods—The market for unfinished cloths showed a stronger tone at the week-end, according to dealers. Print cloths are holding close to the high levels of the last few weeks.

Burlap—Coincident with a sharp advance in prices importers and consumers drew heavily upon Calcutta stocks in May. Takings for the month amounted to 93,419,000 yards, against 53,269,400 in April.

Flour—New buying continues light, with most of the large consumers apparently well covered on contracts. Despite the indifferent demand, prices remain firm.

Paint materials—Lead pigments are strong in response to the recent $2 a ton advance in pig lead. Carbon black is reported moving in good volume.

RESORTS AND TRAVEL

COACHES WILL HAUL EXHIBITION VISITORS

Construction of the $500,000 World Fair transportation system and manufacture of the fleet of 60 special type observation coaches, one of which is to visit this city soon, is practically complete, according to officials of Greyhound Lines and the World's Fair Commission.

Because of the extreme length of the fair grounds, the longest in exposition history, it was deemed necessary to provide this special transportation system for the estimated 60,000,000 visitors who will throng Chicago from June 1 to November 1, the period of the fair.

The fleet of coaches will be operated in two groups, and will be able to handle from 15,000 to 20,000 passengers per hour, operating about 14 hours a day. One group will serve a high speed through arterial route and the other will operate on slow moving or sight-seeing routes.

The high speed line, built of asphalt composition at a cost of $50,000 and segregated from pedestrian traffic, extends from the north entrance of the grounds to the Travel and Transport Building at Thirty-fifth street. Between the north and south terminals there are seven stations where passengers may get off or board express buses after passing through the pay station turnstiles. The average speed of the coaches on this line will be 15 miles per hour.

The principal slow route starts near the north entrance, circles Northerly Island and returns to the mainland near the Twenty-third street entrance to the grounds. The slow moving coaches will operate on the same roadway as that used by pedestrians, at an average speed of four to eight miles an hour. These slow moving units will also be used on other routes on the grounds where there is a demand for transportation or for sightseeing vehicles.

Two shifts of a driver and conductor each will be employed on each transportation unit. Cashiers and other attendants will bring the total number of employes of the Fair transportation system to about 300.

The truck and semitrailer system of transportation was adopted because of its flexibility and ability to meet the fluctuating conditions of exposition traffic. The Chicago Fair Grounds are the largest ever used for an exposition of this kind, extending from Twelfth Place to Thirty-ninth street along the shores of Lake Michigan, and include Northerly Island, an 82-acre tract separated from the mainland by a broad lagoon. The entire World's Fair plant includes 388 acres.

Herald Harbor Features Many Outing Facilities

The beautiful picnic grounds at Herald Harbor, equipped with tables and benches, is ideally situated for annual outings, whether a week-end trip, vacation, or just to spend the day. Here the vacationist will find a fine orchestra for dancing each evening, a cafeteria and refreshment stand and crabs caught and cooked as you like them.

Motorists to Herald Harbor will now find the roads entirely free from dust, an improved road now taking care of tourists to and from the harbor.

Beauties of Glacier Park Certain to Charm Visitors

Scenic Wonders, Birds, Animals and Flowers Delight Tourists and Compel Respect for the Great Architect Who Designed the Immense Reserve.

By DR. GEORGE C. RUHLE
(Chief of Glacier Park Ranger-Naturalist Service).

I am often asked, "Where did Glacier Park get its name?" One visit to the park answers that question. For there are 60 glaciers in the park.

Another question from people who are curious but not yet familiar with Glacier Park is this, "What is there besides glaciers?"

I always enjoy that question. And so do those who ask it—after their first visit to Glacier Park.

In my opinion John Muir was absolutely right when he said Glacier Park was "the greatest bit of care-killing scenery on the North American continent."

It contains two parallel Rocky Mountain ranges, separated by glacier-scoured valleys, embellished by beautiful deep lakes and towering waterfalls. To any one who likes to ponder about the beginning of things, Glacier Park is a wonderful geological subject.

Here thousands of feet of rock, born of an era when life was only beginning to manifest itself on earth, were lifted high by internal pressure of the earth and thrust out over the rocks of the Great Plains for a distance of 10, 20, or as some geologists believe, as much as 35 miles. As a result, Glacier's mountains rise over the latter like a frowning wall. No foothills mask their forms. Only talus and glacial debris hide their bases from the eye.

There is a lake for every day in the year in Glacier National Park. Lake McDonald, the largest, is 10 miles long and a mile wide. It occupies a large portion of a glacial valley, just as Kintly, Bowman, Quartx, Logging, St. Mary, Glenns, and Waterton do. Some lakes are tucked high on the sides of mountains; others on the valley floors.

Glacier is essentially a trails park. Wide and safe trails take one to all points of interest within the park. Many are hewn out of precipitous walls. Most wind back and forth as they thread their way over all difficulties with easy gradients.

Much of the charm of Glacier National Park springs from her floral splendor. There are a thousand species of plants listed for the park, of which one-sixth produce showy flowers.

Almost every one is interested in bird and animal life. Besides 200 species of birds, Glacier possesses practically every interesting species of larger mamal native to the United States except the buffalo and antelope, both of which were early exterminated from the region by ruthless hunting.

Many of the park's smaller animals claim an interest which is wholly out of proportion to their size. The ingenious and resourceful beaver, plentiful throughout the park, builds his home and performs his feats of engineering to the amazement of all. The cony cuts his hay and lays it out in the sun to mature before taking it into his home in the rockslide. Marmots give their ear-piercing whistle as they shamble over the rocks. Pack rats carry out their pernicious brand of thievery under the name of trading. Ground squirrels scold and swear as they try to push blame for their roguery on some one else. Martens and weasels have become pets of rangers and others, to the amazement of many.

To visit Glacier National Park only with the idea of seeing a spot of superlative mountain scenery is to receive only a small portion of the heritage there preserved for us. The visit can do far more than gladden the eye and ear or serve as a lotion to tired and worn-out bodies; it can expand the horizons of body and soul with visions of the work of the Great Architect, who has here fashioned a masterpiece of Nature and has clothed and peopled it with an abundance of life.

Convenient Bus Service Obtained by 2 Beaches

The fishing grounds at Solomons Island and the cool sandy shores at North Beach and Chesapeake Beach are now easily reached by the recent service installed by the Washington, Marlboro & Annapolis Bus Lines.

The large, comfortable buses of this line are now making frequent daily trips between these points and afford an enjoyable week-end or an opportunity to spend the day at these popular resorts.

Ocean City Plans Junior Functions

Ocean City, N. J., June 10.—The young men and women as well as the boys and girls and adults will find a season just teeming with sports and events which will include several social functions and entertaining affairs at Ocean City this season.

The Ocean City Yacht Club, tennis club, golf club, beach patrol and several of the larger hotels, in arranging their social and sports schedule for 1933, included many events which will have a direct appeal to the younger set.

Junior tournaments at the Ocean City Golf Club will enable the younger members of the club and visitors to Ocean City within the junior class to enter competition. Weekly dances at the club will be made to appeal to the young men and women.

The Ocean City Beach Patrol has always catered to the younger generation with their water carnivals, races and dances which are outstanding events during the season. This year will find many new and novel events at all of the patrol's doings.

Beginnings of Le Havre Traced to Ancient Duke

In 1030 Robert the Devil, Duke of Normandy, and warden of the French King's coast, had a little chapel built on the hill overlooking the mouth of the Seine. Below the chapel was a stockade surrounding a few thatched houses, and in front of the stockade, where the long roll of the North Atlantic piled across the bar, there were a couple of long boats drawn up on the beach. They had a single striped sail apiece, but the main method of propulsion was the 40 oars each carried, and their purpose was to defend the coast of Normandy against the Viking raiders by attacking them at sea as soon as their approach was signaled from the belfry of the chapel. The place was called the "Lieu de Grace; that is, the "Place of Grace."

Excursions Are Offered By Atlantic Coast Line

Excursions will be available over the Atlantic Coast Line July 4, Labor Day and Thanksgiving Day holidays with two other excursions August 4-5 and October 6-7. Trains from New York to Florida and Southern points will be operated at less than one-way cost.

A reduction in round-trip Pullman fares from Washington south in conjunction with these low rail rates is also announced.

White Sulphur Springs Invites Vacationists

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., June 10.—No more ideal spot than White Sulphur Springs could be found for a summer vacation, and here a large colony from the North, South and Middle West pass the summer months annually. In the foothills of the Alleghanies, in mountain scenery of surpassing beauty, the Greenbrier Hotel offers the summer life of a great country house. Three of the finest golf courses south of Mason and Dixon's line, a group of championship clay tennis courts and a large stable of Virginia and Kentucky bred saddle horses, as well as several hundred miles of well-kept mountain bridle trails, give every facility for outdoor recreation, and many visitors avail themselves of the opportunity to take the cure in the bath department, where every form of bath to be had at the famous European spas is given by expert attendants.

Heat Sends Many On Steamer Trips

The first heat wave of the season sent thousands scurrying to Seventh street wharves to board the City of Washington, where cool Potomac breezes constantly swept the big open decks of this modern vessel.

The large new beach at Marshall Hall Park also attracted hundreds of sun and water bathers. This famous park is rapidly becoming one of the most popular resorts in or near Washington.

Beginning tomorrow the moonlight trip will stop at Marshall Hall Park each night. This will give passengers on the 5:30 boat to the park a chance to return at 10:25.

RESORTS AND TRAVEL

VARIETY IS OFFERED SWAMPSCOTT GUEST

Golf, Auto Trips, Yacht Cruises, Hunting and Polo on Schedule.

Swampscott, Mass., June 10.—Nowhere in New England are so many varied vacation facilities gathered together into a compact group as at the New Ocean House, in Swampscott, on Massachusetts' famous North Shore.

[illegible] the hotel grounds guests may [illegible] golf on one of America's finest [illegible] golf courses. Seven other fine [illegible] nearby are open to guests of [illegible] hotel. Some of the finest tennis [illegible] Big Bill Tilden, Hans [illegible], the prominent German pro[illegible], have played before large [illegible] on the well-kept hotel [illegible]. The most attractive pastime [illegible] many, however, is bathing in the Atlantic Ocean on the private [illegible] directly in front of the hotel. [illegible] a picturesque sight to see the [illegible] basking in the sun under [illegible] colored beach parasols on awn[illegible] chairs, or lying on the fine [illegible] sand of this gorgeous beach. [illegible] scene is truly continental, peace[illegible], and comfortable in atmosphere.

Within short driving distance over excellent automobile highways one may visit Marblehead, picturesque rendezvous of America's yachtsmen; historic Salem's Witch House and Hawthorne's House of the Seven Gables; Manchester-by-the Sea, Magnolia, Pride's Crossing, Hamilton, all a part of the famous North Shore where some of the famous beautiful estates in the country may be seen; Gloucester and Cape Ann, known for outstanding examples of marine art; Concord and Lexington where Paul Revere rode to announce the "shot that was heard around the world" is a fascinating afternoon drive.

Polo, hunting, motor boating and sailing regattas, comprise many of the social functions which fill the calendar during the North Shore's season. For those followers of Isaac Walton, varied facilities are available for both fresh water and salt water fishing.

Crystal Grottoes Nearby Fairyland of Maryland

The beautiful Crystal Grottoes, formally Washington Crystal Caverns, the underground Fairyland of Maryland, is a spot easily reached by Washingtonians. These spectacular rock formations are just out of Boonsboro, Md., on the road to Antietam battlefield, where raged many battles of the Civil War.

In order that the visitor may fully appreciate the beauties of the stalactites and stalagmites, the walls of the caverns have been electrically lighted throughout. The walls are also thoroughly dry, thereby avoiding any discomfort. Mr. E. E. Hutzell stated that so much impressed is the visitor by these marvelous sights that one trip is not sufficient. Guests return there several times, he said.

New Resort Opens On Chesapeake Bay

The opening of a new Chesapeake Bay resort, combining the most delightful forms of summer recreation, was announced last week.

Situated at the north end of the Severn River bridge, overlooking the United States Naval Academy, the resort will be known as Sherry's-on-the-Severn. It will be under the management of Eddie Sherwood and Milton Weller, the operators of Sherry's of Baltimore.

Day and night bathing, dancing to the same orchestra that played at Sherry's in Baltimore and an open air beer garden will be features of the resort. Steak and shore dinners will be served. Reservations may be obtained through phoning Annapolis 1312.

Steel Pier Opera Group Plan Summer Program

Atlantic City, N. J., June 10.—The Steel Pier Grand Opera Company, now in its sixth year, announces the opening of its summer season on Sunday afternoon, July 2, with a performance of Gounod's "Faust," in English, in the ballroom of the Steel Pier at Atlantic City. The list of principals for the present season is a large one and includes artists from the Metropolitan, Chicago Civic Opera and a number of younger Americans who have gained recognition in several of the renowned European opera houses.

Jules Falk, music director of the Steel Pier, will again take charge of the artistic direction of the performances, and Henry Elkan will conduct. Performances will be given on Sunday afternoons at 3:30 during the entire season. Among the operas announced are "Mignon," "Cavalleria Rusticana," "Pagliacci," "Il Trovatore," "Lucia di Lammermoor," "Carmen," "Rigoletto," "La Traviata," "The Tales of Hoffman" and "The Mikado," the last to have a cast of distinguished singers eminent in the Gilbert and Sullivan roles. The chorus will be augmented to more than 100 voices for this performance.

Crystal Beach Offers Good Picnic Grounds

No party is too large or too small to be taken care of at the spacious Crystal Beach along the Chesapeake. This convenient resort prides itself on the quality of its sea food dinners served in the large, cool dining room. A new feature at the beach this summer is an arrangement making it possible to take care of bridge parties and bridge luncheons.

The beach is now equipped to take care of its patrons in case of an unexpected shower. Shelter for 5,000 persons is now available. When the skies are clear no better spot can be found for picnic or outing, where bathing, dancing, fishing or bowling is to be enjoyed. And here, too, one can eat crabs cooked any style and prepared right where they are caught.

SUMMER DAYS COOL ABOUT HOT SPRINGS

Season at Virginia Resort Will Be Inaugurated With Tennis Wednesday.

Special to The Washington Post.

Hot Springs, Va., June 10.—Cool summer temperatures in the mountains of the Virginia Hot Springs are attracting many colonists from the principal cities of the East, South and Midwest. The season will be inaugurated with the Middle Atlantic lawn tennis championships, which will be played on the en-tout-cas courts of the Homestead, starting June 14. The tournament committee is headed by Thomas J. Mangan, jr., of Washington.

Another leading tennis event of the season will be the annual Virginia State championships, which will attract a field of nationally prominent players during the week of July 24. A gay round of social activities will be held in the colony in conjunction with tennis week.

Horse lovers from throughout the country will be on hand for the sixth annual Bath County Horse Show on August 11 and 12 on the horse show grounds here. This sport fixture is a continuance of the traditional Bath County Fair Show, which for years brought the leading exhibitors to Hot Springs. The horse show is expected to attract more than 400 entries and will be one of the leading shows in the South this season.

The dates for the show have been sanctioned by the American Horse Show Association and the Virginia State Horse Show Association, of which the Bath County Horse Show Association is a member. The committee in charge consists of Mrs. Fay Ingalls, Mrs. Tate B. Starrett and Capt. William M. Talbot. A round of entertaining will mark the period of the show, and a large dance will be held on the closing night at Fassifern Farm.

Among the members of the Washington colony are Mr. and Mrs. Walter C. B. Morse, Countess Felicia Gizycka, Mrs. Mahlon Pitney, Mrs. Thomas T. Gaff and Miss Mary Holmes Ingalls.

Hill Top House View Unexcelled

From the wide spacious porches of the Hill Top House, Harpers Ferry, W. Va., the vacationist is afforded a view said to be unexcelled in the United States. Washingtonians find this delightful hotel a restful and convenient location for an enjoyable week-end or a drive for Sunday dinner.

Situated high on the West Virginia hills an excellent view of the surrounding country may be had. Also in this quaint village stands the monument to John Brown, of Civil War fame and other historical markers of the war between the States.

It is this point where three States meet, Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia, and where the waters of the Shenandoah River empty into the Potomac.

Ferry to Claiborne Has 6 Trips Daily

The Claiborne-Annapolis Ferry Co., providing the shortest and quickest route to and from the Eastern Shore of Maryland, is operating frequent service between Annapolis and Claiborne and Annapolis and Metapeake. Six daily trips are made.

For those going to Ocean City, Rehoboth Beach or other summer places in this direction there is a saving of 100 miles of driving.

B. Frank Sherman, general manager of the line, reports that travel to the Eastern Shore so far this year indicates an unusually successful season for beach resorts in the vicinity.

Economy Bus Vacations Are Becoming Popular

Vacationists seeking economy for trips this summer are planning to do much of their traveling by bus, according to officials of the Short Line system, whose terminal is at 633 F street northwest. The large modern buses of the Short Line system are equipped in Pullman style with reclining chairs, pillows, porter service, in fact, every possible facility for the comfort and safety of passengers. Atlantic City and the nearby Virginia resorts are proving very popular as destinations of passengers using this means of transportation.

8 CAPITAL STUDENTS IN CORNELL U. CLASS

Eight students of Washington and vicinity will graduate with Cornell University's 1933 class of 1,200 at Ithaca June 19. Dr. Livingston Farrand, president of the university, will present the diplomas.

The Washington students are: Hans Albert Hochbaum, of 7329 Blair road, an officer of the graduating class and a candidate for the degree of bachelor of science in agriculture. He was graduated from Central High School here and is a member of Beta Theta Pi Fraternity, Sphinx Head, Mo-Nun-De-Kah and the football Club at the university. He was on the freshman football team and on the varsity football squad in his sophomore, junior and senior years.

William G. Mitchell.

William Goddard Mitchell, of 4701 Connecticut avenue, is a candidate for the degree of civil engineering. He is a graduate of Devitt Preparatory School and is a member of Alpha Delta Phi Fraternity at Cornell; also a member of Quill and Dagger, Red Key, Rod and Bob, varsity basket ball squad (his sophomore year), Kappa Beta Phi, Majura and Willard Straight Hall Board of Managers (junior and senior years). He was a member of the varsity basket ball squad his sophomore year, varsity soccer squad (sophomore year), and assistant manager of varsity lacrosse his junior year and manager his senior year.

James MacPherson Proctor, jr., of 3341 Linnean avenue, is a candidate for the degree of bachelor of arts. Graduated from Washington Central High School, he is a member of Kappa Alpha Fraternity, Quill and Dagger, Rod and Bob, Spiked Shoe and wears the "C." He was a member of the freshman track team and the varsity track team his sophomore, junior and senior years. He was on the college honor committee his senior year and on the freshman advisory committee his junior year.

Thomas Dixcy Gets B. A.

Thomas Dixcy, of East Falls Church, Va., is a candidate for the degree of bachelor of arts. A graduate of New Rochelle High School, he is a member of Phi Gamma Delta Fraternity, Quill and Dagger and Sphinx Head. He was on the freshman advisory committee his junior year and was a member of the Cornell Widow Board his junior and senior years, while his senior year he was editor-in-chief of that publication.

Katherine Norman Hawes, of 3403 Macomb street, is a candidate for the degree of bachelor of arts. She is a graduate of Sidwell's Friends High School and a member of Delta Delta Delta Sorority. She was in the dance festival her freshman year, a member of the varsity hockey team her freshman and sophomore years and a member of the C. W. B. A. cabinet her senior year.

Frances Evans Staley, 2227 Twentieth street, is a candidate for the degree of bachelor of arts. She is a graduate of Holton Arms School and a member of Sigma Kappa Sorority at Cornell.

Manning Gasch, of 1753 P street northwest, is a candidate for the degree of bachelor of arts. A graduate of Western High School, he is a member of the Theta Delta Chi Fraternity and Book and Bowl Club.

Charles Merwin Gilbert, of 3405 ... street, is a candidate for the degree of bachelor of arts. He is a graduate of Deep Springs Preparatory School, Calif., and is a member of Telluride Association at Cornell. He was on the varsity track squad his sophomore year.

Emerson Institute's Living Graduates Being Registered

W. H. Randolph, Principal, Particularly Is Seeking Complete List of Alumni Who Studied Under Dr. Charles B. Young, Founder.

An effort to compile a complete list of all living graduates of Emerson Institute is being made by W. H. Randolph, principal of the school.

Mr. Randolph is particularly anxious to get the names of the students who studied under Dr. Charles B. Young, founder of the school and for 53 years its teaching principal. The records are complete, beginning with the year 1905, when Mr. Randolph became principal.

He has in his possession the "McLean Cup" of the Interscholastic Football Association, awarded to the Emerson team of 1902, but there is no record in his possession of the members of the team.

"It is possible," Mr. Randolph said, "that some alumnus may have a group picture of that team, and if so, would appreciate greatly a reproduction."

Mr. Randolph said that many prominent men of the day were students at Emerson and that he would appreciate hearing of their whereabouts, that a complete list may be compiled.

Catholic University Programs Outlined

Commencement week for more than 400 hundred Catholic University students receiving degrees began Friday with the alumni dance at Indian Spring Country Club. Yesterday the senior class held its annual tea dance at the Shoreham Hotel and this morning will attend baccalaureate mass to be celebrated in the crypt of the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception on the campus by the Rev. Dr. Frank P. Cassidy, dean of men. The Rev. Dr. George Johnson, associate professor of education and director of the department of education of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, will deliver the sermon. The mass will be followed by the informal induction into the alumni body of the graduating seniors in McMahon Hall. Judge William C. Walsh, of Cumberland, Md., will speak for the alumni and Frank J. Brennan, president of the class of 1933, will respond for the seniors.

The Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of Baltimore and chancellor of Catholic University, will confer the honorary degree of doctor of laws upon President Roosevelt at commencement exercises Wednesday. Patrick Cardinal Hayes, Archbishop of New York, will give the commencement address and Timothy W. McCarthy, of Rockville, Conn., will read the valedictory.

American Dollar Yields to Pound

New York, June 10 (A.P.).—Further weakness of the American Dollar was the feature of foreign exchange markets today, although transactions generally were reported small.

The British pound sterling, up 2¾ cents to a cable rate of $4.14½, was at another new high since Great Britain suspended the gold standard in 1931. German marks made a new top for the year at 28¾ cents, as did Japanese yen, up ½, to 26 cents. Italian lire, up .04¼ of a cent, to 6.37¾ cents, and Shanghai dollars, up ½ cent, to 26¾ cents. Canadian dollars equaled their year's peak at 90¾ cents with an advance of ¼ of a cent.

French francs advanced .02 of a cent, to 4.81½ cents. Swiss francs gained .15 of a cent, at 23.65 cents, and Belgian belgas were up .07 of a cent, at 17.07 cents. The Scandinavians were firm.

Stock Exchange Short Interest Slightly More

New York, June 10 (A.P.).—The short interest on the New York Stock Exchange May 29 totaled 1,419,854 shares as compared with 1,415,330 shares on May 1, an increase of 4,524.

New Whooping Cough Vaccine Demonstrated

Berkeley, Calif., (U.P.).—An effective vaccine for treating whooping cough and counteracting its effects has been successfully demonstrated by two University of California bacteriologists.

The vaccine, developed by Dr. Albert Paul Krueger, associate professor of bacteriology, and Mrs. V. O. Nichols, research associate in bacteriology, produced successful results in 80 per cent of the cases.

In clinical tests, 202 patients were given the vaccine. Its effects were compared with the results of old types of vaccine tried on 129 patients. As compared to the 80 per cent success of the new vaccine, the old types showed good results in only 48 per cent of the cases.

Gold-Rush Pioneer Had Colorful Career

Seattle, Wash., (U.P.).—Death of August Wilson, 76, pioneer of gold rushes in five lands, brought reminiscences of his colorful career from friends in Wallace, Idaho. It was remembered Wilson came to the Coeur d'Alenes in 1884, coming from Thompson Falls, Mont., by toboggan, with two sacks of flour. He sold both of them for $40 a sack.

During the last 50 years, Wilson had been one of the first at the famed gold rushes in the Klondike, Yukon; Goldfield, Nev., and in South Africa, Australia and South America.

SCHOOLS

Benjamin Franklin University.

With James F. Hughes, past president of the American Society of Certified Public Accountants and secretary of the Accountants Club of America as speaker, Benjamin Franklin University will hold its annual commencement exercises Saturday evening, June 17, at 8 o'clock.

At that time the university will confer the honorary degree of doctor of commercial science upon Mr. Hughes in recognition of his outstanding service in the profession of accountancy. Mr. Hughes, who was the first graduate of the Pace accountancy courses, is now a prominent certified public accountant of New York and New Jersey, vice president of the Manhattan Railway Co., and a member of the board of the university.

Degrees will be awarded to 175 men and women, the largest class in the 26 years' history of the local Pace School. Among the graduates will be Leo F. McGinley, son of John B. McGinley, Washington certified public accountant, who was one of the earliest graduates of the local school. Two brothers will receive their degrees the same night, Robert A. Willis, who is graduating from the evening department, and Arthur Willis, who is completing the course in the day department. Both are graduates of Eastern High School of this city.

John T. Kennedy, president of the university, will preside at the exercises, which will be held at the Mayflower. The formal ceremony will be followed by an informal reception and dance to be held in the main ballroom and the Chinese room of the hotel. Entertainment will be furnished by an orchestra led by Rudolph Schramm and by James Wilkinson, barytone soloist.

Washington College of Law.

The summer school of Washington College of Law will open on June 19 and continue through July 29. Freshman subjects to be given in the morning are personal property and insurance, and in the evening, elementary law, bailments, common law pleading I and domestic relations.

A junior course in criminal procedure will be given in the morning and the junior subjects of evidence I and sales are to be given in the evening. Senior courses in common law pleading III and real property III will be given in the morning, and the evening classes are equity II, evidence II and equity pleading. Classes will be conducted by the members of the faculty handling the subjects during the winter term.

The girls of the freshman and junior classes entertained in honor of the girls of the graduating class at a luncheon held on Saturday at the Women's City Club.

Oliver Wendell Holmes Chapter of Sigma Nu Phi Legal Fraternity held its last fraternity party of the season last Saturday afternoon and evening in the form of a picnic and dance at Chapel Point, Md.

Epsilon Chapter, Kappa Beta Pi Legal Sorority, announces the following as pledged to the sorority: Mamie S. Price, Mrs. Anna B. Murphy, Mary V. Marraffa, Elizabeth Salisbury and Florence M. McGee.

Beta Chapter, Phi Delta Delta, Women's Legal Fraternity, announces the pledging of the following: Mrs. Hattie M. Barnaby, Helen F. Doren, Rose M. Hand, Agnes M. Morris and Grace M. Stewart.

Abbott School.

The Abbott School of Fine and Commercial Art will hold final exercises Wednesday, June 15, at 8 p. m. Certificates will be awarded in commercial illustration to William Thompson, the young student who painted the panels on "Education, Past Present and Future" for the Chicago fair; to Miss Hulda Braden and Miss Jane Crosby in costume design, and to Miss Marjorie Fowler and Miss Cristo Lane Fogle in interior decoration.

Scholarships and honorable mentions will be awarded for the best work in the respective classes. Lester Douglas, of Nation's Business, and C. Low Watkins, of the Philips Memorial Gallery, will be among the judges of these awards.

The summer session this year will have many new features, as the course has been reorganized to meet the new requirements of the trade during the present conditions. The courses are now planned to start with the junior department under Miss Adelaide Field. A gradual development through the entire course enables the young children entering now to complete a professional course shortly after graduation from high school.

Citizens Can't Have Beer Nor Old Songs

Wenatchee, Wash., (U.P.).—From the West comes stories that a revival of sentimental songs, such as "Sweet Adaline," and "Down by the Old Mill Stream," is scheduled, due to the return of beer.

But citizens of this city—and of Chelan County, also—will have to get the old-time songs over their radios without benefit of brewery juice. A city and county ordinance has ordained that beer and music don't mix, and that selling beer at dance halls is taboo.

Gin Marriage Law Repealed by Idaho

Coeur d'Alene, Idaho (U.P.).—Folks in Idaho are now preparing for an influx of bashful bridegrooms and blushing brides, since the State "gin marriage" law has been repealed and the three-day clause discarded.

Repeal of the law came in the last session of the State legislature, and was pushed by business and hotel men, who pointed to a falling off in trade derived from couples eloping quietly from the State of Washington.

It is the fond hope that Idaho's Gretna Green status will prove more successful to the State financially than did the six-month residence law regarding divorces. Boise and Coeur d'Alene had hoped to become the divorce capitals of the country, but Reno, Nev., doesn't seem to be feeling the competition any.

Meat Cured for Farmers.

Lyons, Ga., (U.P.).—The Lyons Ice Co. announced recently it had cured more than 200,000 pounds of meat this season for farmers who could not dispose of the meat at the moment it was butchered. The company marketed the meat and found the demand greater than the supply, Manager Paul House said.

Bridge Bids and Bumps

By FRANK B. LORD

There's many a man who bids his hand
And bids his hand alone;
There's many a man who bids his partner's hand
When he ought to be passing his own.

JOHN D. MOTHERSHED, bridge player and broker, has demonstrated his prowess at the game. Also, he has checkmated the bridge rivalry in his own home. Playing last Wednesday night with C. E. Stewart as his partner and Mr. and Mrs. Harry F. Helwig as his team mates the foursome won the grand prize of the second annual tournament of the National Press Club—the handsome Ely Culbertson trophy. This was the big event of the series.

It should not be inferred that John D. did all of the playing by himself, or that he was solely responsible for the triumph. Every member of the foursome aided in winning the match and he did his full share, but the satisfaction is probable greater to him than to any of his colleagues. The reason for this is to be found in the fact that last year in the Press Club tournament, Mrs. Mothershed who played as an added starter and to help make up a table won the Victor R. Smith grand trophy against her husband. Ever since then there has been one disputed point in the Mothershead household, and that related to the respective qualifications of husband and wife as contract players. Husband made the argument in his own behalf but wife held the goods in the form of a prize with her name duly engraved upon it as winner. All unbiased and unprejudiced jurors called upon to hear the case, of course, free to form their own opinions and conclusions. Conversation is one thing, cup is quite another.

Now, however, the scores are evened up, and the bridge budget in the family has at last been balanced.

The event of Wednesday night was the third of the tournament series. Running second to the Mothershed-Stewart-Helwig team were Mr. and Mrs. Holland Huntington and John O. Williams and Mrs. J. Bart Campbell. This team was only a point behind the winners. Next in the race was a team composed of Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Brahany and E. B. Martin and Mrs. John I. Power, who were a close third.

The tournament will be concluded next Wednesday night, when there will be an all-men contest for the pair championship of the club and a special club trophy.

MOST contract bridge players in Washington, as well as elsewhere, have an idea that old-fashioned whist, the form of the game that was played a century and a half ago by such sportsmen and amusement lovers as George Washington, Lafayette, Talleyrand and others of historic renown, is as dead as the Roman Empire. That's their mistake. Although the majority of these modern enthusiasts probably never saw a real old-time whist match, there are those who still play it and, in fact, prefer it to the up-to-date method of contract. The late President Theodore Roosevelt played whist in his college days and perhaps when he found time even later in life, and his successor in office, William Howard Taft, also knew the game, but the number who still enjoy it is very small compared with the millions who are now playing contract.

That whist still has its devotees, however, is attested by the fact that beginning June 26, the forty-third annual all-American championship tournament of the American Whist League will be held at Hanover, New Hampshire. The standing which it has and the respect shown for it is illustrated by the further fact that the sessions of the league will be held in the classic halls of old Dartmouth College. Prof. J. P. Richardson of the faculty of the college and A. P. Fairfield, also of Hanover, are leading spirits in the organization and are largely responsible for holding the annual event in the old Granite State. The president of the league is Arthur Ryan, editor of the Holyoke Transcript; and prominent past presidents are J. Eberhard Faber, the lead pencil king, and Maj. C. L. Patton, also for many years president of the Knickerbocker Whist Club of New York, probably the most outstanding club of its kind in the country. Miss Charlotte Schmidt is the Washington representative of the Whist League.

The first auction team of four championship of anything resembling national character was held under the auspices of the American Whist League at New London, Conn., in the summer of 1924. The winners were Sidney Lenz, Commander Liggett, E. A. Wetzlar and P. Hal Sims.

While the moderns are struggling with forcing bids, overcalls and dummy, the old-time players will find enjoyment in playing the game as it was played decades ago.

At the Little Bridge Club, Miss Betty Cochran, hostess, eight tables north and south, Mr. Stockvis and Miss Cochran, first; Maj. and Mrs. Littig, second; Mr. and Mrs. Walker, third; east and west, Mrs. Brett and Mr. Nye, first; Miss Whitford and Mr. Idol, second; Mr. and Mrs. Warner, third. Guest raffle winners, Mrs. Brett and Mr. Hussey; candle raffle winners, Miss Whitford and Mr. Wilcox.

At the Carlton, seven-table Howell movement, Wessel Stewart director; Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Zimmer and E. A. Perkins and Miss Rowayne Rowe, tied for first place; Mrs. M. Johnson and Mrs. Dewitt Milligan, second, and C. Otten and W. Great, third.

At the LaSalle, Mrs. Dixie T. Wright, director: Tuesday evening, Maj. and Mrs. E. B. Gray, first; Mrs. "Bobbie" Watson and Dr. B. L. Naiman, second; Friday evening, C. R. Hough and M. C. Rohrer.

At the Roosevelt, Mrs. Eugene Nolan, director: Sam Cuttenplan and Harry Clendening first; Mr. Stark and Mr. Bishop, second; Mrs. R. A. Lavender and Lieut. Comdr. W. A. Corley, third.

At the Shoreham, A. P. Stockvis, director: Team of four match, Mrs. Alma Byrne and Mrs. Meriam Robinson and Vann Clarke and Mrs. Louise Birgfeld.

At the Byrne Club, 1641 R street, Dr. and Mrs. E. B. Conolly, first; Sam Guttenplan and Mrs. Alma Byrne, second; Mrs. Freda Boyce and W. C. Evans, third.

At Miss Boule's studio, in the Argonne, round-robin, five tables: Mrs. Katherine Priest, first; Mrs. H. C. Given, second, and Mrs. Miller, third.

At the Little Slam Club, 3513 Fourteenth street, Mrs. Helen Riordan, director, eleven-table, Mitchell movement; Dr. E. B. Conolly and E. A. Perkins, North and South, first, 124½ points; Mrs. L. H. Jackman and E. B. Martin, second, 118 points; East and West, Mrs. Mary Johnson and Mrs. Dewitt Milligan, first, 123½ points; Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Zimmer, second.

Lieut. A. M. Guenther, U. S. A., national bridge tournament expert, who is now stationed at Fort Hoyle, Md., has informed the management of the Vanderbilt Club, 1709 N street, that he intends to be in Washington next week, and the club is making arrangements for his entertainment, and invite leading players to meet him at a luncheon and play. At present Lieut. Guenther is detailed to assist in the preparation of the forest camps in Maryland.

The employes of the Department of Agriculture will start their summer series of duplicate games tomorrow night at the Roosevelt Hotel, under the supervision of Mrs. Eugene Nolan. Participation is limited to persons employed in the department.

The University Women's Club has inaugurated a series of duplicate games which will be held throughout the summer on the first and third Fridays of each month. The play will be supervised by Mrs. W. J. O'Leary and the Howell movement will be used. A high degree of interest was indicated at the first meeting, at which the winners were Mrs. Girts and Miss Maxine Girts, first; Miss Mary Laird and Mrs. Louise O'Leary, second, and Dr. and Mrs. F. C. Brown, third.

The season's duplicate tournament at the Women's City Club, held under the supervision of Mrs. John K. Preiot, closed with Mrs Laura Bradley as the winner and Mrs. E. G Whitney, of Silver Spring, second. The contest was spirited throughout the entire series with leadership swinging first to one and then to the other of the two foremost players. When it ended Mrs. Bradley was one-half a point ahead of her adversary. The grand trophy for the championship event was awarded by Mrs Preiot.

Mrs. Preiot will entertain the members of the City Club at a garden party and bridge at her home on Observatory Circle on Friday, June 23. The proceeds will be for the benefit of the mortgage fund of the club.

Practice classes will continue throughout the summer at the club under the direction of Mrs. Curl.

AN interesting controversy arose during the latter part of the recently concluded season tournament of the Federal Bridge League which shows the trouble that may ensue from players passing their hands across the table for examination and discussion after a board has been played. In doing so East and West at one table inadvertently transposed their hands and placed them in the wrong pockets. The play of the evening was more than half over when the mistake was discovered and a wide difference in bidding and results had followed. Fortunately, however, the leading teams for the trophy who were fighting a very close battle, were not seriously affected.

The question of adjustment in the circumstances was first submitted to William Cheeks, manager of the Vanderbilt Club, who declined to do more than suggest a remedy and referred the entire matter to Lieut. A. M. Guenther. The latter's decision, which probably establishes an interesting and important bridge precedent held that the scores should stand as recorded where both pairs of the rival teams had been similarly affected whether before or after the error, and that as to others the board should be "halfed," that is, an average taken between the scores rightfully and wrongfully made, and that the offending pair should score zero.

The league accepted Lieut. Guenther's decision and applied it, with the exception of that phase of it with respect to the offending pair, whose humiliation was so great that they were allowed to retain the score they had actually made. This action did not affect the final result.

The second of the three sessions between the Phychems and the Standards Engineers, in the Bureau of Standards, to determine the championship of the Federal Bridge League, for which these two teams tied at the close of the tournament, resulted in a slight gain for the Phychems. They cut down the lead of their adversaries by two boards and 190 net points. The score now stands, Engineers 25 boards Phychems 23 boards, Engineers 1,050 net points in the lead. The decision, however, will be determined by the number of boards, 72 in all, of which 48 have now been played, unless there is another tie. In that event the team having the highest number of net points will be declared the victor.

"Two Diamonds" Tillie says if brains were ever trumps she knows some players who would always hold chicane.

ECCENTRIC BIDDING.

AN IMMEDIATE Overcall in a suit which has been bid by the opponents is used by most players as a strong Takeout Double. As used by these players, the bid is Forcing to game. However, occasionally one runs into a type of player who uses the bid at its face value—in other words, to show possession of the suit.

When this happens the partner of the Opening bidder is placed in an embarrassing position, as he can not be sure which way the bid is meant. Such a situation confronted the South player on the hand described below.

North, Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

North: ♠ 10; ♡ A 9 7 3; ♢ K Q 8 4; ♣ A 10 9 5
West: ♠ Q 8 7 4; ♡ [illegible]; ♢ [illegible]; ♣ J [illegible]
East: ♠ A K J; ♡ K Q J; ♢ [illegible]; ♣ [illegible]
South: ♠ 9 6 5 3 2; ♡ [illegible]; ♢ [illegible]; ♣ K Q 8 7 6 4

INSERT

North	East	South	West
[illegible]	[illegible]	Pass(3)	[illegible]
Pass	[illegible]	[illegible]	Pass
3NT(7)	Dbl.(8)	[illegible]	Pass
[illegible]	Dbl.(11)	Pass	Pass

1—A better bid here would have been one diamond, but North was afraid of a notrump response from his partner, to which the bid he would be forced to pass. By bidding a heart he gave himself an opportunity to show his diamonds over the notrump.

2—In this particular case showing possession of a heart suit.

3—South is in a difficult predicament. He would like to show both his suits, but can not do so safely. It is quite possible that West may be forced to bid either spades or clubs, in which case a passing policy would prove advantageous.

5—The Rebid clears up the situation.

6—At this point South decides that his bid is honest. Confronted with the choice of showing one or the other of his suits, he decides in favor of the five-card major.

7—Obviously North can not stand spades.

8—Unquestionably sound.

10—A bold bid, but North has no way of telling anything regarding the strength of his partner's hand [illegible]

11—Certainly nobody could be accused of excessive optimism for this bid.

Of course the contract was made easily. West opened the heart 8, which was won with the Ace in Dummy. Declarer then led the King of diamonds and ruffed East's Ace. A low club to the Ace in Dummy followed, after which South led Dummy's Queen of diamonds and discarded on it his own losing heart. Then the Ten of spades was lead. East went up with the King and desperately tried to save the situation with another trump lead, but Declarer was still able to ruff two spades in Dummy before conceding a trick in that suit to West's Queen. This, of course, enabled him to take the last trick with the nine-spot.

The hand is reproduced principally because of the eccentric bidding, and also to show how two sound bidders can overcome obstacles which are placed in their path by unusual defensive bidding.

In match-point play a matter of 50 or 100 points is frequently the deciding factor, and can in fact be the difference between a top-score and a bottom-score. This explains North's rather unusual bid on the following hand—a bid which actually resulted in a top-score for him and his partner.

East, Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

North: ♠ K J 7 3; [illegible]
West: ♠ 9 6; ♡ 7 5; ♢ K 9 8 7 4; ♣ 9 5 4 3
East: ♠ A Q 10; ♡ [illegible]; ♢ [illegible]; ♣ K Q J
South: ♠ 8 5 2; [illegible]

East	South	West	North
[illegible]	[illegible]	Pass	[illegible]
[illegible]	Pass	Dbl.(4)	3NT(5)
Dbl.	Pass	Pass	Pass

1—The hand is not quite good enough for a Double, especially since only three hearts are held.

2—Principally on account of his possession of the one hundred honors, South must try to defend the partial.

3—West finally decides to take action.

4—An unusual bid, but actually a brilliant one. North feels that as South will play 1 trick better at notrump, particularly in view of the lead coming from the East hand.

The result certainly justified the bid. East led the [illegible] of diamonds, which West was allowed to win with the King. North then [illegible] with the Queen, and then followed with the Ace and Ten. Declarer took his King and followed with the Queen of hearts. When this card was covered North could see that an end-play was bound to develop. He cashed his 3 diamond tricks, and then led the Ace and another club. East meanwhile had been forced to protect his Ten of hearts, and consequently was forced to lead up to Declarer's Knave-nine at the twelfth trick, setting the Declarer only one trick. This gave North and South a minus score of 200 points, and it was discovered afterward that the other pairs who had played the hand at three diamonds, doubled, going down 2 tricks, less a hundred honors, for a loss of 400 points.

SOLUTION OF LAST WEEK'S PROBLEM.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1♣	1♡	1NT	Pass
2NT	Pass	3NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

You, West, hold:

Spades	J 8 6 3
Hearts	J 5 2
Diamonds	5 4
Clubs	Q J 9 2

What do you lead?

Answer: Heart 3. With no particularly good suit of your own and an entryless hand, it is clear that you should open your partner's suit. The correct lead is low from three to an honor, even though the honor is only the Knave. Declarer may hold the Queen-Ten, in which case he will have two stops. By leading low you are preventing him from making more than 1 trick in the suit. If declarer holds Ace-King-Ten, leading the Knave will give him 3 tricks in the suit, while the lead low will hold him to 2.

THIS WEEK'S PROBLEM.

This is the third of a new series of problems which I am giving on correct leads.

North-South are not vulnerable. The bidding.

South	North
1NT	2NT
3NT	Pass

You, West, hold:

Spades	Q 10 5 4
Hearts	J 10 6
Diamonds	A 10 9 3
Clubs	9 2

What do you lead?

McGoofey's First Reader

By H. I. PHILLIPS

O. See the man!
Who is the man?
The man is Prof. Felix Footlebaumster.

What is the man doing?

Oh, yes, indeed.

Doesn't he know that the entire orchestra is in its place waiting to play?

Yes, the professor is quite aware of the fact.

Does the professor realize that the audience is waiting for the orchestra to play something?

Yes.

Doesn't he know that the audience has been waiting for ten minutes?

Yes, the professor knows the audience has been waiting ten minutes.

Can't the orchestra begin playing without the professor?

No, the orchestra can not begin playing without the professor.

Why can't the orchestra begin playing? It is all ready.

The orchestra can't begin playing because the professor is the leader. The leader of an orchestra never shows up with the other musicians.

When will the professor go in and let the orchestra begin playing?

When he gets darned good and ready.

What is the idea of all the delay?

It's an old orchestral custom.

LITTLE ESSAYS ON AMERICA.
No. 456—Reforestation Camps.

A reforestation camp is a place in the deep woods.

It is a place to which unemployed young men are sent to discover what a tree surgeon does for a living.

A reforestation camp is an outgrowth of the depression. It just goes to show that you can get as deep into the woods under the Democrats as under the Republicans.

The main idea of a reforestation camp is to give the country better trees under a Democratic administration.

It is important that we have bigger and better trees in America because there are more squirrels in the country than there ever were before in all history.

When you have more squirrels you need more trees.

The President's theory is that millions of unemployed young men will find life in the open very healthful and pleasant and that it will take them off the streets and provide them with a little money.

It is quite a novel experience, if you have been a plumber's helper, a chauffeur or a subway motorman all your life, to find yourself in the deep woods entirely surrounded by woodpeckers, 17-year locusts, chipmunks, owls, various insects and top sergeants.

The boys did not like it so well at first, but they are getting used to it.

The woods are doing the boys a lot of good.

But what the boys are doing to the woods is another story.

THE MOTION PICTURE MAGNATE AND THE BOOMERANG.
(A McGoofey Fable.)

Once upon a time there was a man who made a great fortune in the movies.

He was considered the all highest in the field.

"Give the public what it wants!" was his slogan. He had no time for such questions as the influence of motion pictures on the mind of the young.

When crime waves were at a height he turned out racketeer and gangster pictures one after the other.

He insisted that the pictures be full of realism and show the most intimate details of crime and racketeering.

He was particularly strong for scenes showing the development and the execution of gangster plots, even to the use of machine guns in street slayings.

Whenever anybody would suggest that such pictures had a degrading influence on the child mind he pooh-poohed the idea.

He was deaf to all declarations that young people could be moved toward lives of crime by vicious pictures. "I make pictures for box-office appeal!" he shouted. "I am not running a child welfare society."

One day he came home and found the neighborhood full of police. There was excitement everywhere. It seemed that several children, in playing bandit, had procured a pistol and shot a little boy.

The little boy happened to be the movie magnate's son.

The children were all under 12 years of age and didn't know quite what it was all about.

One of them explained that they were just staging a hijacking scene taken from the dainty crime picture entitled, "Hell's Pavements," or something like that.

The magnate stopped producing crime pictures and went in for something more wholesome until his little boy recovered.

But when the financial returns were not so good he went back to crime pictures.

Moral—The kids will have to play another game with real weapons some day.

POEMS OF LIFE.

Mary had a little "slam"
And if she'd played her hand
The way the teacher taught her to
It would have been a "grand."

She got excited when she saw
What splendid cards she had,
And in the croocial moment, well,
Her card sense was quite bad.

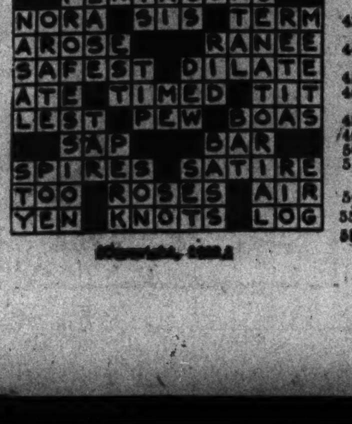
YESTERDAY'S ANSWER.



(Copyright, 1933.)

Radio Dial Flashes

By ROBERT D. HEINL

AMERICANS will be able to keep in close touch with developments at the London economic conference, upon which the hopes of the entire world will be fixed, starting tomorrow, through a series of frequent reports short-waved from the British capital.

King George's address of welcome to the meeting will be heard in the United States tomorrow morning. Thereafter five broadcasts a week will be brought in from London to the N. B. C. networks.

Walter Lippmann, political writer, will talk this morning from his home in Wading River, Long Island, to John Maynard Keynes, secretary of the Royal Economic Society and member of the economic council, in London. The discussion will probably be heard here over WRC or WMAL at 11 a. m.

Starting tomorrow William Hard will be heard from London each Monday at 7:30 p. m., and each Wednesday at 8:15 p. m., over the WEAF network. On Fridays he will be heard at 8 p. m., on June 16; 10:15 p. m., on June 23, and 9:30 p. m. on June 30 and thereafter. All Friday broadcasts will be over the WJZ network.

In addition to these he will be heard twice each Sunday starting June 18—once at 1:15 p. m., and again at 6:15 p. m., both times over the WJZ network.

H. V. Kaltenborn, Columbia news commentator, will give a preview of the conference from London this afternoon over WJSV at 6:30 p. m. His reports will be heard three times weekly—Sundays at 6:30 p. m. and Tuesdays and Thursdays at 5 p. m.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S next commencement appearance will be made on Wednesday, when he receives an honorary degree of LL. D from the Catholic University of America in Washington. The program, which will be broadcast, will include an address of welcome by Archbishop Curley, reading of the degree by Mgr. E. A. Pace, vice rector of the university, acknowledgment by the President and an address by Patrick Cardinal Hayes on "Religion and Reconstruction."

Among the most prized souvenirs in the collection of Larry Adler, youthful harmonica virtuoso heard on networks, are telegrams from Gov. Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland and former Mayor William F. Broening of Baltimore, offering congratulations and wishing him success on his opening night with the late Florenz Ziegfeld's "Smiles."

Carl Sandburg, whose works in verse and prose have won him fame throughout the world, will appear in a program over WMAL at 6:15 o'clock tonight. Accompanying himself with the guitar, Sandburg will read many of his own poems in addition to folk songs which he has collected during his many ambles over the country.

IT IS an ill wind that blows no good. As a result of the criticism in the Senate of Louis Howe's radio talks, he will doubtless double or quadruple the size of his audience tonight. He is scheduled to speak at 9 o'clock over WRC, and no doubt most everybody on the Hill will be listenin'.

Alan Kaufman keeps coming right along with his "Air-o-torials" (WRC—6 p. m.)

The American Schools presentation will be adorned by Agnes Winn, of the National Education Association, and Patty Smith Hill, of the University of Colorado. Florence Hale, as usual, will be in charge. (WRC—5:30 p. m.)

By means of a specially constructed portable short-wave transmitter, which the announcer will wear in a pack strapped on his back, listeners will hear his vivid description of the wonders of the "midway" at the Century of Progress Exposition as he wanders about at will. In addition, his microphone will pick up the medley of sounds that make the "midway" one of the most popular attractions of the fair. (WJSV—1:30 p. m.)

Dr. Joshua Oden, pastor of the Irving Park Lutheran Church, of Chicago; Rabbi Louis L. Mann, of the Chicago Sinai Congregation, and Dr. Ernest Graham Guthrie, general director of the Chicago Congregational Union, will dedicate the Hall of Religion at the Century of Progress (WRC—3:30 p. m.)

The Columbia Dramatic Guild will present over WJSV at 7 p. m., a dramatization of Guy de Maupassant's short story, "How He Got the Legion of Honor."

WILL ROGERS, up for another radio appearance tonight (WMAL, 8 o'clock), reminds us of an exchange he had with Gen. Pershing, if our poor old memory is correct, the night of Lindbergh's homecoming from the transatlantic flight.

"You know, General, I am making a soldier out of my boy," said Rogers, who originally was a cowboy. "I am sending him to the Culver Military Academy."

"I am making a cowboy out of my boy," Gen. Pershing replied. "I have put him on a ranch out in Wyoming."

Jean Lafitte, noted pirate of the Gulf of Mexico, and the part he and his outlaws played in the War of 1812, will be recalled during the Great Moments in History this evening. At the outbreak of the war, the British made overtures to Lafitte, who refused to join them.

The attack on New Orleans by the British induced the Governor of Louisiana and Gen. Jackson to accept the pirate's offer of himself and his men for the defense of the city. Their courage and fidelity was such during the battle that President Madison accorded them free pardon for their past misdeeds.

Charles Richman, actor and playwright, comes to the cast of "Roses and Drums" for its presentation this evening. He will play the role of Jefferson Davis, president of the Confederacy, in an episode based on the dramatic events that occurred at the Confederate capital, Richmond, Va.

Mrs. Richard Mansfield, widow of the famous actor, will take part in today's performance.

The Show Boat calliope is the genuine article and is played during the Thursday night programs from New York by Phil Wall, pianist with Don Voorhees' Show Boat band. If the old-fashioned wheeze-box sounds a little ancient, that's because it hasn't been tuned in years . . . purposely.

EDWARD TOMLINSON, traveler, will tell listeners about "Seeing the Other Americas," at 11:15 a. m. over WRC. During his talk "Wine of the Desert," Tomlinson will take his audience on a visit to the city and province of Mendoza, the wine country of Argentina. He will describe the methods of wine and champagne making in the Southern republic and tell of the interesting and glamorous customs concerning the industry.

There was a time when Mildred Bailey, radio blues singer, had only a ghost of a chance. She used to be a ghost—not the "ha'nting" kind, but a movie ghost. Mildred was the voice for several of Hollywood's best-known stars who went through the motions before the cameras while Miss Bailey did the vocalizing. Now Hollywood is said to be angling for Mildred in person.

Sascha Gorodnitzky, pianist, will interpret three works of Chopin during his recital over WMAL, at 8:30 p. m. The pianist was born in Kiev, Russia, and made his debut with the Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra in 1930.

BERT LAHR, Leo Carrillo, Lee Sims and Ilomay Bailey will combine again at 7 p. m. tonight over WRC.

Herbert Rawlinson, veteran leading man of the motion picture screen and stage, will make his first appearance before the microphone in the Pages of Romance over WMAL, at 4:30 p. m., in a play called "One Way Love."

Among the new local radio air attractions is the new Dave McWilliams' Glen Echo orchestra that is now coming in over the air waves from WRC three times a week—Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings, between 10 and 10:30.

This 15-musician unit is one of the largest broadcasting orchestras in Washington and uses novel instruments such as the celeste, chimes and vibraphone to obtain color and novelty.

A vocal trio provides special intervals of entertainment, and includes Phil O'Brien, Homer Zirkle and Ray Richardson.

"YOU AND YOUR GOVERNMENT" will offer an attractive schedule for the summer. Some of the speakers scheduled for this series to be heard Tuesday evenings over the WJZ network, and frequently WMAL, follow:

June 20, "Constructive or Destructive Economy," Prof. Thomas H. Reed, chairman, committee on citizens' councils for constructive economy; Glenn Frank, president of the University of Wisconsin. June 27, "Saving Money in State Government," Joseph B. Ely, Governor of Massachusetts; Prof. A. N. Holcombe, Harvard University. July 4, "The Crisis in Government Economy," Albert C. Ritchie, Governor of Maryland. July 11, "Mr. Taxpayer Versus Mr. Taxspender," Daniel W. Hoan, Mayor of Milwaukee; Louis Brownlow, director, Public Administration Clearing House. July 18, "Protecting the Taxpayer's Dollar," William A. Comstock, Governor of Michigan; Prof. H. L. Caverly, University of Michigan. July 25, "Reducing the School Budget," Prof. John K. Norton, chairman, joint commission on economy in education; Robert E. Simon, United Parents Association.

Conference Ended By Reserve Q. M. C.

Reserve quartermaster training conferences closed Friday with a buffet supper and entertainment at the Ambassador Hotel. The affair, one of the most delightful of the school season, was held under the auspices of the Quartermaster Reserve Officers Training Association of the District of Columbia. Capt. Gorden E. Clark of the Reserve Corps, master of ceremonies, after welcoming the Regular Army officers, who contributed their services as instructors during the training year, spoke of the success and the progress made by the association and of the continuation of the schedule of conferences for the school year 1933-34, beginning October 1.

The entertainment committee consisted of Maj. L. M. Leisenring, Maj. William F. Doyle, of the Quartermaster Corps, and Capt. Gordon E. Clark, of the Specialist Reserve.

Entertainment was furnished by Maj. Charles Trawbridge Tittman, well-known basso; Maj. Charles J. Ferris, retired, monologist; Glenn Carow and Capt. Otto H. Sylvester, pianist, and Charles Heslep, known as the singing reporter.

The honored guests, all on duty in the office of the quartermaster general, were: Lieut. Cols. William A. McCain and Edmund B. Gregory; Majs. Cowles and Charles C. Drake; Capts. Francis V. FitzGerald and J. A. Porter, and Lieut. George M. Grimes.

Browning Assures Veterans Justice

Representative Gordon Browning, of Tennessee, guest and principal speaker at the meeting of George Washington Post, No. 1, the American Legion, Tuesday, assured members that Congress would remain in session until justice had been done the disabled veterans.

Representative Browning told of inequalities in the present economy bill affecting service-connected disabilities of veterans and said if the cuts in compensation had remained in the bill it would have meant that they would receive a mere pittance for their disabilities. New regulations were being prepared for hospitalization of veterans, he said, and these also will receive attention of members of Congress before adjournment.

Capital Folk Enjoying Life in Cool Gardens

Chilled Dainties Feature Informal Dinners; First Lady Returns From West; Woodring-Coolidge Wedding in July Intrigues Society.

By EVELYN PEYTON GORDON.

WITH the Capital held by an unequaled early summer heat wave social activities have become less numerous, and in place of formal dinners, society now dines on chilled dainties in pleasingly cool gardens and terraces, while all who can are making hasty plans to leave for Northern points. Mrs. Roosevelt, that most energetic of First Ladies, has returned from her Western trip by plane, and is not expected to return to Washington until the middle of the week, when she will undoubtedly make plans to leave for Hyde Park. With the adjournment of Congress some time this week, senators and members of the House with their families will leave for their homes, and Washington will settle into that relaxed and not unpleasant summer lethargy which is so much enjoyed by a tired society at the end of a brilliant season.

The most interesting news of the week is the announcement made on Friday by Senator and Mrs. Marcus Coolidge, of Massachusetts, of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Helen Coolidge, to the Assistant Secretary of War, Mr. Harry H. Woodring, former Governor of Kansas. Miss Coolidge has been known during her year and a half in Washington as one of the Capital's most beautiful and talented members of the younger set, and though the news of the engagement was not altogether a surprise, assumed most interesting proportions when it was realized that it is the first betrothal in the ranks of the new administration. Miss Coolidge has achieved a considerable reputation as an artist, and in recent months has devoted most of her time to portrait painting. Several senators and members of the House have sat for her with very pleasing results.

Mr. Woodring, one of the youngest members of the junior cabinet, is also one of the few Democrats who has been honored with high political office in Kansas, and though he was defeated for reelection to the gubernatorial position last year, is now in the midst of national activities. The wedding will take place on July 25, at the Coolidge home in Fitchburg, Mass., and the young couple will make their home in Washington next fall.

When the former Assistant Secretary of War for Aviation, Mr. F. Trubee Davison sails for Africa on Thursday as president of the American Museum of Natural History, he will realize a youthful ambition.

When he was a 16-year-old boy, still a student at Groton, his father, Henry P. Davison, went to Africa with two companions and shot the great white rhinoceros which now stands in the Natural History Museum. The trip and its subsequent publicity fired young Davison's ambition and imagination, but Yale, Columbia University, the State Assembly, the War Department, the crime commission, a campaign for lieutenant governor of New York, and other jobs kept him close to home.

Now, with Mrs. Davison, he has decided to take a real vacation, so they have accepted the invitation of those well-known explorers, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson, to visit what used to be called the Dark Continent.

Mr. and Mrs. Davison will leave Cairo on July 2, taking a commercial plane up the Nile, and meeting the Johnsons at Kisumu, on Lake Victoria Nyanza. The party will then fly in private planes to Nairobi, where a hunter will be awaiting them.

After elephant hunting, Mr. Davison will get what he terms the greatest thrill of his life, when he goes into the Tanganyika country to watch Masai spearmen hunt a lion, closing in, as is their custom, around the beast in an ever tighter circle until the lion charges at one point in the circle, with every man on the qui vive to know at just what spot the charge will be made.

Those in Washington who know the charming Mr. and Mrs. Davison will know how the idea of the entire trip appeals to them and what a wealth of stories will be the outcome of the thrilling adventure.

The board of governors of Gadsby's Tavern in Alexandria have invited Mrs. John N. Garner, wife of the Vice President, and the ladies of the Senate to a special preview of the famous collection of historic early American furniture recently brought to Gadsby's from Michie's Tavern in Charlottesville, at 3 p. m. on Wednesday afternoon—Flag Day. Mrs. Hugo Black, secretary of the Senate Ladies' Club, has accepted the invitation on their behalf and a large number of the Senate ladies are expected to be in attendance in company with Mrs. Garner.

The wives of the Supreme Court justices and of the members of the Cabinet have been included in the invitation list.

The board of governors of Gadsby's Tavern, which has been restored as the home of the Amreican Legion Post in Alexandria, hope to keep the Michie's Tavern collection of furniture permanently in Alexandria, although definite arrangements have been made for only one year. The tavern will be opened to the public on June 15, and will remain open continuously thereafter.

The furniture has all been arranged in its proper location in the tavern and the display which will greet the visitors at the special preview on Wednesday next is most beautiful.

Mrs. Hoggatt Clopton and her daughter, Mrs. Leland D. Webb, who make their home at the Shoreham, left yesterday for the Century of Progress Fair in Chicago, where they will be for several weeks before joining Lieut. Comdr. Webb on the West Coast, where they will spend the summer. Lieut. Comdr. Webb is stationed on the U. S. S. Lexington.

Commander John F. Shafroth, jr., with Mrs. Shafroth and their daughter, Helen, are now in residence at Wardman Park Hotel, moving into their new apartment there last week.

Nevils Host Tomorrow To Delegate

Distinguished Group Asked to Dinner Honoring Cicognani.

THE Apostolic Delegate to the United States, the Most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, will be the guest of honor at a dinner which Dr. Coleman Nevils, president of Georgetown University, is giving tomorrow evening following the 134th annual commencement exercises. This will be the first visit of the Apostolic Delegate to this historic Catholic University where he will preside over the graduation exercises. Dr. Nevils has invited to the dinner a number of prominent churchmen and members of the faculty as well as Mr. Martin Conboy, of New York City, one of the regents, who is to deliver the commencement address this year.

This is the most important of a number of social events scheduled for commencement week at the Hilltop. The annual reception of the Senior Class will be held this afternoon in Copley Lounge at the College of Arts and Sciences for local and out-of-town alumni. Mr. Joseph N. Monaghan, '33, of Detroit, Mich., and president of The Yard or Students' Council, will receive the guests with the officers of the class. These are Edward J. Farley, president; Henry B. Herrick, jr., vice president; Leonard J. Korn, treasurer; A. T. Kelly, secretary, and Richard Danner, representive on the Students Council.

Dr. Nevils will hold his annual re-

Mrs. Natalie Yates Married to Robert B. Montgomery

THE wedding of Mrs. Natalie Sellers Barnes Yates and Mr Robert Brewer Montgomery, son of Mrs. Robert Montgomery, of Quincy, Mass., took place yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock in All Souls' Unitarian Church, the pastor, Dr. Ulysses G. B. Pierce, officiating in the presence of a large company of guests.

The bride, who was given in marrage by her cousin, Mr. William Wesley Barnes, of Philadelphia, wore a gown of beige chiffon trimmed with Alencon lace and a large hat to match, trimmed with brown velvet. She carried a bouquet of Talisman roses and lilies of the valley.

Little Miss Nancy Yates, daughter of the bride, was flower girl and wore a frock of white net and a hat of pale green tulle trimmed with rosebuds. She carried a small green basket filled with pink roses. The two young sons of the bride, Mark Reid Yates and John Sellers Yates, were ribbon bearers.

Mr. Herbert Hengstler, Chief of the Division of Foreign Service Administration of the State Department, was best man, and was joined at the altar by Miss Edith Yates, sister-in-law of the bride, and returned down the aisle with him. She wore a gown of orchid crepe with a hat of a deeper shade and a corsage of orchids.

The ushers included Mr. Richard Crane, of Westover, Va.; Dr. Stanley K. Hornbeck, Mr. Robert F. Kelley, Consul General James B. Stewart, Consul General Lowell C. Pinkerton, Mr. Harry A. Havens, Mr. Joseph McGurk, Mr. Jefferson Patterson and Mr. George Tait, all of the State Department.

Following the ceremony there was a large reception at the home of the bride on Massachusetts avenue. White summer flowers against a background of palms and ferns were used to decorate the house, and Mr. and Mrs. Montgomery were assisted in receiving by the former's mother, Mrs. Montgomery, who wore a gown of gray crepe with a large blue hat.

Later Mr. Montgomery and his bride left for a wedding trip, the latter wearing a suit of blue and white printed crepe and a blue hat. After a visit to the Century of Progress Exposition in Chicago they will make their home at 2448 Massachusetts avenue.

The bride is a member of a family which has been identified with Philadelphia society from its very beginning. She is a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. George Taylor Barnes. Her sister, Mrs. George Alexander Johnston Ross, of Honolulu, is the only member of her immediate family, though many cousins live in and near the Quaker City.

Mr. Montgomery, who has been assigned to the State Department for the past two years in the Division of Foreign Service Administration, is a graduate of the University of Wisconsin and a member of the Zeta Psi Fraternity. During the World War he served as an ensign in the Navy, having taken special training at Annapolis for war service. In 1919 he entered the foreign service.

Mrs. Archibald T. Banning, jr., of Duluth, Minn., better known as Margaret Culkin Banning, the authoress, who has been spending some time in New York, is in Washington and staying at the Shoreham. Her daughter, Miss Mary Banning, graduated Wednesday from Madeira School. They will go to New York before returning to their home.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Warren have returned from New York where Mr. Warren was given an honorary degree of L.L. D. by Columbia University at its recent commencement exercises.

Helen Smith Is Married to J. H. Fawcett

Bride Wears Mother's Wedding Gown of Satin; Reception After Ceremony.

THE wedding of Miss Helen Coburn Smith, daughter of Mr. George Otis Smith, to Mr. John Hewlett Fawcett, son of Mrs. J. G. Fawcett, of Seattle, Wash., took place last evening at the home of the bride, on Bancroft place, when the ceremony was performed by Dr. W. S. Abernethy and the Rev. George F. Dudley.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore her mother's wedding gown of ivory satin trimmed with Brussels lace in the style of the '90's. Her veil of tulle with rose point lace had belonged to her grandmother, and she carried a round bouquet of lilies of the valley with a lace frill tied with ivory satin ribbon.

Her maid of honor was her sister, Miss Louise Coburn Smith, who wore a gown of blue brocade with coral flowers, which had been worn by her aunt, Miss Louise H. Coburn at the wedding of the bride's mother, and she carried a bouquet of coral and lavender sweet peas. Miss Eunice C. Pepper, a cousin of the bride, acted as bridesmaid, and her gown was of flowered taffeta in lavender and pale green with a beaded yoke and girdle which was worn by Miss Pepper's mother at the wedding of the bride's mother. Her bouquet was of lavender and coral sweet peas.

Hildegarde Hicks Has Home Bridal

Miss Hildegarde Hicks was married yesterday at noon to Mr. Marcel Mallet-Prevost, of New York City, son of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Mallet-Prevost, of Washington.

The wedding took place in the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Walter Hicks, in Montague street. Mgr. Patrick C. Gavan, pastor of the Shrine of the Sacred Heart, performed the ceremony in the presence of members of the two families and a few intimate friends, and a wedding breakfast followed immediately.

The bride was escorted and given in marriage by her father. She wore a peau d'ange lace gown designed on princess lines with a long graceful train. The hem of the gown was appliqued with fine silk net to show the beautiful design of the lace. The long sleeves ending in points over the hands and the high neck followed the same lovely pattern of the lace. The bride selected a veil of tulle in the new length falling just to the waist in front and slightly longer in the back. The veil fell from a Juliet cap made of the same lace as the dress. The bride carried a spray of valley lilies.

Miss Marie Angela Hicks, sister of the bride, was the maid of honor. She wore a most becoming gown of peach colored chiffon of complex simplicity with a flattering decolletage covered by a matching cape jacket, and a large organdy hat and gloves of the same shade. She carried a bouquet of spring flowers. Mr. George Mallet-Prevost was the best man for his brother and George Mallett-Prevost, jr., nephew of the bridegroom, was ring bearer.

Mrs. Hicks, mother of the bride, was in a gown of blue and white in a corn flower design with which she wore a corsage of corn flowers and valley lilies and a large white hat. Mr. Mallet-Prevost's mother wore an attractive gown of sheer crepe in brown and white with a hip length jacket and white accessories. Her flowers were a corsage of sunkist roses.

Mr. Mallet-Prevost and his bride left shortly after the ceremony for a motor trip, the bride wearing a smart brown and white ensemble trimmed in the new orange-peel shade. The bride has her A. B. degree from Trinity College in Washington and Mr. Mallet-Prevost is a graduate of George Washington University. The couple will make their home in New York City.

Bunker Hill Day Will Be Celebrated

The last social event of the season will be held by the Massachusetts Society of Washington at the Olney Inn, at Ashton, Md., on Bunker Hill Day.

As is always the case, this is expected to be the banner event of the whole season, an afternoon of real fun in the many games and races, or this time may be spent in a friendly game of bridge. This will be followed by the best fried chicken dinner to be had in Maryland. The evening will be spent in dancing, thus topping off the day as a typical Massachusetts field day.

Several of the Massachusetts congressional delegation have been invited and it is expected that they will gladly avail themselves of this opportunity to meet their friends outside the pale of their official duties. Last year's speaker, Dr. Stockdale, also will attend.

Iota Chapter, Pi Epsilon Tau Sorority announces a Monte Carlo party to be held at the Hay-Adams House, Thursday evening, at 8 o'clock. Miss Betty Leibson is prior of the chapter; Miss Bertha Levy, scribe, and Mrs. Pearl Ratner, bursar. Proceeds from the party are to be donated to one of the outstanding cultural organizations of the city.

A similar party was given by the sorority last June at the Hebrew Home for the Aged. The proceeds were used to send a group of children from the Foster Home to a summer camp. The sorority is interested in civic work, and is a contributor to the Community Chest. Miss Elizabeth Bersheimer heads the music appreciation group.

Miss Helen Nordlinger and Mrs. Alexander Wolf, jr., were given a shower by the Sigma Omega Pi Sorority on Thursday evening at the home of Miss Deborah Mae Liebman.

The Sigma Omega Pi Sorority held its summer formal last evening at the Woodmont Country Club.

Mary J. Allen Made Bride in Chevy Chase

Married to Paul E. George in Brilliant Ceremony at All Saints'.

An attractively arranged early June wedding took place Wednesday at 5:30 p. m. at All Saints' Church, Chevy Chase Circle, when Miss Mary Jane Allen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Poe Allen, became the bride of Mr. Paul Eugene George, of Washington, son of Mrs. Blanche George, of Indianapolis, Ind., and the late Mr. George.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a becoming gown of white satin fashioned along princess lines, with leg-of-mutton sleeves and a short train. Her veil, of hand-made Spanish lace, was caught with a chin strap, and a spray of orange blossoms held it in across the back of the neck. She carried a white prayer book with markers of white satin ribbons, to which sprays of lilies of the valley were fastened.

Miss Julia Allen, a sister of the bride, was the maid of honor. Her dress was of pale yellow mousseline de soie, made over taffeta, the same shade, and she wore a close-fitting hat of matching crepe. Mrs. John Himebaugh, who was the matron of honor, wore a frock of blue mousseline de soie, made like that of the maid of honor. The bridesmaids, Miss Ruth Hartrick and Miss Betty Bacon, wore similar gowns of green. They all carried sheath bouquets of mixed spring flowers. Little Miss Grace Allen, sister of the bride, and Little Miss Jane Marsden, were the flower girls. They wore ruffled frocks of white organdie and carried white baskets of rose petals.

Mr. James Ruby was the best man, and the ushers were Mr. John Thaxter, a cousin of the bride; Mr. John Himebaugh, Mr. Franz Reary and Mr. Raymond Abbatiechio, all of Washington.

After the ceremony there was a reception at the home of the bride's parents, 3600 Rittenhouse street, for 85 guests. Mr. and Mrs. Allen received the guests with the young couple, the latter wearing a filmy frock of blue chiffon with white accessories and a shoulder bouquet of gardenias. Assisting at the tea table were Mrs. Boliver J. Lloyd, Miss Edith Brookhart and Miss Edith McCoy.

Later Mr. and Mrs. George left by motor for a trip which will include a visit to A Century of Progress exposition in Chicago. Mrs. George's going-away gown was of blue and white crepe with blue accessories. Upon their return they will make their home in Washington.

Out-of-town guests for the wedding were Mrs. Guy W. Thaxter and Miss Grace Berger, of Kansas City, Mo., sisters of Mrs. Allen.

Mr. and Mrs. Brooks Hosts At Al Fresco Supper.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold A. Brooks entertained last Saturday at a garden party and al fresco supper at their home, when the guests numbered 20.

Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Walker left Thursday for Chicago, Ill., where they will attend A Century of Progress. They expect to be away a week. Mr. and Mrs. Walker spent last week-end at their summer cottage at Point No Point, Md., when they had as their guests Mr. and Mrs. Tudor Morsell, of Chevy Chase.

Annapolis Set For Gay Times In Summer

Picnics, Swimming Parties, Dinner Dances, Cards and Luncheons to Rule.

Special to The Washington Post.

Annapolis, Md., June 10.—With the hustle and bustle of June week festivities at the Naval Academy at an end, the local society contingent will settle down to lighter forms of entertainment. Picnic and swimming parties at the many beaches along Severn River and Chesapeake Bay will reign supreme during the remainder of the summer season, although there will be many luncheon, dinner and card parties on the calendar.

Week-end dinner-dances at the Annapolis Roads clubhouse and other functions of the like, undoubtedly will hold wide favor, and the golf courses at the Naval Academy, Annapolis Roads, Sherwood Forest and other points also have their regular devotees.

The naval set lost a popular host and hostess on Monday with the departure of Commander Frank H. Lash, chaplain of the Naval Academy, and Mrs. Lash. Chaplain Lash has just completed a four-year tour of duty here, and has been assigned to a similar post on the battleship West Virginia, now on the West Coast. Last Saturday afternoon, the Superintendent of the Naval Academy and Mrs. Thomas C. Hart entertained informally at tea as a farewell to Chaplain and Mrs. Lash. Commander and Mrs. Lash also were guests at a number of informal affairs during the several days preceding their departure.

Smith, jr., Air Corps, United States Army, which will take place at 8 o'clock in the evening of June 15 in St. Anne's Episcopal Church. The wedding will be followed by a reception at Carvel Hall.

Lieut. Smith graduated from the Military Academy at West Point in 1929, and was assigned to duty at Kelly Field, Tex. He is the son of Col. Frederick H. Smith, of the Coast Artillery Corps of the Army, and Mrs. Smith.

Capt. and Mrs. Franklin D. Karns gave a reception Sunday afternoon for the officers assigned to duty on the naval transport Chaumont, and their wives. The Chaumont was at anchor in the bay, off Annapolis, until a few days ago.

The Sigma Delta Gamma Fraternity held its annual banquet, followed by a dance Wednesday evening at the Annapolis Roads Club.

Mrs. John B. Wells and children, of Des Moines, Iowa, have arrived here for an extensive visit with Mrs. Wells' mother, Mrs. Nevett Steele, 29 Franklin street. Leaving here they will go to Knoxville, Tenn., which will be their future home.

Mrs. Arthur Newton Brown and granddaughter, Miss Elizabeth Bartlett, of Coconut Grove, Fla., have arrived here for a visit of several weeks with Miss Mary Magruder, 215 King George street.

Prof. John S. Kieffer, of the faculty of St. John's College, and Mrs. Kieffer have gone to Hagerstown, Md., their former home, where they will pass the summer season.

Capt. Charles M. Oman, Navy Medical Corps, and Mrs. Oman entertained at tea Saturday afternoon at their home on the Naval Hospital Reservation. Assisting were Mrs. Taylor Smith, Mrs. Edward H. H. Old, Mrs. Clarence E. Clement, Mrs. Harvey E. Overesch, Mrs. John B. Kaufman and Mrs. Sylvanus Stokes, jr.

Mrs. D. Claude Handy, of Annapolis, passed this week as guest of Mrs. Hoogerwerff, widow of Rear Admiral John Hoogerwerff, at Blue Ridge Summit, Pa.

Lieut. and Mrs. Robert N. Allen, who were married in the Naval Academy Chapel May 20, have been passing several days with Mrs. Allen's mother, Mrs. Clarence E. Clement. From here they will go to Louisville, Ky., to visit Lieut. Allen's parents before leaving for California.

Ann C. Phelps Engaged To Ensign Born.

Mrs. William W. Phelps, of Baltimore, announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Anna C. Phelps, to Ensign Howard E. Born, United States Navy, a graduate of the Naval Academy in the class of 1932. The wedding will take place in the fall.

Capt. Robert Woods, of the Navy Supply Corps, was a guest over the last week-end of Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. Harvey E. Overesch. Commander and Mrs. Walter L. Kilpatrick, of Washington, was guest of the Overeschs on Saturday.

Four Rivers Garden Club Will Meet on Tuesday.

The next meeting of the Four Rivers Garden Club, June 13, will be held at Holly Beach Farm, the fine estate of Mr. and Mrs. Sylvester W. Labrot, at St. Margaret's. Tom Taylor, coach of the Naval Academy soccer team, will lecture before the women on the subject of "Lily Ponds."

Mrs. Charles P. Cecil has gone to Charleston, S. C., where she will pass three weeks with her mother, Mrs. Pelzer, before opening her summer home at Flat Rock, N. C. Lieut. Comdr. Cecil is assigned to duty on the battleship Wyoming for the rest of the summer.

Mrs. Nettie M. Strickland and daughter, Miss Dorothy Strickland, have returned from their winter home in DeLand, Fla., and are occupying their Annapolis residence in Thompson street.

MUSIC AND MUSICIANS

By ELISABETH E. POE

THE CONTRIBUTION of the service bands to the summer musical enjoyment of the city is a not inconsiderable one.

The happy practice of out-of-doors concerts by the service bands in and around Washington does much to fill the musical programs of midsummer in the National Capital.

At the Capitol and in the parks and other focal points of interest, the summer programs in the out-of-doors of the United States Marine Band, the "President's Own," the United States Navy Band and the United States Army Band draw real audiences. Audiences, too, that abound in appreciation of the good work of these service musicians.

During the coming week, the United States Marine Band, under the direction of Capt. Taylor Branson, will play concerts at the places and on the dates as follows:

Monday, band concert, Marine Barracks at 8:00 p. m.

Tuesday, band concert, Grant Circle at 7:30 p. m.

On Tuesday the United States Marine Band will present the first of a series of concerts, to be known as "Masterpieces of the Ballet," to be broadcast weekly at 11 a. m. by the Columbia Broadcasting System.

On Wednesday the Marine Band will furnish music for the Flag Day exercises to be held at the Sylvan Theater, Monument Grounds, at 7:30 p. m. On Wednesday the Marine Band will play at the commencement exercises of the Catholic University. Thursday, band concert at 8 o'clock, Sylvan Theater, Monument Grounds, under the auspices of the Community Center Department.

Friday there will be a band concert, "Patriotic Shut-In Hour," 10 a. m., at the Marine Barracks. Also Friday, there will be a special broadcast for the 4-H Club Camp at 12:30 p. m.

Friday there will be a band concert, Naval Hospital, at 3:30 o'clock.

Pelian Garzia will be presented in recital by the Chevy Chase School tonight at 8:15 o'clock as a part of their usual commencement exercises. In the program he will give the Symphonic Variations by Cesar Franck, which he played this winter with the National Symphony Orchestra, Hans Kindler conducting. The orchestral part will be played on a second piano by his brother, Francis Garzia.

At the morning church service today at the National City Christian Church the senior and chapel choirs, under the direction of W. E. Braithwaite, will sing antiphonally "O Pray for the Peace of Jerusalem," by Knox. Mrs. Cecile Littlefield, soprano, will sing Neidlinger's "Spirit of God." The organ music, played by Robert Ruckman, will include the "Prayer" from "Tannhauser" and "Adagio," by Beethoven.

At the evening hour the choirs will present the monthly evening of music. The mixed quartet will sing "Bless the Lord," by Clough-Leighter; the two choirs will sing an antiphonal chorus, "Onward, Hear the Trumpet's Call," by Challinor, with Mr. Walter Fagan playing the trumpet accompaniment, and the senior choir will sing Lincoln's arrangement of "Abide With Me." Organ numbers will include "Menuet Gothique," by Boellmann; "Reverie," by Bonnet; "Slavonic Cradle Song," by Neruda.

Yesterday at the Arts Club auditorium, 2017 I street, the piano pupils of Miss Kathryn Latimer presented a recital. The ages of those participating ranged from 6 to 16 years. The pupils were Betty Ryder, Nancy Ryder, Mary Latimer, Roberts Latimer, Chauncey Parker, Cecelia Parker, Ryder Ray, Ruth Sanders, Mary Katherine Hoover, Gerhard Lenkl, Marion Harvey, Peggy Schneider, Allen Latimer, Betty Rawdon, Richard Rawdon, Charlotte Henning and Mary Margaret Trimble.

During the short intermission the piano class of the Washington College of Music was presented. The class consisted of Betty Chamberlin, Helen Wootton, Roger Alanic and Howard Crawford. Their program consisted of quartets, duets and solos.

John Russell Mason, organist of the Central Presbyterian Church, who has been on sabbatical leave since February 1 studying in New York, returned to Washington to play at the 112th commencement of the George Washington University on June 7 in Constitution Hall. On Tuesday he will sail on a cruise to the West Indies and the northern coast of South America, returning to New York just in time for the opening of the summer session at Columbia University.

The adult department chorus of Calvary Baptist Sunday School will give a program of sacred music over Station WRC tomorrow evening at 8:30. Organized in 1927, with a membership of 15, this chorus, under the leadership of Andrew Clifford Wilkins, organizer and director, and with the assistance of Mrs. Glen Edgington, accompanist, has grown to include more than 60 members. The chorus assists in the song service at the opening exercises of the adult department of Calvary Baptist Sunday school, performs an anthem and provides an additional special number.

Recognition of the good work of this chorus is shown by the fact that it is the only Sunday school chorus invited to participate in the series of programs of sacred music being broadcast on Monday evenings by leading church choirs of different denominations in Washington.

Mary Izant Couch, pianist, is presenting active members of the Young Musicians Club in a musicale at her home studio, 1352 Ingraham street, on Saturday at 8 o'clock. The following pianists will appear in solo and ensemble numbers: Dorothy and Rebecca Edwards, Kathryn Cragg, Charles Mitchell, Alice Lewis, Page Pratt, Wayne and Parker Dorman, Hilda Parks, Rita Thorn, John MacDonald, Dorothy Cusit, Shirley MacKay, Patricia Ellis and Eleanor O'Shaughnessy. Donald Thorn will include the entire club in the club song, "Dear Land of Home," by Sibelius.

The U. S. Navy Band will play at the east front of the Capitol tomorrow evening at 7:30. Other concerts scheduled for this week are Tuesday evening at the District of Columbia War Memorial, Potomac Park; Wednesday evening at the band stand, Navy Yard; Thursday, 7 p. m., at Naval Hospital, and Friday, 2 p. m., at St. Elizabeths Hospital.

The concert schedule of the United States Army Band for the coming week is as follows:

Monday, Washington Auditorium, Future Farmers of America convention, 8:30 a. m.; Lincoln Park, East Capitol street, between Eleventh and Thirteenth, 7:30 p. m.

Tuesday, St. Elizabeths Hospital, 2 p. m.; in the formal garden, Walter Reed General Hospital, 6:30 p. m.

Wednesday, Tuberculosis Hospital, Fourteenth and Upshur streets northwest, 6:30 p. m.

Marietta Park Women

The Marietta Park Women's Club met for its annual banquet at the Dodge Hotel Tuesday. The president, Mrs. Stanley D. Reed, welcomed the membership and thanked them for their splendid cooperation during the club year. The guest of honor, Mrs. Ellis Logan, a former president of the District Federation of Women's Clubs, took for the theme of her brief address "Unity in Diversity." Mrs. Edward Perkins and Mrs. John Potts, of the Park View Women's Club, were presented.

The club song, written by Mrs. Carol McDavitt, was sung at table, Mrs. William Hargrave at the piano. Mrs. William F. Shea acted as toastmistress, introducing first Mrs. Arthur Whitt, who read one of her own charming poems dedicated to the president of the club.

Miss Pauline Loris favored the gathering with "Darkness on the Delta," "How Much Do I Love You," "I Certainly Must Be in Love" and other songs. Two delightful violin solos were rendered by Miss Nellie McLendon, Mrs. P. E. Smith at the piano. Mrs. F. E. Schofield presented a humorous reading.

To end the musical program, Mrs. Elsie Hart sang "Just a Kiss" and "The End of a Perfect Day." She was accompanied by her cousin, Mrs. Paul Carr. The members and guests then retired to the cardroom for bridge. Arrangements for this particular part of the evening's entertainment were made by Mrs. John Kiley. Special thanks are also due Mrs. J. Raymond Miller and Mrs. I. L. Stormont for their attention to the details of the banquet table.

Writers' Rendezvous

The Virginia branch of the Writers' Rendezvous endorsed the candidacy of its president, James Irvine, for District Commissioner at the meeting at Cherrydale on June 4. Alberta L. Nichols was honored at the meeting on the occasion of her birthday.

Mr. Irvine read a letter from the White House thanking him for his poem in praise of President Roosevelt. Among the speakers and entertainers were Dr. Adelbert Adams, John Paul Jones, Helen Terry, Theodore Hoag Dougherty, Mary Schultz Daugherty, Jay M. Vaughn, Mr. and Mrs. G. Risdon and Annie Smith.

U. D. of C.

The regular meeting of the Stonewall Jackson Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, will be held at the Confederate Memorial Home tomorrow evening. This is the last meeting until October.

Mrs. Gretna P. Boswell, entertainment chairman, has arranged for a program to be given by the Y. M. C. A. Glee Club Quartet and readings by Peggy May Koob. Refreshments will be served.

Pen Women

Mrs. Jesse W. Nicholson and her daughter, Miss Dorothy M. Nicholson, were joint hostesses at luncheon at their home the past week in honor of Mrs. Emma W. P. Slack, the newly elected president of the Chevy Chase Branch of the National League of American Pen Women.

The hostesses had assisting them the past presidents, Mrs. Richard Yates, Mrs. David McPherson and Mrs. Viola Offutt.

Poets' Council

The Poets' Council of the National Woman's Party held its last meeting of the season on Thursday evening at Alva Belmont House. Miss Myrtle R. Patterson presided. The guest speaker was Gideon A. Lyon, journalist and author, who gave an interesting account of "How a Play Was Made to Order" in metric form, based upon the life of Omar Khayyam.

Mrs. Leila Mac Taylor gave dramatic readings which described the women of yesterday and today, and Miss Katherine Kennedy and Mr. Francis Jean Reuter read poems. Miss Clara E. Wellman gave character sketches of "Reminiscence of Negro Life on My Old Virginia Plantation," which were given in dialect.

Joe Carballo, violinist, accompanied by Mrs. Howard J. Kloeser on the piano, rendered a number of selections, and Harry Guinn, radio singer, assisted by Betty Baum, appeared on the musical program.

Prominent among guests and artists were Miss Edith Ainge, of New York and Washington; Mme. Amc a Conte, internationally famous harpist, and Miss C. Fitzgerald, of Massachusetts. Miss Patterson was presented with a vote of appreciation for the unusual programs which she arranged for members of the Poets' Council of the National Woman's Party during the past season. Meetings will be resumed in the fall.

Children of the Confederacy

The last meeting of the Maj. Charles M. Stedman Chapter, No. 1, Children of the Confederacy, was held at the Confederate Memorial Home. Mrs. Ann Howell, directress of the children, told many interesting Civil War experiences of her grandfather, John M. Bond. Mrs. Esther Emmart, honorary president, who was ill, was visited by the children and presented with flowers, refreshments and a group picture by them. This was the last meeting until September.

The chapter celebrated the birthday of Jefferson Davis on June 3 by having a picnic at Pierce's Mill, in Rock Creek Park. This was well attended and enjoyed by all.

The children also took part in the Confederate memorial services at Arlington on June 4. They followed the United States Marine Band, marching with the few remaining veterans. Flowers were strewn over the Confederate mounds by the children.

W. C. T. U.

Mrs. T. P. Law was appointed delegate with Mrs. A. Natalie Deeb alternate on the District Nominating Committee at the final meeting of the North Star W. C. T. U., held at the Swartell M. E. Home, 6300 Second street northwest.

Mrs. Edna Rochester was named chairman and Mrs. Charles Helmeck and Mrs. C. H. George, members of North Star Union's nominating committee. Mrs. Jennie Esmond Wright, District radio chairman, presented a talk on Russia.

Members of the union were entertained by the children of the home, who gave a program of recitations and songs. Mrs. Law, general chairman, announced the tenth anniversary luncheon, to be held at the Hamline M. E. Church June 19 at 1 p. m. Reservations should be made before June 19 with Mrs. W. M. Hurley, at Columbia 1620.

ART AND ARTISTS IN WASHINGTON

By VYLLA POE WILSON.

THE Corcoran Gallery of Art will be the Mecca of those who wish to pay tribute to the artistic achievements of the late Dr. William H. Holmes, director of the National Gallery of Art, to view the memorial exhibition of the artistic work of Dr. Holmes to be held at the gallery from June 15 to July 2. This is a most comprehensive exhibit of this man's artistic creations, some of them dating back to the seventies, while others are of more recent date. They include landscapes, marines, drawings and still life. Dr. Holmes, who contributed so much to the scientific as well as the artistic chronicles of this country, has written his name high on the scroll of fame and will certainly be written into the artistic and scientific history of this Nation. His interest in the world of local artists, especially the Washington water color, makes this exhibition of particular concern to the National Capital art colony.

This week the etching drawings of Frank W. Benson will be on view at the Corcoran Gallery. Mr. Benson has won laurels for his original and most attractive hunting and bird subjects.

Another important exhibition now in progress at the Corcoran Gallery of Art are the studies in black and white for the mural decoration in the Baltimore Trust Building by R. McGill Mackall. This exhibition will be open until June 18. The murals portray early history and characters of Maryland and modern Baltimore as well.

A notable exhibition of the work of the students of the Abbott School of Fine and Commercial Art is now on exhibition at the school. This exhibition includes many original paintings and drawings indicative of the talents and possibilities of artistic abilities of the students.

An exhibit of work by Louise Kidder Sparrow is being shown in the art gallery of the Howard University. The exhibit includes the following bronzes: Bust of Dr. Austin H. Clark, curator of the Smithsonian Institution. Head of Comdr. Frederick Colby (awarded medal at Corcoran 1930). Head of Miss Margaret Lambie, international lawyer. Head of "Ruth Elizabeth." Small figures, "Grief of Love" and "Tree of Life" (original in Pentelic marble), loaned by Mr. William K. Ryan. Bas-Relief of Gen. Samuel W. Miller. "Shepherd Boy Listening to the Pipes of Pan," loaned by Mr. Ryan. Bust of Daniel Leo Haynes as "Hezdrel-Adam" in "The Green Pastures" in plaster. Owned by the sculptor. (First public exhibit of Haynes' bust.) Plaster composition for fountain model "I Shall Give Thee Living Water."

DAUGHTERS OF AMERICA

Flag Day exercises of the Daughters of America have been shifted from the United States Capitol Building to the Sylvan Theater Wednesday, June 14, at 7:30 o'clock. Music will be furnished by the United States Marine Band. Members of the drill teams taking part in this pageant are requested to communicate with Drill Capt. Archie Lewis, of Pride of Washington Council.

The annual excursion and field day will be held this year at Marshall Hall Park on Wednesday, August 2.

Members of this organization have been invited to attend services with J. Morgan Reed Council, No. 1, Junior Order of United American Mechanics, at the Mount Rainier M. E. Church South tonight at 8 o'clock. Members are requested to assemble themselves at the Star Hall not later than 7:30 o'clock.

John L. Burnett Council, No. 5, convened Monday evening, Mayree Dailey presiding. The unwritten work was given by Mrs. Mary Hansen. The application of Miss H. Louise Graves was presented for membership. Vice Councilor Mrs. Mayree Dailey reported on the meetings of the State Council good of the order committee on arrangements for the coming State convention.

Following is the result of the election of officers at which the deputy State councilor, Mrs. Lillian M. Martin, presided as judge:

Mrs. Downie Jackson, conductress and chairman of good of the order, offered a program of music as follows: Songs and dances by Murrell Holt, a small boy studying for the stage; songs and guitar music by Bora Herbert, vocal selections by Miss Joan Marr, vice councilor. Five of the charter members being present, all were called on for remarks. They were B. L. Thornton and his wife, Mrs. Ella Thornton; Robert L. Seymour and wife, past State councilor; Mrs. Margaret Seymour, and Mrs. Rouzee. Refreshments consisting of home-made cake and punch were served. The birthday cake, made and donated by Mrs. Marilla Smith, was an important part of the repast. This council plans to confer the degrees on candidates at its meeting on Wednesday.

The meeting of Anacostia Council, No. 14, held on Wednesday evening, was conducted by Councilor Mrs. Ethel E. Burroughs. A candlelight tea was announced for the benefit of the State council committee on benevolence for June 29. Associate Vice Councilor Rettstatt received the Penny March prize.

Chairman of the good of the order, Mrs. Daisy Bell, appointed the following entertainment committee for this month: Mrs. Helen Steivers, Mrs. Helen Conner, Mrs. E. Burroughs and Mrs. E. A. Rettstatt.

Triumph Council, No. 8, at a previous meeting had its thirty-sixth birthday anniversary in its own hall, with four remaining charter members—Mrs. Lula Schwenk, Mrs. Fannie Joyner, J. W. Schwenk and Frank F. Kress. The birthday supper was had with a large birthday cake, which was adorned with 36 candles. Later during the evening a small sketch was presented, with the following members of the council in the cast: Mrs. Louise Schwenk, Mrs. Virginia Moulden, Mrs. Jennie Buell, Mrs. Amelia Budeeheim, Mrs. Maggie Colburn and Mrs. Pearl Wolfe. The women were dressed in comical costumes of years ago. Old-fashioned songs were sung, with Mrs. Jennie Buell at the piano. The four charter members were each presented a birthday card and a gift by Mrs. Pearl Wolfe, past State councilor, and each responded with interesting remarks and thanked the council for the same.

Barbara Frietchie Council, No. 21, convened on June 1 with the councilor, Lucille Lanier, in the chair. The election of officers was held, and the following were elected: Councilor, Cleonis Fritz; associate councilor, Hannah Hood; vice councilor, Catherine Bovee; associate vice councilor, Helen Richards; conductor, Nettie Gaither; warden, Mae Myles; inside sentinel, Rosebelle Fritz; outside sentinel, Pauline Sisson; recording secretary, Edna Gaither (reelected); assistant recording secretary, Alice Soper (reelected); treasurer, Una Dorsey (reelected); financial secretary, Daisy Smith (reelected); eighteen months' trustee, Clara Lamphier; representative to the State council sessions, Etta Storey, Una Dorsey and Stella Greenip; pianist, Etta Storey.

Members of J. Morgan Reed Council, No. 1, Junior O. U. A. M., were the council's guests for the evening.

Mr. Rawling's orchestra played. A solo by Mr. Bliss, songs and dance numbers by Miss George, accompanied by Ben Storey at the piano, and a guitar solo by Harry Voorhees were enjoyed. Refreshments were served. The orchestra furnished music for the dancing. Remarks were made by the State outside sentinel, Mrs. Viola Frazier, and our other guests from J. Morgan Reed, No. 1, and visiting members from Old Glory, Friendship and Loyalty Councils, D. of A.

Home Circle

All circles in the District are making plans for the trip to Chicago to the supreme convention, June 19, 20 and 21. There is to be a union team composed of four members from each circle.

Gardenia Circle held a dance at their last meeting, Monday, at Phoenix Club, 7 Fourth street northeast. It will hold a bingo party on Wednesday at the home of Mrs. Grey, 1931 Bennett place northeast.

Dee Cee Circle held a junior rally at their meeting yesterday at 7 Fourth street northeast.

Phoenix Club

The last meeting of the Phoenix Club was conducted by its president, A. B. Nicholson. The club was pleased to welcome the return of its vice president, J. P. Mills, who had expected to live in Florida, but after two months there decided that the District of Columbia is the best place after all. Plans were made for a lawn party to be held in the near future. A new membership drive was launched. Remarks were made by several members. Refreshments were served.

PARENT-TEACHER NOTES

All material for this column must be in the State office, Room 501, 1201 Sixteenth street northwest, not later than the first mail on Wednesday preceding Sunday on which publication is desired.

The annual picnic of the District of Columbia Congress of Parents and Teachers will be held on Tuesday at noon at the Reservoir Picnic Ground, Rock Creek Park, Sixteenth and Kennedy streets northwest. Members are asked to bring their own box lunches.

The State Board of Managers will meet on the picnic grounds at 11 a. m.

The board of managers of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers will meet in the District of Columbia, September 18-21, for its fall meeting.

At the post-convention board meeting of the national congress, an emblem in flag form was adopted, the design for which was submitted by the District of Columbia Congress of Parents and Teachers.

BUCHANAN.

The Buchanan Association held a picnic in Rock Creek Park. About 100 parents and children attended. There were races and games for children and adults. This event concluded the school year.

JEFFERSON.

A most successful lawn party was held on Tuesday evening, under the direction of the association, with Mrs. Carrie Jones as general chairman. A chicken salad supper was served from 4:30 to 7 p. m., under the supervision of Mrs. Julia Zimmerman.

Miss Anna Herron, teacher, Pierce School; Mrs. Jane Davis and Mrs. G. Leimbach were in charge of transportation and luncheon, assisted by Mrs. E. H. Griffith, Mrs. Thomas Reier and Mrs. Thomas Whinerey. Games were played and prizes awarded the winners.

The association will meet at the Kingsman School on Wednesday, at 2:30 p. m. Yearly reports will be given by the chairmen and officers for the ensuing year will be installed.

ELIOT.

The executive committee of the Eliot Junior High Association joined the teachers in their regular luncheon on Tuesday at 12 noon. A business meeting followed and plans were made for the June meeting, at which time the new officers will be installed by Mrs. L. B. Castell, first vice president, District of Columbia Congress of Parents and Teachers.

WHEATLEY.

Mrs. J. N. Saunders, State president, will install the officers of the Wheatley Association tomorrow in the school auditorium, after which there will be a garden pilgrimage and a tour of the school. Parent-Teacher officers are in charge of this activity.

The following members of the program committee met in the school library to prepare the program for the next term: Mrs. W. R. Rawlings (chairman), Mrs. A. T. Manning, Mrs. Nina Russell, Mrs. Helen Thomas, Mrs. S. Montgomery, Mrs. Robert Beard and Miss Florence Mortimer, principal.

The play "Modern Generation," written and directed by Miss S. Mellichampe, was given by Girl Scout Troop No. 57 in the school auditorium Thursday and Friday. Mr. J. K. Stacey, former educator on an Indian reservation, had charge of the Indian part of the play.

The Parent-Teacher home garden contest committee, at the suggestion of Miss Mortimer, principal, has decided to give as prizes to winners magazines pertaining to gardening.

Mrs. B. Kight, Mrs. H. Sengstack and Mrs. R. Hillsinger have assisted the teachers in weighing and measuring and examining the eyes of pupils this week.

Sixty-four boys participated in the city track meet Saturday, accompanied by their leader, Miss Mellichampe, and Parent-Teacher grade mothers.

The date of the farewell assembly at Wheatley will be announced later.

Daughters of Nile

Queen Roberta S. Fosse, of the Daughters of the Nile, Samia Temple, No. 51, who leaves for Portland, Oreg., for the supreme session of the Daughters of the Nile, will have with her as her companion Junior Past Queen Zell Weaver Oatley, who is also going to the convention.

The next stated meeting will be Wednesday, June 21, at 8 p. m., over the Park Savings Bank, Fourteenth and Kenyon streets northwest. Princess Jessie Watson will preside. Two activities are contemplated, one for July and one for August.

D. A. R.

The Harriett M. Lothrop Society, Children of the American Revolution held its last meeting of the year at the summer home of Annette Smith, Washington Grove, Md. A picnic lunch was served to 39 guests, under the large shade trees, on the lawn. The day was spent in games and hikes through the grove. The society was honored in having as its guest, Mrs. Hope Wagner, national registrar.

Daughters of Army

The Washington Chapter, of the Daughters of the United States Army, will meet for luncheon at 1 p. m. Tuesday, at the Brooke Farm Tea House, 6501 Brookeville road, Maryland. There will be a brief business meeting at 12:30.

BOOKS AND AUTHORS

By ELISABETH E. POE

LITERATURE now takes to the radio as a new medium for disseminating its publicity wares. The New York Literary Association has started the vogue which has been under way in England for some time. Over there they put noted authors on the air from time to time. There is a certain element of danger in this proceeding, however. Not every author possesses a "radio voice" and in that respect silence may add enchantment to his or her fame. A split infinitive, too, may escape critical notice in a book, but there will be some one to make note of it on the radio, due to the concentration of the unseen audience's attention.

Americans bored with the reiteration of the misleading term "best seller" will join wholeheartedly in the campaign begun by J. B. Priestly to clarify the term. The English novelist, whose own writings have an amazing vogue, contends that the phrase should be used in its original sense only, meaning that a book has had a tremendous sale, and not imply that the phenomena was because of its inherent virtues. As Mr. Priestley wrote there is is no way of writing like a best seller. Silly tales have been best sellers while some of the finest productions of the moment have failed to reach the goal much to be desired for its financial benefits, at least.

The real best seller is the Bible, as every publisher knows. Running as a close second to the Bible, in England, at least, are Spurgeon's Sermons, which have reached the amazing total of 3,000,000 volumes in the last 20 years, while Sankey's "Sacred Songs and Solos" have passed the 70,000,000 mark in its various editions since it first appeared in 1873. Such records as these put the modern best seller to shame.

Dying in his sixty-fourth year Arnold Bennett brought down the average longevity of English novelists somewhat. It is interesting to note that this was set very high by Hardy and Meredith, and Hall Caine died at the age of 78. Further back, the average fails considerably, for Dickens died in his fifty-eighth year, Thackeray at 52, Scott at 60 and George Eliot at 61. Charles Kingsley was only 55, Anthony Trollope, 67, and Charles Reade just failed to reach 70 years. One of the longest lives in English literary history of the mid-Victorian period was Charlotte Yonge, who died in her seventy-eighth year, but Mrs. Gaskell died at 55.

Age Not Characterized By Great Poets.

"Where are the poets of yesteryear," one is brought to inquire by the slim batch of poetic volumes which arrives on the average reviewer's desk. It is very evident, too sadly evident, that, in a year when publishers in common with other business men are feeling the shock of the depression and other financial unrest, they should be chary of printing poetry, the drug on the publishers' market, even in the best of years.

Perhaps some of the fault may be found in the spirit of the poets. They have lost the divine urge to starve in a garret in the desire for the fleshpots of royalties.

Real poetry has never come to life when composed with an eye to the purse. It just can not be done. In Valhalla there are scores of witnesses to this fact. Poe was not the only one who starved for the sake of his high art. Can you picture a twentieth century poet going without regular meals for the sake of writing a sonnet?

Yet it is the spirit of poesy which is so lacking in our modern life. Why it is, is hard to see with the rhythm of modern life throbbing in the ears of would be poets. There are novel topics for poetic flights available on all sides. The new domain of the air, for instance, is in itself material for an epic that might have tempted a Virgil, a Homer, a Milton or a Shakespeare to poetic creation. Has this been accomplished? Oh, no! Even Lindbergh's flight did not bring about this much to be desired result.

Yet never was there a more poetic combination. All the elements for a great poem were there, waiting for the hand of a master poet. Alas, that no poet worthy of the name knew the formula of putting them together. The age of the spirit, or of the air, if you like the term better, finds itself without a prophet.

Lawrence Lee's Poetry Reviewed by Prof. Maynard.

The Washington Post is privileged to present today a review by Theodore Maynard, associate professor of English, Georgetown University, on "Summer Goes On," by Lawrence Lee (Charles Scribner's Sons, New York). Prof. Maynard, who is himself an author of considerable note, writes of Mr. Lee's new book as follows:

"It is very much to Lawrence Lee's credit that he has understood so well the nature of his talent and that he is content to be a lyric poet. Many who have attempted grandeur have been merely grandiose. Many poems that were in the major classification of poetry because of their scope and intention have been very bad poems, which the world very willingly has allowed to perish. Only perfection, upon whatever scale it is achieved, can endure. And perfection is most frequently reached in the lyric flight.

"Mr. Lee has the very commendable quality of being always entirely lucid, and his lucidity is always musical. There are many poets now writing, and who enjoy a great reputation, whose vogue rests largely upon the fact that they can not be understood very easily and who, one often suspects, take refuge in unintelligibility. Here is something quite different. These poems, though often subtle in feeling and thought, are crystalline. Wisdom is no doubt a greater thing than wit; but we can be mistaken about wisdom; about wit, never. And there can be no mistake about these poems.

"I do not say that Mr. Lee is a great poet, but he is a good poet, knowing always what it is he wants to say or to suggest, and always contriving what he wants. That is the impression of delicate beauty, which, despite its delicacy, is of normal human interest.

Great moons, the smell of April in the air;
A far-off lilt of music in the night.

"While there are hints of Masefield, Edward Thomas, Oliver Gogarty and Ralph Hodgson in some of these poems, one can never feel that there is imitation. The movement of the music is always Lawrence Lee's. Even when in 'The Fox Hunt' he images God as a fox pursued by the soul (which is the converse of Francis Thompson's 'Hound of Heaven') there is no faintest suggestion of Thompson's manner. Indeed, the idea of the poem is more closely paralleled in one by the Spanish mystic, St. John of the Cross: and I very much doubt whether Mr. Lee has so much as heard of him. Entirely his own is such a charming piece of decoration as 'Helen's Three Daughters' and the fine sonnet 'To a Native State.' This I believe, is Alabama; but since Mr. Lee is now living in Virginia, at whose State university he is teaching, Virginians might with justice appropriate it.

"This and 'For a Poet Growing Old,' and a series of five sonnets entitled 'The Letters,' show how dexterously Mr. Lee can manage the form even though he attempts a compromise between the strict Italian and the Shakespearean patterns; and 'Epitaph' and 'This Was Her Country,' show how good a lyricist he is. But the crown of the collection is the long title poem. In it, using blank verse, molded very adroitly into eight-line stanzas, a story is told of an idyllic love. Though I am a little disturbed by the voluntary separation of the lovers, who fear to tarnish their experience by the daily discipline of marriage, I can have nothing but praise for the loveliness of the pictures presented to us of 'the slow green counties of the South' and for the poem's enchanting atmosphere. The reading of it is something not too soon to be forgotten.

"Rarely have I come upon the first book of a poet which has struck me as being so full of promise. But the assurance of this quiet, musical verse is a very definite achievement as well. The individual note is clear, as is also the accomplished craftsmanship. While I do not expect that Mr. Lee will ever be a prolific writer, I shall look forward to all that he writes, and shall count upon his steady growth. On the strength of what he has given us here, he must be hailed as one of those rare people who really know how to sing."

It was Arnold Bennett who suggested that if one entered a street car and listened even casually to the scraps of conversation about him that he would find romance, tragedy and the gamut of human emotions expressed about him. Since his death and the preparation for release of his Journal the fact that he was a keen observer of humanity has become even more apparent.

Arnold Bennett's Journal Entertaining and Informing.

In "The Journal of Arnold Bennett," published by the Viking Press, New York, we find more evidences of the man of the world as well as of an outstanding literary figure.

The years covered in the Journal were from 1921 to 1928 and they are a record of the successful years. The close friendship that Mr. Bennett had with his contemporaries is shown in delightful extracts. For example, he wrote on January 4, 1924: "I hurried home and went on to a dinner at Sinclair Lewis, timed for 8 o'clock. It began at 8:30 long after the four guests had arrived. I did not get enough to eat. The talk at the end of the dinner went to old C. P. R. days and the careers of the famous Van Horne and Jim Hill. Lewis thought of it as an idea for a novel; what I should say it was. Lewis has a habit of breaking into a discussion with long pieces of imaginary conversation between imaginary or real people of the place and period under discussion. Goodish, but too long, with accents, manner and all complete. He will do this in any discussion; he will drag in a performance, usually full of oaths and blasphemy. Lewis soon began to call me 'Arnold' and once begun, he called me 'Arnold' about 100 times. He has things to learn, but I like him. He showed me the first typescript of his new novel —all blue and red with millions of alterations—a terrible sight."

Washington, which recently enjoyed Noel Coward's play, "A Design for Living," will be interested in this extract:

"Noel Coward came for tea. Noel was very bright and good and sensible and talked much sagacity to Dorothy. He told me he had started a novel and written 25,000 words, but had destroyed it because it was done too hastily and carelessly. He said he had to write a play quickly and that he wrote 'Hay Fever' in three days, but he had now found that this wouldn't do in a novel. So he was going to start again."

Bennett lived such a crowded life that one wonders after reading his Journal how he ever had time to sit down and achieve so much in a literary way. The Journal is full of raisins and plums in the form of famous folk and it makes mighty rich reading for anybody.

Capitol Hill Club

A special meeting of the Capitol Hill History Club was called by the president, Mrs. Daniel S. Shook, in the parlors of the Columbia Heights Christian Church, at 11 o'clock, Tuesday, where brief memorial services were held in memory of Mrs. Tamar F. Rorke, a past president, who passed away Friday, June 2, at Garfield Hospital.

As a tribute of respect to the memory of Mrs. Rorke, the annual June luncheon of the club, which was to have been held at the Collingwood Tea House, on the Mount Vernon boulevard, Wednesday, June 14, was postponed until a later date.

Mrs. Jason Waterman and Mrs. L. B. Stine were appointed by the president to draft suitable resolutions to be presented to the club at the next meeting. Mrs. Rorke, who had been active in club work for many years, joined the Capitol Hill History Club in 1908, and served the club as secretary and vice president before her election to the office of president in 1913. She served as treasurer of the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs during 1924-28, and as auditor from 1929 to 1932, and at the time of her death was serving as treasurer of the D. C. Federation Club House Corporation and as treasurer of the History Club. She was also an active member of the D. C. Auxiliary to the Woman's National Sabbath Alliance and the Single Tax Club. Funeral services were held at Hines' Funeral Home, 2901 Fourteenth street, Tuesday, the Rev. Russell Clinchy, pastor of Mount Pleasant Congregational Church, officiating. Interment was in Soldiers' Home Cemetery.

The services were attended by Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, president of the D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. Virginia White Speel, Mrs. John W. Frizzell, Mrs. Ellis Logan and Mrs. Edgar B. Meritt, past presidents, and many friends from the clubs affiliated with the District federation. The members of the Capitol Hill History Club were present in a body.

University Women

The summer program of social activities of the American Association of University Women is in full swing with the following features: Mondays, tea in the lounge from 4:30 p. m. to 5:30 p. m.; Wednesdays, morning bridge, followed by luncheon at 1 p. m.; Fridays, "club night," dinner at 6:30 p. m., followed by bridge.

On Thursday at 6:30 p. m., the final dinner-bridge of the junior group will be held, with Miss Maxine Girts as hostess, assisted by Mrs. Lydia Ramos and Miss Pauline Chobot.

Mrs. Dudley Willard will be the official hostess for the summer months for all activities at the clubhouse.

THOUGHTS ON A FEW ITEMS, PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE

By NELSON B. BELL

THE contemplation of Mr. Walt Disney's "Silly Symphony" in natural colors, "Three Little Pigs," at the Palace last week, stirred strangely conflicting emotions in the breast of one who is pretty thoroughly inured to the quaint vagaries of the theater.

By his willing surrender to the organization of "Mickey Mouse" clubs all over the face of the globe—and "Silly Symphonies" are almost automatically included in the "Mickey Mouse" category, since both, emanating from the same studio, also are contracted for and shown by the same exhibitors—Mr. Disney tacitly confesses that he believes these vastly popular short subjects carry a definite and inescapable appeal to the young.

The stories upon which they are founded, in fact, are more apt than not to be the nursery jingles of childhood—as in the case of the "Three Little Pigs," for example.

Yet in his treatment of his subjects and his willingness to lend them a purely adult sophistication, by the introduction of suggestive passages and slightly off-color incident, he betrays an inexplicable intentness upon making them primarily program features for the grown-ups.

This attempt to carry water on both shoulders is not, it seems to this department, the most sagacious thing that might be underaken. There is so much of the kid carried over into every adult that it seems unnecessary to trick out the innocuous fables of nursery days with smoking-car and behind-the-barn vulgarities.

For instance, this department was so profoundly impressed by the preponderant merits of "Three Little Pigs" that it went to see it twice. Its enthusiasm would have been considerably less impaired than it is, had the episode of the boiling cauldron and its resultant indelicacy been entirely omitted from a brief diversion of otherwise classic charm.

Mr. Disney should learn that there is still a wide and mature public that can find amusement elsewhere than in the grimy implications of the bawdy blackout.

WHILE this column lays claim to none of the dreary impulses that actuate the professional reformer, it nevertheless finds it possible to feel some elation over a reputed accretion of frankness that has of late made itself felt in the film industry.

Had a certain earlier picture of some note been the beneficiary of comparable honesty in the manner of its exploitation, that bizarre creation would not recently have been called upon to bear the stigma of a court decree proclaiming it unequivocally fraudulent.

Mr. Barnum may have been wholly correct in his conclusion that "the great American public loves to be fooled," but there have also been recent evidences that that same gullible public likewise sometimes deeply appreciates being told the plain, unadulterated and unvarnished truth.

These ruminations, of course, are prompted by the announcement that parts of "India Speaks," opening at RKO-Keith's next Friday—conspicuously in the minority, of course, these parts—are Hollywood made and do not purport to be actually any authentic reflection of Mother India, but merely a form of theatric embellishment of the factual narrative designed to give it added dramatic pungence.

If Walter Futter, the producer—famous also for his "Curiosities" series of short-reel releases—and Richard Halliburton, one of the aces among modern adventurers, who personally shot the pictures and supplies a running account of when, where, why and how they were made, have succeeded by the introduction of a little of the film capital's legerdemain in making "India Speaks" a better and more interesting entertainment than would otherwise be the case, the public will thank rather than condemn them for it. That is, so long as the public is taken into their confidence and forewarned of the "deception."

• • • •

AMONG the unusual sequences revealed for the first time in Mr. Halliburton's pictorial tour of the most mysterious of all countries is the "Horror Dance of Ram Gelong."

Whether this is one of the disclosures that has been accorded the advantage of slight studio embellishment is not divulged. If not, then it need only be borne in mind that truth still is stranger than fiction as often as not.

Climaxing the weird rituals of the Tibetan horror dance, according to Mr. Halliburton, a mystery white girl, worshipped as a deity by tens of thousands, is revealed as the Bride of Buddha and key figure in the most dreadful of known ceremonials.

It may be worth while to quote a brief description of this terrifying orgy that comes to hand from an authoritative, if not infallible, source. A portion of it is as follows:

"According to Halliburton, the monks prepare for the horror rites rigorously. A drug is believed to be the secret which enables them to dance for incredible lengths of time without stopping. Their conceptions of demons, expressed by fantastic masks which they wear, reveal imagination and real artistry. All the dances are based upon evil, as there is so little happiness in the Tibetan's life that he enjoys seeing the misery and trouble of others.

"Pilgrims arrive from all directions, in many kinds of conveyances, to take part in the repulsive celebration. They bring animals to be sacrificed and presents with which they hope to secure the favors of Buddha and the indulgence of the demons. Departing, surfeited with horror, most of them are empty handed and the priests rich."

Even if this should prove to be one of Hollywood's coy conceptions,

Big, New Musical Reaches Capital With Great Cast

"Gold Diggers of 1933," Warner Bros.' mammoth dramatic and musical spectacle, which is hailed as the superior of "42d Street," is the attraction at Warner Bros.' Earle Theater. The stage show costars William Demarest, "Vanities" comedian, and Aileen Stanley, radio and musical comedy personality.

A fitting sequel to the sensationally popular picture, "42d Street," which started new styles in screen fare, "Gold Diggers of 1933," according to those who have seen it, excels its great predecessor in beauty, in catchy tunes and "whistling" music, in comedy and in its story values. Its list of stars is even more imposing; its songs more appealing. The names of Joan Blondell, Ruby Keeler, Dick Powell, Aline MacMahon, Guy Kibbee, Ginger Rogers and Ned Sparks head the superlative cast. There are 300 gorgeous girls in the chorus.

"Gold Diggers of 1933" is a "back-of-the-back-stage" story, a dramatic and amusing insight into the lives and loves of the people primarily responsible for the staging of a great New York show. Its story is climaxed by a triumphant and spectacular show in which the choruses of 300 picked beauties are lavishly displayed in dance numbers said to be unequaled in the history of stage or screen.

The stage portion of the bill is a worthy companion attraction to the picture. It costars William Demarest, comedian star of Earl Carroll's "Vanities," who brings a new type of fun to vaudeville, and Aileen Stanley, musical comedy and radio star in a program of joy songs. Other acts are the Three Swifts and Jay Seller and Francis Wills in "The Broadwayites."

A West Coast editor has just seen Ruby Keeler on the screen for the first time. He returned to his office full of enthusiasm and strange assignments.

"She's the kind of girl we've been crying into our near-beer about for years," he announced to a startled but respectful staff. "We've been saying there weren't any more girls like that. Well, there's Ruby Keeler. Sweet and old-fashioned. I bet she can blush.

"Go out there," waving his hand in the general direction of Warner Bros.' studio, "go out there and talk to Ruby. See if she'll blush for you."

The reporter found Miss Keeler on the rehearsal stage, tired but happy at work on her second picture, "Gold Diggers of 1933." Ruby and the "ladies of the ensemble" had been working for days on dance routines, specialties and the intricate steps and figures designed by Dance Director Busby Berkeley for the new picture.

"I've been dancing," she said unnecessarily. "How do you do?"

"And we've been watching," said this reporter. "How are you?"

"I'm scared," said Ruby, settling into the chair a thoughtful property boy shoved toward her at the moment. "Not as scared as I was at first—but still scared. And tired.

"You see, I hardly ever visited Al at the studio and I didn't really know a thing about it when I came out to make '42nd Street.' They had to show me everything. I was dreadfully worried about it all for a while. I like it all now except getting up mornings. I just can't get used to waking up early. Hollywood is such an early riser. That's why I'm so tired today. It's hard work. Good-by, there's Mr. Berkeley calling me."

No Formula Exists For Manufacturing Surefire Film Hit

There is absolutely no formula for making a successful motion picture, according to the opinion shared by Louis Gasnier and Max Marcin, codirectors of "Gambling Ship," featuring Cary Grant and Benita Hume.

"Making pictures is unlike the manufacturing business," Gasnier declares. "One can't pour just so much love interest, a prescribed dash of mystery, a goodly measure of laughs, and the standard amount of plot into a mold and be certain that it is going to come out according to expectations."

"After reviewing the experience I have had with screen productions I, for one, can't think of any kind of formula that makes a successful motion picture," Marcin agrees with his coworker. "My experience has given me an intuitive sense of whether or not a production is to be a successful one, but I can not reduce this sense to words and figures."

Gasnier and Marcin also agree in declaring that there is no such thing as "trend of public taste." They point out that great stories which were popular a hundred years ago still appeal to people as much as when they were written. For, while material things have changed amazingly, human nature has remained untouched.

"Gambling Ship," by the way, marks the fourth production on which Gasnier and Marcin have comprised a successful codirectorial team.

A Satirical Screen Comedy and Return Of Famous Psychic

With Gene Dennis, youthful feminine psychic who had been truly amazing Washington, playing a return engagement at RKO-Keith's as a stage attraction, and "Professional Sweetheart" being the screen offering, the Fifteenth street theater is currently presenting a widely diversified program that is attracting much interest.

Miss Dennis completed a highly successful two-week stay at Keith's just a week ago. Contracts previously entered into carried her to Baltimore for a week, with the local management bringing her back as soon as these obligations were satisfied.

"Professional Sweetheart" is an hour's entertainment constituting a grand time at the expense of the business of broadcasting. The story tells of "the purity girl" on the air, whose contract stipulates that she must live up to that name in her private life. Like all young ladies, when she was told she couldn't, that was just the time she wanted to so very badly!

Supplementary features include another in the series of clever Masquers comedies, a "Strange as It Seems," by the local artist, John Hix, an animated cartoon and Pathe News.

Much has already been written of Gene Dennis. Never having appeared previously in Washington, this gifted and youthful psychic came to Washington three weeks ago and created such a vast amount of interest as to make a return engagement absolutely imperative—the current week making the third for Miss Dennis, a record any one could be proud of.

Satire, farce, slapstick, subtlety and every other imaginable phase of comedy are portrayed by 12 masterly comedians in a screen treatment of radio broadcasting in "Professional Sweetheart."

Gregory Ratoff is Ipswich, the Wash Cloth King. He showed his mettle as a comedian in "What Price Hollywood?" and "Once in a Lifetime." Two other reigning comedy favorites, ZaSu Pitts and Lucien Littlefield, are responsible for additional laughs in featured roles as a sob sister and radio announcer, respectively.

The remaining seven comedians are Allen Jenkins and Frank McHugh—of the stage's "Burlesque," "Excess Baggage," "Front Page" and "Blessed Event" and the screen's "Lawyer Man," "Forty-second Street," "Millie," "Crowd Roars," "Life Begins"—now seen in representative roles as press agents; Edgar Kennedy and Franklin Pangborn, formerly together in several two-reelers, as an exasperated radio sponsor and an esthetic "personality creator." Betty Furness' youthful humor, Sterling Holloway's "dead pan" antics and Frank Darien's boisterous comedy complete the film's featured performances.

All Mediums Alike To Pair of Comics

For the comedian dependent on spoken humor there is no difference between screen, stage and radio, George Burns, of Burns and Allen fame, declared recently. All of the hard work comes beforehand in originating "gags." Burns and Gracie Allen journeyed to Hollywood to work in "International House" and "College Humor" for Paramount.

Once the comedy is written, Burns said, the three mediums are equally easy, the only difference being that in vaudeville the "gags" can be repeated time after time, while on the screen and air each is used only once by the originators. "And once each time by the imitators," Burns said.

A Brilliant Novel Translated Into a Vivid Screen Play

Max Miller's famous book, "I Cover the Waterfront," which caught the public fancy as soon as it was off the presses, is the attraction now on view at Warner Bros.' Metropolitan Theater.

"I Cover the Waterfront" was an instantaneous hit as a novel. It pictures the inside story of the waterfront, its dramas, its loves, its hates and the constant struggle among all types of people who make their living there.

James Cruze, who created, among others, "The Covered Wagon" and "Old Ironsides," directed the picture.

The program is completed by short subjects, including the latest issue of the Paramount Sound News.

And who was the first talking-picture star?

No, you're mistaken; it wasn't Al Jolson, or anybody else connected with the revolutionizing of the screen seven years ago.

To the late Ernest Torrence, veteran character actor of the pictures and the stage, belonged the honor.

And recently, while playing in "I Cover the Waterfront," his last picture, Torrence celebrated the twentieth anniversary of his debut as a talking-picture star.

That's correct; twenty years ago was when he had the distinction of being the first actor in the world to star in a screen "talkie."

On the set at the United Artists' studios in Hollywood, where he was creating the role of Eli Kirk, shark killer and smuggler of Chinese, in the screen story based on Max Miller's best-selling book, Torrence took time off to celebrate the anniversary by telling about the very first talking picture.

According to Torrence, the picture, a short-reeler, was made in a tent at the East Orange (N. J.) laboratories of the late Thomas A. Edison.

Edison had perfected the "cameraphone," a talking picture device consisting of a motion picture camera connected by wires, belts and pulleys to a recording phonograph. The horn of the phonograph was directly over the set, its bell pointed at the players, a forerunner of the microphone of today.

While the cameraman turned the crank of his machine, he simultaneously operated the recording phonograph.

Barring a few slips, the synchronization was fairly good, according to Torrence, who sang the leading role in the prison scene from the opera "Faust."

American Life, It Seems, Completes An Epochal Cycle

Amercian life has completed a full cycle between 1904 and 1933—the span of years covered in the Paramount picturization of Theodore Dreiser's "Jennie Gerhardt," according to B. P. Schulberg, its producer.

Women's fashions of that day are now coming back—in a much less exaggerated form, it is true.

A Roosevelt is President now, as then.

Beer is a national beverage, as it was at the start of the century.

Bicycles again are in style.

Newspapers are devoting much space to discussion of silver, 16 to 1.

The Sino-Japanese war in Manchuria was matched by the Russo-Japanese war a quarter of a century ago.

And the public mind is getting back to the unsophisticated simplicity of those earlier days, as is demonstrated by its taste in literature, art and motion pictures, Schulberg maintains.

Lee Tracy Filmed, Benny Rubin Here In Person at Fox

The Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer version of "The Nuisance," starring Lee Tracy, a thrilling drama of disputes between small-time and corporation lawyers, is the screen attraction at Loew's Fox this week. On the stage is that famous musical comedy star, Benny Rubin.

"The Nuisance" is based on the original story by Chandler Sprague and Howard Emmett Rogers and is the story of a lawyer whose principal business is chasing ambulances and working up faked accident injuries and lawsuits. He is finally tripped up when he falls in love with the blonde detective sent to ensnare him. The picture gives Tracy a more dynamic role than he has ever had before and thrills and mystery vie with screaming comedy situations. The film was under the direction of Jack Conway, of "Hell Below" fame.

Madge Evans is the heroine and Frank Morgan, Charles Butterworth, Virginia Cherrill, David Landau, Greta Meyers, Herman Bing, Samuel Hinds and Syd Saylor have the chief supporting roles. The famous musical comedy star, Benny Rubin, heads the stage presentation in "English That's Different." Benny has been convulsing audiences throughout the country for the last ten years in both musical comedy and vaudeville.

Next comes Buster Shaver with Olive and George in a singing and dancing act entitled "Brief Moments;" the three Samuels brothers in "Dance-Acrocy," a comedy dialogue, singing and dancing routine, and, lastly, John and Mary Mason, the skating marvels, in "Whirls and Twirls."

Phil Lampkin directing another of his famous overtures and the Fox Movietone News complete the bill.

Benny Rubin is married to Mary O'Brien. They're one of the few "Abie's Irish Rose" combinations of the show business. They have been married long enough for Miss O'Brien to be able to speak Jewish. They have a daughter, Lila age 3.

Benny was born in Boston in February, 1899. There are eight boys in the family, no girls. He was born next to the church in which Paul Revere's signal lantern was hung. He insists that his real name is Benjamin Rubin.

He never was graduated from public school. At the age of 10 he was expelled from school. It was then that he decided to step out on his own. He ran away from home. From that time on until he got steady work in the show business, he had numerous odd jobs. He was a printer's devil, sold newspapers and shined shoes, was an errand boy, a house painter, and, lastly, a traveling salesman selling rubber heels. It was while he was a traveling salesman that he heard many of the stories he is still telling.

His first theatrical appearance was made when he was 11 years old at an amateur night in Westbrook, Me. He was razzed off the stage. Another kid, also trying on the same bill, and who also was razzed off the stage, was Fred Allen.

Vacation Days for Picture Stars Are Not Put to Waste

With summer approaching and breathing spaces between pictures coming at shorter and faster intervals because of increased production, Fox stars take the opportunity of running off for short vacation jaunts whenever possible. At present every Fox player with a moment to spare rushes into the country "away from it all" until called for his next picture.

Buddy Rogers, having completed his work opposite Marian Nixon in "Five Cents a Glass," left for Chicago with James Dunn, who finished "Arizona to Broadway," opposite Joan Bennett. Rogers is to broadcast from that place and Jimmy will make a series of personal appearances before working in "Sally and Jimmy," when Sally Eilers returns from abroad.

Lilian Harvey has just returned from a ten-day jaunt to California. Her next production is to be "My Weakness," which is now in the throes of preparation.

George O'Brien, when he completes his triumvirate of Zane Grey stories, plans a trip to the Argentine.

And Spencer Tracy will travel shortly to Yosemite for a pleasure trip with Mrs. Tracy.

Artist.

Gary Cooper went to Los Angeles to become a commercial artist and took up acting when no drawing jobs presented themselves.

Would Be Hamlet.

Fredric March, in "The Eagle and the Hawk," wants to play Hamlet in the movies.

Famous Stage Play Enlists Five Stars In Its Newer Form

An exceptionally strong cast was assembled by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for its film version of the Rachel Crothers stage success, "When Ladies Meet," now playing at Loew's Palace Theater.

Ann Harding and Robert Montgomery have in this picture their first costarring roles.

"When Ladies Meet" is the revelation of what would happen when the wife of a philandering husband meets the woman he has been lavishing his attentions on. The plot is an original one because of the fact that its situations are so arranged that neither of the women is aware of the other's identity.

Frank Morgan plays the part of the philandering husband. Miss Harding is the understanding and modern wife. Robert Montgomery plays the role of a front page newspaperman deeply in love with Myrna Loy, the novelist, who tries to live the life of her heroine.

The settings range from a boathouse on the Hudson River to a beautifully remodeled farmhouse in Connecticut.

The picture was directed with a fine understanding of the subtle qualities of the play by Harry Beaumont. He has obtained the utmost in performance and justified the employment of such stellar names and personages in the cast.

The Metrotone News, selected short subjects and comedies complete the bill. The feature is easily among the smartest and most entertaining the screen has enjoyed in many months.

An entirely new departure in motion-picture settings is represented in the unique backgrounds for "When Ladies Meet."

Most interesting in the quaint settings is the country home, rebuilt from an old stable, in which much of the action takes place. While the sets were built for motion-picture purposes only, they were practical in every detail and could be lived in.

Finishes Script.

Alice D. G. Miller ended her one-picture contract last week when she completed the screen play for her original story, "Disgraced," in which Helen Twelvetrees begin work immediately. Ruth Ridenour, New York magazine and newspaper feature writer, has been assigned to the Paramount writing staff in Miss Miller's place to work on an adaptation of "All of Me," slated for George Raft and Carole Lombard.

A Fortune Teller Is Stood on Spot In Columbia Film

Fortune-telling, in numerous forms and under various guises, is one of the oldest methods of capitalizing on human credulity and fear known to mankind, and at the same time one of the newest.

In the "Mind Reader," starting tomorrow at Loew's Columbia Theater, Warren William takes the role of a magician, a blustering but likable rascal. He starts life as a "barker" in a cheap barnstorming carnival and finally blossoms out as "Chandra, the Great."

He winds up as a home-wrecker, by telling wives their husbands' secret love affairs. Not only does he hoodwink society but the sweet girl he marries.

Constance Cummings gives a delightful performance as his young wife. Allen Jenkins plays the role of Chandra's tough, world-wise confederate and is a riot of fun.

Others in the cast include Donald Dillaway, Natalie Moorhead, Clara Blandick, Mayo Methot, Harry Beresford, Clarence Muse, Harry Stubbs, Robert Greig, Earle Foxe and Ruthelma Stevens.

The "Mind Reader" takes the spectator behind the scenes of the fortune-telling business in its most picturesque phases. Several unexpected twists in the story are calculated to keep you on the edge of your seat.

The screen play was directed by Roy Del Ruth, based on the stage production by Vivian Cosby.

The Paramount News, selected short subjects and comedies complete a thrilling bill.

Madeline Hurlock Scorns New Career

Madeline Hurlock, former screen star and one of the most "vampish" of film vamps, is back in Hollywood after an absence of six years, but she will make no effort to resume her career, she said.

She accompanied her husband, Marc Connelly, to Hollywood. Connelly, the author of the Pulitzer prize play, "The Green Pastures," has signed a contract with Paramount to write a screen story for Dorothea Wieck.

"Lysistrata."

Lily Pons to Sing In Revival of One Of Patti's Operas

Announcement is made by General Manager Gatti-Casazza of the Metropolitan Opera that Lily Pons, dainty but dynamic coloratura soprano, who will be heard here in concert next season as the opening attraction of Mrs. Dorothy Hodgkin Dorsey's Tuesday afternoon concert series at Constitution Hall, will be presented at the Metropolitan next season in a new opera production, "Linda di Chamounix," a little-known opera by Donizetti.

For some 40-odd years, this melodious opera score has been gathering dust on the library shelves, its music locked in silence. If one excepts the famous cavatina of the first act, "O luce di quest' anima," it is doubtful if the opera has been heard half a dozen times on this side of the Atlantic since the days of Adelina Patti.

The libretto of "Linda" is taken from an old French play called "La Grace de Dieu." The action takes place during the reign of Louis XV, circa 1760, in a little village in the Valley of Chamounix, at the foot of the French Alps. Linda, its chief character, is the child of poor parents and her beauty attracts the rich Marquis of Boisfleury, but she loves Charles, an itinerant painter, whom she follows to Paris, walking all the way.

When she finally locates Charles, she discovers he is the nephew of the Marquis and they are happy together until Charles' parents insist he must renounce Linda.

When her own father arrives and denounces her, her troubles overcome her and she loses her mind. Taken back to her village home, Charles follows her and in time her reason is restored and everything ends happily for the lovers.

Such is the story of "Linda di Chamounix," which had its first production in Vienna in 1842.

In the opinion of competent critics, Pons should make an ideal Linda, youthful, fragile and altogether lovely. It is also possible that Miss Pons may add an aria from "Linda" when she appears here late next November for her only concert appearance of the 1933-34 season.

AT THE PLAY IN NEW YORK

By MARK BARRON.

NEW YORK, June 10 (A.P.).—While Broadway slumbered in a summer siesta, one of the theater's more significant political evenings came this week in a stock playhouse at White Plains, just 45 minutes from Manhattan.

The occasion was the premier American performance of Emil Ludwig's first play, "Peace Palace." It is to be presented by the Theater Guild in New York this fall.

Rather than a play, "Peace Palace" is a dramatization of what actually took place at the Versailles peace conference in 1919. Ludwig, having won world-wide recognition as a historian, appears to have hewed close to the facts in his picture of Wilson, Lloyd George, Clemenceau and other allied diplomats as they drew up the final terms that marked the end of the World War.

THE author's characterizations of the triumvirate that ruled the conference are described by those who knew them intimately as amazingly accurate. Ludwig even brings out such minor points as Wilson's love for his portable typewriter, Clemenceau's breakfasts of macaroni and cognac and Lloyd George's habit of showing every one a snapshot of his children. The audience is made to realize that these men, so long mystic figures in front page headlines, were after all, only human beings.

But his ideals are defeated in the narrative by the gruff sarcasm and militant nationalism of Clemenceau; by Lloyd George's determination that England shall not sacrifice its supremacy on the seas in an experiment for permanent peace; by the sundry other nations' demands that they share in the spoils of war.

At first they fear Wilson, fear his power to cut them off from further American credits, but when they learn that he has lost his power at home they roughly push him aside and dictate their own terms of peace.

LUDWIG has written his play with a keen wit, a human quality. He has Clemenceau say: "I do not hate the Germans. It is simply that their virtues annoy me." In retorting to Wilson and Lloyd George, he says: "We are trying to be saved by a pseudo Messiah on one hand and a pseudo Cromwell on the other."

Indeed, although he is a German himself, Ludwig has Clemenceau emerge as the dominant figure of the conference, the one man who knew exactly what he wanted and did not fear to reach for it. As played by Claude Rains, Clemenceau is an extraordinarily thrilling performance.

Herbert Biberman, too, has wrought an excellent job of direction.

THOUGHTS ON A FEW ITEMS

it no doubt would turn out, too, that Mack Sennett had nothing to do with it!

IMMEDIATELY to hand, however, are gayer considerations to occupy contemplative Sabbath interests.

They may be succinctly summed up in such titles as "Gold Diggers of 1933," "When Ladies Meet," "I Cover the Water Front," "Professional Sweetheart," "The Nuisance" and "The Mind Reader."

These, as you are by this time well aware—or else, well, ware were you?—are the celluloid temptations dangled before Washington's avaricious eyes by the entrepreneurs intent upon Max Baering the summer slump of solemn song and lugubrious legend. It is difficult to make a blunder of selection among them.

It is, as has already been suggested in other less Sabbatical columns, a week of superlative enjoyment for the judicious amusement-seeker—especially for the month of June and such temperatures as have ushered in this handsomest of the summertime's hot and humid field days of Hymen.

COME Wednesday, Miss Gene Dennis, who returns this week to RKO-Keith's to continue the remarkable dissemination of her strange divinations, will have a competitive render of the veil in the person of Miss Jane Morley, a less known but reputedly no less richly endowed psychic, who will add her revelations to the sum total of Washington's knowledge of its past, present and future, under slightly different auspices, but by seemingly identical means and with apparently comparable accuracy.

If there is anything one doesn't know, now would seem to be the time to find out what it is. Within discreet limitations, of course!

Junior Farm Group To Enjoy a Frolic At Glen Echo Park

The charm of Glen Echo lies not alone in its old stand-by amusements, but in the fact that thousands of dollars are expended every year for improvements and additions.

Last year it was the Crystal Pool, which is now in its glory; this year it is the new Spanish ballroom, another smash hit for the grown-ups, with well regulated dancing and fine music, under the direction of Dave McWilliams, every evening from 8:30 until 11:30, except Sunday.

Sunday is the banner day for picnic parties. Every accommodation is extended to them, and the kids love this "base of operations" in the park, so they can dash off between eats and enjoy such thrills as the coaster dips, dodgem rides, speedy airplane swings, merry midway or be astride the steeds on the carrousel.

Its a dull day, indeed, when some special group from Washington, or out of town, is not attending Glen Echo Park in a body. Monday evening, June 12, at 7:30 p. m., the Maryland resort will play host to the Future Farmers of America, a 4-year-old organization of boys, which already has 65,000 members.

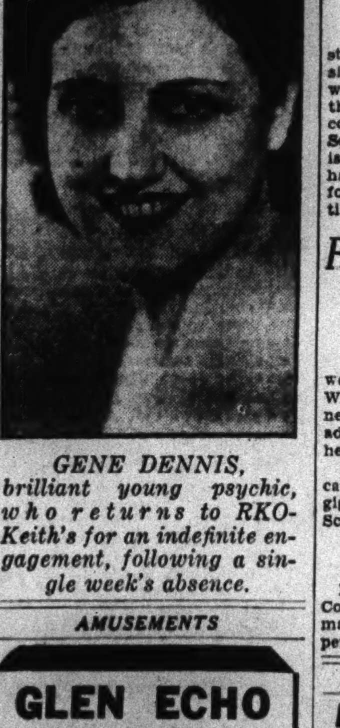
Glen Echo Park is one of their stops on their visit East, made possible by A. C. Case, chairman of the Greater National Capital committee, and L. B. Schloss, director of the park.

Second Term Grads In Four Offerings On National Stage

The second-term students of the Clifford Brooke Academy of Stage Training in the Dramatic Arts will be seen at the National Theater tonight in four plays, the performance marking the close of the second term of the academy.

The program is made up of the following offerings: The trial scene from "The Merchant of Venice," by William Shakespeare; a one-act play entitled "Waterloo," by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle; a travesty in one act, "The Sweet Elysium Club," by Alice E. Ives, and a farce in one act, "The Best Cure," by Gertrude E. Jennings.

The performance is directed by Clifford Brooke, assisted by Maurice Greet. Many well-known local Thespians will appear, including a number who were seen during the recent spring season of the National Theater Players.



GENE DENNIS, brilliant young psychic, who returns to RKO-Keith's for an indefinite engagement, following a single week's absence.

AILEEN STANLEY, popular stage and radio singer, who returns to the Capital this week to headline the vaudeville bill on the stage of the Earle.

Summer Concerts For Nat. Symphony In Contemplation

A series of concerts by the National Symphony Orchestra for the summer season of 1934 has been suggested by persons interested in the orchestra and in musical affairs of the Capital.

Concerning the project, C. C. Cappel, manager of the orchestra, has this to say: "Many persons have expressed regret that the National Symphony's season closes with the coming of hot weather, and several have presented suggestions for a series of summer concerts for Washington similar to the Lewisohn Stadium concerts by the new York Philharmonic and the Philadelphia Orchestra's summer concerts in Robin Hood Dell that have been so successful.

"Due to the fact that the orchestra's continuance here next season was not assured until very recently, we were unable to make definite arrangements for a series of concerts this summer. However, if the general public really wants summer concerts, an effort will be made to provide them during the summer of 1934."

The manager pointed out that Hans Kindler, the National Symphony's conductor, will conduct both the New York and Philadelphia concerts for a short time this summer. "This will afford him an excellent opportunity to study summer audiences and to acquire first-hand information as to the practicability of such a series in Washington," says Mr. Cappel.

"A series of summer concerts in the National Capital would have many advantages. In addition to providing good music throughout the hot months of the year, it would keep the personnel of the orchestra together and would doubtless prove an added attraction to the thousands of visitors who come to the city during vacation time."

When asked about the present summer activities of the orchestra personnel, Mr. Cappel said: "As you know, Hans Kindler is now in Europe, conducting and concertizing. His itinerary includes a visit with Arturo Toscanini at the latter's villa in Italy. In his travels, Dr. Kindler also is seeking new music to augment the already extensive music library of the National Symphony.

"Frank Gittelson, concertmaster, is continuing his teaching work at the Peabody Conservatory in Baltimore." Gittelson will be remembered as the soloist at the final concert in the Sunday series last season, when he played the Bruch concerto in G minor.

Louis Ferrara, assistant concert master, is now playing with one of the large orchestras in Atlantic City. He expects to play in the summer concerts of the Philadelphia Symphnoy Orchestra. Sigmund Ziebel, first violinist, has gone to New York for the summer to play with David Rubinoff's orchestra, on a commercial radio program.

The Washington String Quartet, composed of Milton Schwartz, Paul Brightenburg, George Wargo and Sidney Hamor, all important members of the National Symphony, will spend July and August at the summer home of Frank Frost at Woods Hole, Mass.

Garbo Has Preview Of Dietrich Film

Greta Garbo visited the Paramount studio last week for the first time since she has been in Hollywood. She was the guest of Rouben Mamoulian, the director, viewing his recently completed production, "The Song of Songs," starring Marlene Dietrich. It is reported that Garbo is eager to have Mamoulian as director in her forthcoming picture, "Queen Christina."

Raft's Dancing to Feature New Film

George Raft's dancing ability, which won him the praise of the Prince of Wales, will be demonstrated in his new picture, "Midnight Club," an adaptation of an E. Phillips Oppenheim story.

Raft will have the role of an American customs detective who solves a gigantic jewel-smuggling plot for Scotland Yard.

Dorothea Wieck, Paramount's new Continental star, speaks French, German and Italian as well as almost perfect English.

Holiday House Is Dedicated At Ceremony

150 of Girls' Friendly Society Attend Last Party of Year.

Saturday, June 3, the dedication and first lighting of the new out-of-doors open fireplace at Holiday House was attended by about 150 members and associates, this being the closing party for the members for the year. Mrs. Alex. Steuart lighted the fire and Mrs. Edward B. Meigs told the legend of the first lighting of the fires, emphasizing the bringing of good luck and good times. Several bridge parties and faculty luncheons were given at Holiday House during the week, making a busy week for the house.

Monday night at Epiphany Parish Hall an operetta in two acts, "Sleeping Beauty," was presented by the candidates of Epiphany Chapel and Epiphany Church branches. The music and lyrics were by Mrs. A. H. Umholtz, president of Epiphany Girls' Friendly Society Glee Club. The cast of characters included Sarah Blakely, Alice Cogwell, Rosa May Carroll, Audrey Deffan, Amelia Steuart, Barbara Switzer, Aubyne Umholtz, Edith C.Cogswell, Margaret Allison, Mary M. Carroll, Lora Wills and others. Several specialty dances were given before and between acts and the children's orchestra, accompanied by Miss Mayo, was exceptionally good.

The last Monday night meeting of Epiphany Branch will be held tomorrow. Frederick Snyder will talk on current events and the annual election of branch officers will be held. On Saturday afternoon the annual branch party, with Mrs. Grace Berry, branch president, will be held at the home of Mrs. Charles W. Richardson, 2901 Grant road northwest. Supper will be served about 6 o'clock.

The comedy, "Good Evening, Clarice," given by St. James' Branch, Bowie, Md., was such a success several requests for it to be repeated were made, and it was given the second time Tuesday, with the following cast: Wilton Smith, Eleanor Seitz, William Ewton, Louise Smith, Mary Kuhl, Marjorie Zug, Genevieve Everett, Carroll Mulliken, Ellis C. Day, Milton Waters, Ruth V. Truitt. This is a three-act comedy, produced by special arrangement with the Walter H. Baker Co., Boston, Mass., and directed by Miss A. Marjorie Zug, president of the branch.

Big Year Planned For Kamp Kahlert

Faced with the necessity of operating on a self-supporting basis this year because no Community Chest funds are provided for camp activities, Kamp Kahlert, the Y. W. C. A. playground on West River, is planning an unusually attractive program in the hope of obtaining campers to operate throughout the summer. The season for seniors opens July 1 and closes September 9, and for the juniors, July 3, closing September 11.

The camp offers swimming, boating, hiking, handcraft, nature study and all the other features of a high-class camp. It is well equipped with buildings and cabins and offers an ideal place to spend the summer months.

Miss M. Florence Dunlap is again director of Kamp Kahlert. She will have on her staff Mary W. Gwynn, program director; Mrs. Alice Sigworth Morse, in charge of dramatics and pageantry; Doris Tucker, in charge of clay modeling, sketching and assisting in arts and crafts; Amy Deerhoff, who will assist in dramatics and experiment in some creative dramatic work; Lois Spencer in charge of swimming; Eloise Lindsay who will direct in creative writing and assist in photography; Helen Middleton in charge of music; Catherine Tetlow in charge of arts and crafts; Frances Douglas, registrar and in charge of the office; Gussie Tabb, dietitian; Mary Allen Hood, bugler and editor of the Kamp Krier.

Child Health Camp Will Open June 23

A little village of brown canvass tent cottages with well-screened doors and wide windows has again been set up during the past week close to the shady grove of giant oaks on the hilltop at Fourteenth and Upshur streets northwest, in anticipation of the opening of the children's health camp of the Association for the Prevention of Tuberculosis. A crew of workmen has been on the job and expects to have the camp in good shape by the end of this week, well in advance of the opening date, Friday, June 23, according to the statement given out yesterday by Dr. William Charles White, president of the Tuberculosis Association.

Dr. White said the camp will by that date be fully equipped and in charge of a competent staff of health workers under the direction of a trained nurse. Already the list of children applying for admission to the camp is far in excess of the maximum capacity. Those most in need of the care will be selected. It is hoped that by another year a larger camp will be made available.

This summer health camp is made possible by the fact that thousands of people in Washington bought Christmas seals last December.

Memorial of Police To Be Held Today

Memorial services for deceased members of the Metropolitan Police Department will be held today at 7:30 p. m. by the Policemen's Association at Roosevelt High School.

Addresses will be made by the Superintendent of Police, Maj. Ernest W. Brown; Representative Magnus Johnson, of Minnesota; the Rev. Joseph V. Buckley, pastor of St. Francis Xavier's Church; James G. Yaden, president of Federation of Citizens Associations, and John E. Fondahl, president of Policemen's Association. Music will be furnished by the Washington Gas Light Co. Band. Floral decorations will be furnished through the courtesy of George C. Shafer.

The following policemen have died since January 1, 1932: Sergt. Thomas L. McNamara, Sergt. Ertis W. Reed, Private George W. Shinault, Private Robert L. Coffren, Private Leonard E. Draeger, Private Harold F. Mulvanity, Private James W. Casey, Private Herbert M. Smith, Private Lauritz Christensen, Private Lewis Hale and Private Thomas J Ryan.

AT THE CHESS TABLE

By WILLARD H. MUTCHLER.

OWING largely to the efforts of J. Earle Moser, sports editor of the Federal News, the long-planned Federal Chess Club has actually been organized and initiated. Membership in the club is restricted to Federal or District Government employes and their relatives or friends. Among those listed as charter members in the new club are Albert H. Aronson, C. C. Bettinger, R. L. Creel, D. S. Burch, J. R. Eskin, H. G. Ferguson, A. Y. Hesse, J. W. Byler, T. A. Hendricks, F. E. Kurtz, O. E. Lamp, W. H. Mutchler, Joseph L. Rubin, E. M. Knapp, D. W. Waight, Thomas F. Vass, G. W. Jordan and J. G. Ferrier.

Dallas S. Burch, well known for his leadership in chess activities at Agricultural Department, was elected president of the Federal Club, while J. Earle Moser was made secretary and David W. Waight, Army Medical Center, was chosen as treasurer. Dues have been set at 50 cents per month or $5 per year, payable in advance. The club intends to concentrate its appeal upon the large numbers of players of mediocre playing strength or upon those whose acquaintance with the game is relatively meager. In addition to providing suitable entertainment for their enjoyment it is planned to hold courses of instruction for those who are desirous of improving their play, and J. W. Byler, advanced Federal champion, has proffered his services toward this end. Events for more advanced players are also, of course, to be given due consideration and will be conducted under the more rigorous regulations befitting their strength.

A. Y. Hesse has offered his services in simultaneous play as soon as feasible, while the organization has already accepted a challenge from G. E. Bishop to contest a seven-board match with advanced players. The tentative date of play is June 14. Play is to take place at the Federal Clubhouse, 1515 Sixteenth street northwest. Government employes interested in joining the Federal club should communicate with Mr. Moser at the Federal Clubhouse at their earliest convenience.

District Match Championship.

Matters pertaining to the District match championship titular honors are becoming somewhat involved. It has been our impression that James W. Byler acquired that title in 1931 when he defeated the then District tournament champion, F. B. Walker, in match play. We have always thought, and it seems Mr. Walker also thought, that the titular match was played under auspices of the District of Columbia Chess League. Mr. Byler lately let it be known, however, that he dissents from this view in no uncertain terms. Which leaves us to wonder whether the title of District match champion, by which we have been designating him these past two years, has been sheer error. Mr. Byler bases his recently announced views upon a letter by the then president of the D. C. Chess League, A. Y. Hesse, which appeared in these columns on April 5, 1931, and claims that the league has never officially recognized his title and has no jurisdiction over the disposition of the same.

In 1932 G. E. Bishop, president of the league, issued an unaccepted challenge to Byler to contest for the title, which at best shows that league officials were cognizant of it. Mr. Bishop has recently stated that he did not insist upon acceptance of his challenge through official league action at the time because he himself occupied a responsible position. Somewhat more than a month ago Carl A. Hesse challenged Byler to a match for the title, which still remains unaccepted, since Byler insists that the challenge be made directly to himself and not through the medium of the league.

Bishop, as league president, now announces that should Byler not accept the challenge it will be forfeited to Hesse. Byler, in the meantime, has proceeded independently to call a meeting of strong local chess players for purposes of discussing means of disposition of the title. He proposed to a gathering consisting of your editor, A. C. Otten, J. B. Beadle, E. M. Knapp, F. L. Jeffers and V. Sournin, that an elimination tournament be begun at once, and that he play the winner, with the title at stake. He appointed a committee consisting of Mr. Beadle, chairman, and Messrs. Otten, Knapp and Jeffers to draw up rules and regulations governing the proposed tourney and the future means of acquisition of the title. The committee has so done, and announces that interested players should at once communicate with Mr. Byler relative to entrance in the tourney. The entrance fee has been set at $3. The list will be closed on June 20, the tourney to follow immediately.

To this, Mr. Bishop lets it be known that he favors such a tourney provided only that C. A. Hesse's challenge, which he considers worthy of legitimate priority, be first disposed of. In the event that Hesse is willing to waive his challenge, the tourney will be sanctioned by the league but not held under its jurisdiction. Should Hesse's challenge remain ignored, the previously mentioned forfeiture will go into effect insofar as the league is concerned and all participants in the tournament will be barred from future participation in D. C. League events, including its annual championship tournament. So states Mr. Bishop. And there the whole unfortunate proceeding rests at the present writing.

We humbly suggest that Messrs. Byler and Bishop go into individual conference with the idea of seeing how closely they can agree upon amicable relations rather than of determining how widely they can diverge. Situations such as this are, after all, not particularly beneficial to chess, and the game itself and its interests should receive paramount consideration. The D. C. League has for its stated objects: (1) To stimulate greater interest in chess and in the formation of chess clubs in the District of Columbia; (2) to promote acquaintanceship among District chess players; and (3) to provide an official body that shall have authority to institute District championship tourneys or matches, arrange for exhibitions of master players, and conduct all chess affairs of general interest in the District of Columbia. Both principals in the present drama subscribed to these objectives upon the formation of the league in 1930.

We have been asked of late "who constitutes the District league?" We presume its recognized champions and certainly all those participants in its annual team tournament, which is, after all, its most worthy annual undertaking. It appears to us, however, that criticism tending in this direction can readily be overcome by calling a meeting of all elected officials of the league to render final decision in the matter of its championship title holders. Personally, we wish to be fair to both sides and announce here that we will serve in no official capacity on either.

Solutions to Problems.

We have yet to receive a correct solution to Mr. Nussbaum's four-mover, No. 532, and it appears that he must come to the rescue with his intended solution. Today's offering is at the present writing being prominently displayed on the exhibition board at the Capital City Club, to which it was presented by W. K. Wimsatt for the enjoyment of fellow members. Mr. Wimsatt relates that the offering appeared years ago in a Welsh newspaper and that one individual worked intermittently for 40 years in an effort to find its keymove. Mr. Wimsatt himself required six hours to work out the variations after having discovered the keymove. So this, ye expert solvers, is a challenge! Solve it.

Sylvan Theater, Thursday, Offers Music and Dancing

Marine Band and Evelyn Davis Group on Program; "The Sap" Comedy at Washington Community Center Friday Night.

Community Center events this week feature the second Summer Festival of the 1933 season at the Sylvan Theater in the Washington Monument Grounds Thursday evening, at 8 o'clock when the United States Marine Band and the Evelyn Davis Dance Group will appear in joint concert, the band under the direction of Capt. Taylor Branson, playing a concert prior to the dance program which will follow at 8:30 o'clock. The Glee Clubs of Roosevelt High School directed by Miss Emma Louise Thompson, will assist the dancers in the "Marching to Glory" number, singing three spirituals as accompaniment to the dance movement.

East Washington Community Center will present "The Sap" a three-act comedy featuring The Troupers of East Washington Center, in Eastern High School Auditorium, Friday, at 8 o'clock, the program being in honor of the faculty and graduating class of Eastern High School. A limited number of invitations to this play which is the season's final offering of The Troupers, may be had by application to Mrs. L. W. Hardy, general secretary, Community Center Department, in Franklin Administration Building.

Southeast Center will complete its spring activities this week, the final dance of the season to be held in Buchanan Auditorium Thursday night from 8:30 to 11 o'clock with special carnival features and a summer-time program included. At Hine Branch of Southeast Center, on Saturday morning from 9:30 to 11:45 there will be the final meeting until next fall of the "Jolly Juniors" Club.

Dunbar Center will continue its present schedule of daily events from 5 to 7 p. m. featuring swimming taught by an experienced instructor each afternoon. There will also be games of all kinds, for children, youths and grown-ups. The Girl Scouts will meet Friday at 5 p. m.

Although activities have been discontinued for the summer at West Washington Center, the West Washington Choral Club, which has been so successful this past season under the direction of Mrs. Grace D. Mahoney, will continue its rehearsals throughout June and July, in preparation for next year's work. The last event of the season at West Washington Center was a program given by the West Washington Choral Club and the Red Cross Sewing Club, on May 23, when musical numbers by members of the chorus and games for young and old were included in the program.

Mrs. E. K. Peeples, director of the community center department, gave a talk on "The Purpose of the Community Center," and likewise installed the officers of the choral club and the sewing club. George W. Jones, of Liberty Baptist Church, was chosen as president of the choral club. Miss Bertha Gunther is president of the sewing club.

Home Economics

At the annual dinner meeting of the District of Columbia Home Economics Association, held at Brook Farm, Wednesday, reports of the year's work were given and election of officers took place. The following officers will continue for another year: Florence L. Hall, president; Margaret Lunn, corresponding secretary; Florence Fallgatter, councilor. New officers were elected as follows: Vice president, Mrs. Miriam Dillon; secretary, Dorothy Smith; treasurer, Mildred Merrill.

Free Lance Writers

The Society of Free Lance Writers held its last meeting of the season at the Ambassador Hotel. Dr. Arthur Deering spoke on the art of writing the drama, and Mrs. Harriette Hilton Esch read the opening chapter of her forthcoming novel. The present officers of the society, reelected by unanimous ballot, are: Felix Conrad Schwarz, president; Maj. Edward Dyer, vice president; Dr. Andre Beneteau, treasurer; Bobbie Bray Hayes, secretary.

Liberty Unit Observes Its 4th Birthday

State Councilor Mrs. Emma Barnes announces the appointment of Mrs. Mabel Hall as chairman of the State good-of-order committee of the Sons and Daughters of Liberty. All councils are making plans for outings on July 15, which is the annual reunion day of the order.

Justice Council met, with the councilor, Mrs. Nellie Teeple, presiding. Final nomination of officers was made. A bingo party will be given by this council on June 15 at 60 M street northeast. The regular meeting will be called early on June 15. The last meeting was adjourned early, in order to attend the birthday party of Columbia Council.

Columbia Council celebrated its fourth birthday on June 1, with the councilor, S. W. Cochran, in charge of the meeting. Final nominations of officers were made. Mrs. Fannie Mason was welcomed as their new deputy State councilor and was presented a small gift. She donated a ring to be given to the first member of the council bringing in five new members.

After a short congratulatory message by Mr. Mason, a birthday cake was cut by the deputy. Nearly all of the seventeen State officers spoke. The meeting closed with refreshments, and a program of songs and dances, presented by Chairlady Stearns, as follows: Miss Romalee Haun and the Misses Martha Hawes, Annette Hodkinson, Peggy Thompson, Rosie Reguse and Rita Lee Haun in songs and dances, and Master Bobby Hodkinson in songs. Mrs. Haun was at the piano. The next meeting of the council will be held Thursday.

Washington Council will hold a "stunt" night at its meeting tomorrow at 935 G place northwest.

Hope Council will play bingo after its regular meeting tomorrow at Naval Lodge Hall.

The Blue Council gave a reception to the State officers at its last meeting.

The first regular meeting of the newly instituted Pride of Washington Council was called to order by the councilor, C. T. Smith. The obligations of the order were conferred upon Mrs. Tate and William Stogner. Mrs. Lula Lee presented a ballot box to the council and promised to present a silk altar flag at the next meeting. Mrs. Sadie Jenkins announced that the drill team of Hope Council will present a seal to the council. Bingo was played. The next meeting will be held on June 17.

G. A. R. Ladies

The Abraham Lincoln Circle, No. 8, Ladies of the Grand Army of the Republic, met at its headquarters, room 127, Willard Hotel, on Monday. President Rebecca L. Blaine presided. Miss Doris Redfern returned from a trip to Atlantic City in time for the opening exercises. Past President Mida C. Peabody informed the circle that she had gone to the Century of Progress Exposition at Chicago and she hoped the members will come and view the exhibits which will show them the progress made in 100 years. Mrs. May D. Lightfoot filled the chair of the junior vice president; Mrs. Edith A. King, senior vice president, and Mrs. Mary Logan Tucker, patriotic instructor. Miss Vera Redfern officiated as guard and Miss Beatrice Deeds conducted. The following were initiated into the order: Mrs. Anna Kelton Wiley, Mrs. Julia A. Pancoast, Mrs. Ada A. Kuenstle, Miss Ethel L. Redfern. Lewis G. Reynolds, commander of Harding Camp, Sons of Union Veterans, made a few remarks and was obligated. Mrs. Harvey Wiley discussed economies of interest to every woman. Mrs. Helena Reed and Mr. Percy Parker spoke.

The members indorsed the work of the Red Cross and promised to support its activities. They accepted the invitation of the Grand Army of the Republic to attend its Flag Day exercises of June 14 at the Sylvan Theater. They also promised to be present at memorial services of the Department of the Potomac in Junior Order Hall June 9, at which exercises President Blaine requested the members to assist her in the memorial tribute to Mrs. Kate Perkins and Mrs. Mary J. Fisher, deceased members of the circle. She stated the circle had placed a wreath at the Tomb of the Unknown dead of the Civil War on Decoration Day.

Members were requested to attend the July meeting and elect delegates and alternates to the sixty-seventh national encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic to be held in St. Paul, Minn., September 17 to 23. Mrs. Minnie Woodmansee, of Anoko, Minn., has been appointed general chairman of the committee on arrangements for the Ladies of the Grand Army of the Republic and they have established headquarters at Hotel St. Paul, Minnesota.

"GEMINI."

IF June 11 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 8:45 a. m. to 10 a. m., from 1 p. m. to 2 p. m. and from 7:40 p. m. to 9 p. m. The danger periods are from 6:45 a. m. to 8 a. m. and from 4:30 p. m. to 6 p. m.

The child born on this June 11 will cause his parents a good deal of anxiety and worry in his early years. This will be due to thoughtlessness on his part coupled with a nature both adventurous and restless. He will gain high honors in high school.

If June 11 is the date of your birth, you are more than likely a person who goes steadily about his work and has few words to say. At work or away from it, you are a handy man to have about. You know how to do a multitude of things and whenever the unexpected occurs, you are just the man to meet the situation.

Born on June 11, you are probably fortunate in being content with the things you have; this does not mean that you are lacking in ambition, for you are not. Your aim in life is not to acquire great riches material in nature, but rather to store up spiritual treasures. You are a good person, you are religious and you strive to live up to the tenets of your church whatever one it may be. You take an interest in your community and in the people of it. Particularly are you interested in the young people, and it would be not at all surprising to find you taking an active part in some movement such as the Boy or Girl Scout activity. Marriage will not come early in life.

Successful people born on June 11: Eli Thayer, educator and inventor; Alexander B. Latta, inventor; Orson D. Munn, publisher.

MEANDERER FINDS PARASOLS COQUETTISH AND WIDE HATS PICTURESQUE

Roosevelts Look Cool at White House

First Lady Likes Classic Lines and President Light Summer Clothes.

By VYLLA POE WILSON.

THE supremacy of the white evening gown has been conceded by official and diplomatic Washington in the last few weeks. At every party, be it a reception or dinner at the White House or a dinner at an embassy or legation, invariably the hostess and most of the women guests appear in white.

The vogue for white has even reached the men of the official and diplomatic circle, led by no less a distinguished personage than the President of the United States, who has dinner suits of white materials, some of them really summer linen and others of handsomer material. President Roosevelt looks well-groomed and cool these summer days, even in his office, in his summer light suits and soft-collared shirts.

Mrs. Roosevelt leads the army of women in the matter of white summer evening attire, for she has a new dress of crepy satin sheer, made on modernized classic lines, full and long and gracefully draped with flowing Grecian sleeves held to the shoulders by lovely diamond ornaments, which the wise ones tell us are part of the Hall family jewel collection. Mrs. Roosevelt is a distinguished member of the Hall family.

Mrs. Roosevelt in White Crepe Dotted Blue.

Mrs. Roosevelt varied her choice of white costumes one day last week by wearing a dainty gown of white crepe de chine with pin dots of blue all over it. This is made with short cape sleeves and with it she wears smart white shoes and a Panama hat.

Mrs. Nicholas Longworth is looking cool in a summery costume of black and white silk, with the white predominating. With this she wears a white hat and the well-fitting type of smart footwear Mrs. Longworth always affects.

Mrs. Robert Dickey 2d., of Pau, France, who arrived on Wednesday with three of her young children to spend the summer with her mother, Mrs. George Barnett, wore a chic costume of blue and white coin dot crepe de chine, with which she had a plain blue tailored coat and small blue tailored hat.

Mrs. Barnett has a dress of black and white flowered silk, with a cape collar and a plaited skirt. With this she wears a white hat.

Mrs. Henry Suydam has an evening ensemble of brown and cream net over soft cream chiffon, with much of the cream chiffon used on the dress proper, and the cape-like wrap being entirely of the net. Mrs. Suydam is wearing an attractive sport dress of pique and of silk serge in pastel shades, with tied shoulders and V neckline.

Mrs. George T. Marye had on at one of the morning functions a dress of white and black flowered sheer, made on conservative lines with a plaited cape collar tied in the front. With this she wore a white hat with a narrow brim.

Mrs. Britten Has Dress Of Red and White Sheer.

Mrs. Fred A. Britten was strolling on Connecticut avenue in a dress of red and white sheer, made with a round cape collar and no sleeves. With this she wore white shoes and a white hat.

Mrs. English Gordon has a costume of black and white and red and green flowered silk with bands of black crepe de chine fagoted in at the shoulders and the flowing three-quarter-length sleeves. Over this she wears a smart coat of black silk with a tied scarf collar. Her hat is a flat crowned one with narrow brim of black straw. Mrs. Gordon is also wearing a sport costume of white crepe de chine, with the cape collar held on with rows of large green buckles and the green note repeated in the belt.

Mrs. William Barrett Ridgeley is wearing a dress of white and blue crepe silk, made in coat effect. With this she wears a small white hat.

Mrs. Mark Sullivan had on recently an evening dress of gray blue crepe made on graceful lines with a train.

Mrs. Arthur O'Brien is wearing a dress of flowered chiffon with three-quarter-length sleeves. With this she wears a small black hat.

"Current Events" As Seen in Paris

Paris, June 10 (U.P.).—Nearly all the big dressmaking houses now are installing what they call "current event departments"—which, after all is said and done, are the accessory sections of the mammoth trade of dressing a woman smartly.

"Current events" include such items as scarfs, pocketbooks, ties, gloves, belts, handkerchiefs, collars and cuffs, hatbands and novelty trimming, ornaments for purses, costume jewelry, hose, shoe buckles, clips, buttons and eccentric pins and bizarre fastenings.

Here are a few of the latest "current events" picked up from the big shops over here at random: A little tailored white pique evening cape by Lelong; a pair of taffeta gloves with ruffled organdie cuffs by Lucile Paray; all-over printed silk gloves from Molyneux; Schiaparelli's pointed circus hat, knitted; Chanel's pink and black tulle sleeves that billow out like spun-sugar at the fair; those little stand-out veils that have no rhyme nor reason but which Talbot makes a necessary part of her new hats, and the scarfs of Joseph Paquin that are also used for sashes and may, on occasion, be twisted into soft turbans for beach wear to keep the hair from blowing.

Silk Slacks Now Proposed for Men

Here's a nubbin which someone found in the new deal: One of the greatest sporting goods stores has come brazenly out in print and blatantly announced silk slacks for men! If gentlemen's fashions followed the burning pace of women, it would be safe to assume satin breeches would appear in the second lap of the race.

This would call for buckled shoes, Talleyrand frills, a scherzo on the piano and a gavotte in place of the rhumba.

Some Handy Accessories

Novel bags play an important role in this year's accessory styles. Three of them are pictured here. Left to right—One designed as a week-end case, with small partitions to separate lipstick, powder and cigarets; one of black wool and trimmed with metal and one of natural colored linen finished with a copper band. The last goes well with the sports blouse worn by the girl, which, of natural colored linen threads, is designed by Heim for wear with a brown wool sports skirt. The necklace, lower left, combines braided string and metal plaques. With the bags is shown a novel collar for a turtleneck sweater.

Paris Showing Economical All-Day Dress

Ensemble Is Ready for All Kinds of Occasions; Simplicity First Rule.

Paris, June 10 (A.P.).—An all-day ensemble has made its debut as the latest economy fashion.

In a year when many of the smartest women have slashed their wardrobe budgets in half, designers have created a new costume based on practicality and ready for any semiformal occasion from luncheon to supper. Simplicity is its first rule; dark colors the second, although many light touches are used to brighten the ensemble.

The design most often used is that of a simple frock cut on semi-princess lines with a waistline only slightly marked, a hem nine inches from the floor and a bodice fashioned with cap sleeves which barely cover the shoulders. It is worn with a waist-length cape, bolero, or three-quarter length coat, made of the same material. With the wrap it is ready for the luncheon or the street. Without it the costume is suitable for an informal dinner.

Navy Blue Popular For Crepe Costume.

Navy blue is one of the favorite colors for these all-day ensembles, designed for the city woman, who dashes from one engagement to another. One smart Parisian has chosen a costume of dark blue crepe printed with white "paint brush" splashes, which combines a cap-sleeved frock wih a detachable waist-length cape of the same material tied at the throat. Another has a costume made of heavy pebbled, dark blue crepe with a sleeveless frock and severely tailored jacket. When she wants to wear the costume to dinner, she takes off the jacket and adds a shoulder bouquet of orchids.

Black Also Liked In Newest Styles.

Black is also widely chosen for these all-day costumes. Black crepe, pin dotted in shell pink, makes a brief cape and a sleeveless frock, having the neckline outlined in pink organdy. Heavy black crepe makes another dress which is worn with a cape covered with black monkey fur and a black musketeer hat turned up on the left side and down on the right.

The hats worn with these all-round costumes are carefully chosen by smart Parisians, since they must be suitable for early afternoon and late evening wear. A black crepe toque with a shimmering rhinestone pin thrust through its folds is one woman's choice. Another chooses for wear with a black crepe ensemble splashed with white, a white crepe toque with a tuft of black coque feathers right in front.

Black and White Coat for Autumn

Paris, June 10 (U.P.).—All wound up and some place to go calls for something particularly smart in the matter of wearing apparel. Worth takes care of the situation in a number of ways. One, for instance, is with a black and white plaid coat, designed for early autumn (it's chilly over here in France off and on all summer) which has built out shoulders and fastens with a big black velvet bow. It is straight in line with lots of human interest centered in the sleeves and collar.

To be wound up and headed for the beach it wouldn't be a bad notion to have that very swagger black linen frock from Worth that has large bell-shaped sleeves, a white collar with a big bunch of black and white flowers at the point of the front decolletage. A wide black and white belt brings the outfit up a notch in smartness and things like shoes, purse and hat have the option of being black or white or both.

Traveling Modes Simple These Days

There was a time when the average traveler looked like she was starting out for musket drill—what with umbrella, carpet-bag, overshoes and box lunch, not to mention smelling salts for train sickness.

Now, one's walking shoes can "take it," which dispenses with the rubbers, and the topcoat is cravanetted, which throws a wrench into the umbrella's ubiquity.

The sophisticated traveler wears glove-silk underwear instead of carrying a 5-pound flatiron, and she rings for a bottle of beer rather than being silly enough to monkey with smelling salts, and lastly she prefers sparring with a couple of dresses and dozens of accessories, to 14 dresses and a litter of trunks.

Light Woolens In Fall Attire, Paris Asserts

Paris, June 10 (A.P.).—Featherweight wools in rich tones of wine red, burnt orange, almond green and silver gray hold the spotlight in new displays here as the all-round fashion fabric for early fall wear.

Evening gowns, afternoon frocks and sports suits are all designed in these lightweight wools, many of which are little heavier than crinkled silk crepe. Prominent in the display is an evening gown of soft wine red wool, designed on a slender fitted silhouette with a back bare to the waist. The front of the bodice is swept up around the neck and crossed, the ends falling down the back.

Burnt orange wool makes a striking sports frock designed with a high neckline which buttons to one side. Silver gray wool fashions a trim sports suit worn with a sapphire blue blouse and a three-quarter length wool coat of the same hue. Black djalap (a lightweight wool flecked with rabbit hairs) steps into the afternoon mode for cool days in the form of a simple slim frock topped with a bib collar of white pique and finished with a belt fastened with a white galalith clasp.

Linen beach dresses with bare backs or suspendid strap backs and linen bathing suits cut on abbreviated lines with cross-strap backs are outstanding notes in beach styles.

White linen makes a summer sports suit designed with a little high-necked jacket and finished with a triangular scarf made of green yarn to resemble a fishnet. Stone gray linen is used for a street coat cut with broad tailored revers and worn with a dark grey leather belt.

For summer evening wear a slender streamline frock is designed with a white linen skirt and a blue and white printed linen bodice. It is worn with a three-quarter length wrap of white linen, fitted at the waistline and collared in the same print.

Summer Blankets Light in Weight

According to the umpires, summer is officially here June 1, and there's mutiny ahead if winter blankets are not relayed then to the mothballs.

Some of the exploited summer blankets appear in a dangerous state of malnutrition, due to skimpy measurements which bargain-hunting fanatics have wrung from the merchants, but others are generously sized, with texture and colorings that stay beautiful through years of washing.

Look for warmth, not weight, when summer blanket shopping, and it's not a national calamity to bar arbutus from your guest room plans. Try daffodil instead.

Linen Bags Fashion Now For Summer

Complement Suits Made of Linen; Underarm Envelop Found Clever.

Chicago, June 10 (A.P.).—Summer handbags have invaded the shops in a number of materials besides leather—string, linen, pique, wooden beads, straw, organdie, a shell-like composition, gingham, silk crepe, woolens, for instance.

The linen bags are designed to complement the linen suits and frocks, all the fashion now. These bags can be had in natural color linen, black, white or pastels, and in a variety of interesting shapes.

One of the cleverest is a bulky underarm envelop bag, the same shape, but a little larger than an ordinary large business envelop. It closes with a tricky metal flap, and wrapped twice around the bag is a hemp cord with tassel ends. This cord can be matched in belts.

White Pique Bags Are Often Seen.

White pique bags are much in evidence. One smart number was lined with red-checked gingham. It had been styled to go with the new ensembles of gingham frock and white pique coat.

String bags may be had to accompany the new string sweater outfits.

Bags of white, black or colored wooden beads seem headed for a bigger season than even last year.

A rough basket-weave fabric-like straw, sanghaleen, is a new summer bag material. It is light, pliable and comes in white, black and colors.

Ruffled Organdie Bags Are Worn in Evening.

For evening there are numbers of clever, dainty little ruffled organdie bags.

A bag that will be liked because fingerprints wipe right off is of rodolacque, a shell-like composition in white, black and colors.

In the silk crepe field there are bags made in several of the popular prints, and to go with light-weight woolen suits and coats are bags of the same material.

Very practical are the pique and linen bags that have covers that slip off, so they can be easily laundered.

Leather and Metal Make Necklace

Leather and metal combine to form a nice new necklace. The leather is twisted into a tube about the size of a pencil and over it are strung bright metal, or bronze disks. The ends terminate in front where the leather widens to about an inch and a half and winds in and out of two metal rings and then points downward like the ends of a neat fore-in-hand tie. All colors of leather are used and often the ornament suffices for both collar and necklace. Cuffs may be made in the same way, pointing the tie-end terminations up the arm toward the elbow.

How to Handle Muffin at Dance

If you have a date that is inclined to be a heavy muffin at a dance, you might try giving him one of those new metal link puzzles that will interest him and keep him occupied while you dance.

Incidentally, he probably will enjoy talking about it to others at the party and tell them what a smart girl you are for thinking of it. The links are made on a scroll design and only by turning and twisting in just the right way can you get them either separated or, when separated, back together again.

Newest Styles Place Accent Above Waist

Shoulders Are Wide, Skirts Slender and Coats Have Tucked Sleeve Tops.

Paris, June 10 (A.P.).—Wide shoulders, natural gently fitting waistlines and slender skirts are the outstanding points in the new Paris profile launched at recent style shows.

The latest silhouette places its accent above the waist. Coats with tucked sleeve tops, suits with padded shoulders, frocks with puffed sleeves flaring to a pert point and scarfs which tie in a big bow on one side of the chin are all seen in the new wide-shouldered mode for summer and early fall costumes.

An ensemble with a hip-length or three-quarter length coat leads the summer style parade. Printed frocks with three-quarter length coats to match, linen skirts combined with knee-length coats and bright printed blouses, and little, dark silk suits with hip-length jackets are starred in the showings of numerous houses.

Accessories Add Chic To Smart Attire.

Many interesting accessory touches are used to complete their chic. White organdy gloves, toque and scarf with a dark blue crepe ensemble and rose pique gauntlets and chapeau with a gray linen costume are among the smartest seen.

The summer evening mode stresses the wide-shouldered effect seen in the day silhouette. Frocks with brief cap sleeves or frilled shoulder lines and short cape-sleeved wraps are shown by many houses.

Nile green, forget-me-not blue and rose pink pebbled crepes are the favorite fabrics for the most formal gowns, while pebbled cotton splashed in such combinations as lemon, orange and white, or mauve, rose and green are displayed for less formal wear.

Fall Coats Are Trimmed With Varied Furs.

The new coats shown in early fall displays are richly trimmed with fur, many of them having both collars and upper sleeve accents of silver, stone or blue fox, astrakhan or Persian lamb. Their silhouettes are generally almost straight, while their hemlines are from 7 to 11 inches from the ground.

"Tattooed" Lips Made to Stay

"Tattoo" your lips and then try a batch of grapefruit or lambstew or even a wisp of clam chowder for lunch and you'll find this new lipstick can't be fooled with trivialities. Of course a demitasse is the real test for indelibility in a lipstick and most lips look completely anemic and pasty after fumbling one good cup of coffee, but it is claimed that not an iota of personality is sacrificed by a well "tattooed" girl.

Spain's Ex-Queen Selects Attire

Paris, June 18 (U.P.).—Her majesty the former Queen of Spain has been around and about Paris selecting summer dresses, and, among them, three are from Schiaparelli. One is a white and blue print, a small, regular pattern of leaves, designed very simple in line, and cut almost entirely on the bias. It has a jabot of the same material as the dress and a belt of bright blue leather with a cylinder fastening in silver.

Blue and white is a favorite color combination with the queen as evidenced by her second selection of a basket weave printed silk also in blue and white. The dress is sleeveless and the jacket worn with it is trimmed by a band of "Vagabond" ribbon that forms a collar as well as a border to the front of the jacket, rolling over at the neck to show a lining of the printed material.

This ensemble has a belt of blue leather also, but the fastening is an important looking tortoiseshell bar—one of the many clever Schiaparelli systems—appearing as a fastener on several items, such as bags and coats, &c., this season.

Feminine Touches For Typewriters

For the business woman who is allowed to keep her equipment up to date, we suggest one of the new colored typewriters with a small drawer at the left in which she may keep her powder, rouge, lipstick and perfume. This permits her to put her pocketbook away in the bottom drawer and not have to refer to it again until she goes out to lunch or home in the afternoon. A little mirror, incidentally, snaps out from the side of the machine. The typewriter maintains all of its dignity for these little feminine touches are not visible to the naked eye.

Three Costumes Fit For Evening Wear

Paris, June 10 (U.P.).—All the shoulder fullness and flippancy that Chanel veers away from in the daytime she puts on with additional fluency in the evening. Here are three of her choice models for formal summer evenings. The first is of black chiffon with sleeves from shoulder to elbow consisting of six fluffy ruffles in pink and black, beginning with the black on the shoulder and ending with the pink that just swishes past the elbow. The decolletage is low both back and front and oval in shape. The skirt is long and very full with up-and-down ruffles on the top layer of chiffon that begin in the neighborhood of the knees and tip the floor.

The second costume also is black. Its decolletage is so daringly low that the splotch of creamy skin it reveals is breath-taking. There are fairly wide shoulder straps made of braided folds of chiffon. A diamond-shaped section of upper arm is revealed and from another band of braided chiffon are folds and folds, loose and flowing, of chiffons that go all the way to the wrist or stop at the elbow if preferred.

Sun Shades Decorative With Ruffles and Dots

Ribbons of Organdie and Pique Give Distinction to Summer Bonnets; Knitting Bags Are Made of Chintz; Chapeaux for Bride's Charm.

By THE MEANDERER.

"SHADES of the mauve decade!" "Shades of the merry widows!" Both exclamations are suitable remarks for shoppers when they see the coquettish parasols and the picturesque, wide, wide hats arriving for the summer of 1933.

Ruffles, nosegays and dots make these parasols decorative, while they shade fair faces from the withering effects of the sun. The wide hats are quite free from elaboration, however, depending upon their graceful drooping brims for their picturesque effects.

"Not for years and years—probably more than 20 years—have we had such parasols to sell" the young salesgirl in a shop of much discrimination told the Meanderer. That meant that this young person behind the counter in the parasol shop couldn't have remembered seeing such gay sunshades, unless her mother may have treasured some from other days.

"Frilly frocks explain the return of the parasol," the salesgirl explained. "For years the parasol has been a sun-rain affair of bright silk to harmonize with tailored or sports wear. But this year, puffed sleeves, long skirts and ruffles call for parasols to complete the summer girl picture."

Bows of ribbon, of organdy or the insistent pique, are used more than are flowers in trimming the wide hats. The gayest hat trimming the Meanderer found in one shop was a bouquet of cornflowers, their bright hue giving an effective touch on a large white hat.

The fragile, be-frilled parasol, such as Diana Wynyard used to supplement her ladyship's loveliness in "Cavalcade," is not showing in numbers as yet, but is being ordered now and then for the Capital's garden parties. A favorite version of this type of sunshade is of white or cream net, daintily ruffled, made over colored silk to harmonize with the party frock.

Printed linen in bold designs and bright colors, dotted materials, neat checks or dashing gingham plaids make most of the 1933 parasols. Among the colored sunshades, however, are some which do not depend on color for smartness. One is of monk's cloth, self-bound, or bound in plain color, for use with the string fashions in sportswear. Another is the white silk "sudanette" of which the Meanderer already has written, useful whether it rains or shines. Another is the "gob" parasol, done smartly in white with touches of navy blue and an anchor embossed on its handle.

Never out of fashion—always appropriate for the woman with a liking for things that are strictly feminine is the miniature parasol, the sun shade for the carriage or motor or board walk wheel chair. Reminiscent of Washington's days of fine horse-drawn vehicles is this tiny parasol, particularly effective in black with pink, narrow ruffles, and its jointed handle permitting exact adjustment for the ride through the sunshine.

"Pajamasol" is the name for a large, smart beach parasol of floral patterned crash with a long handle. Under this wide spreading sunshade several persons may have refuge from the sun.

A knitting bag of chintz has a small, folding parasol of matching chintz tucked into a side pocket. Don't ask the Meanderer, though, how one knits and holds a parasol at the same time.

Not new, but popular and most useful, particularly to the traveler, is the purse and umbrella combination. Folding umbrellas, reduced to compact efficiency, fit into special outside pockets on purses, or may be carried inside the purse. Folding rubbers also tuck into such purses so that the rainy day protection is complete with no noticeable space needed for the purpose.

The daintiest imaginable parasols for little girls are displayed alongside the adult sunshade fashions, many of them copies of those for their mothers and aunts and grandmothers. Animal heads deftly done in wood make handles for many of the children's parasols.

Animal heads, too, make handles on adults umbrellas. Astonishing—a revelation to the Meanderer—was the array of umbrellas with handles carved in dozens of animal and bird designs. The dog fancier may find not only a mere dog's head but actually may come upon his favorite type of dog head in an umbrella handle. The scotty, the airedale, the German police, the bulldog and others are represented. There are parrots, peacocks and owls, too, on umbrella handles.

"Shoe linen" makes some of the newest of the wide hats. In white and colors with brims drooping in flattering manner, with sections of the brim in woven effect to harmonize with the woven leather shoes, the "shoe linen" hats are attracting buyers from the Capital's smartly attired women.

"Chiffon hair" in black or white makes immense hats, softly flattering and picturesque. This sheer variation of horsehair does not have the braided look of the time-honored horsehair hat material.

Organdy hats in large sizes will top off hundreds of summer costumes, with organdy so popular for frocks and accessories.

Monk's cloth has been useful in the millinery world, just as the Meanderer has found it filling a fashion need in the parasol sphere, in supplying hats to accompany the heavy linen or string sports wear. With the new string laces, or string eyelet materials in daytime frocks, the monk's cloth hat is a smart choice.

Wide hats and poke shapes in fetching bonnets for the bridesmaids, in any colors wanted, are available in one millinery shop. The bride and her bridesmaids may gather in this shop, study the alluring chapeaux for bridal wear, and may order individual colors and lines in millinery that seem to suit their purpose.

Elastic Ribbons Around Throat

Paris, June 10 (U.P.).—Having "invented" new forms of all three and sponsored them through several fashion seasons, Schiaparelli now says, "Any sort of fastening—hooks, buttons or clips—now is a thing of the past. When there is no elastic ribbon, there is an arrangement of tied shoulder straps to take its place."

And she has taken herself seriously in this statement. The new elastic ribbons appear around the throat and wrists and as belts, caps and bags. They are useful as well as ornamental in that they bring about that perfect fit so essential to the slender body.

One of the new shades launched by this house is called "Navy-Cut" and it refers to a tobacco brown. Another is a "washed out" blue about the shade of a pair of denim rompers after a year of weekly laundering.

Horizontal Hats Are Fashionable

Not your wildest oat, perhaps, but one of them—should be a big Merry Widow hat of bicycle days. They may be sailed like a picnic plate in play moments which offers relief from dull companions. These flattest-of-flat hats range anywhere from 10 inches across to about 22 and look completely society belle in rough straws or sheer straws with a daffy bunch of field flowers from the home-worked sofa-pillow period, perched starchily at some vantage point of the hat band.

Mrs. Leonard M. Thomas, of Newport; Mrs. Shevlin Smith and Mrs. Theodore Herbst, of New York, all looked very advance mode at the opening of Belmont in these sublimely silly, actual prone, horizontal head coverings.

Bathroom Given Oilcloth Drapery

If you are one of the few left, who still are using dimity, or dotted swiss curtains for the bathroom windows, you'd better snap out of it and show your friends that you haven't drooped, fashionably speaking, by equipping this room with new oilcloth draperies.

You can do your own painting or stenciling on them if you are artistically bent, or get them already decorated. When they get dusty or splotched, just drop them in the tub, give them a couple of swashes with a damp cloth and a dab of soap, wipe them off and up they go again, spick and span!

Advice Is Given On Bathing Suits

The shops have taken out of the mothballs most of last summer's ideas on bathing suits and refurbished them with a dash of rope or so.

Of course, there's something thrilling and disarming about the opening scrimmage of bathing suit buying, but if you have a good, young, active figure on the lines of a snowshoe rabbit, don't let anyone sell you anything but a rubber two-piece bathing suit, or a white wool which appears hand-knitted. If you can count your midriff spare tires, stick to a dark navy in a soft, flat, jersey knit—and like it!

"Featha Panties" Summer Idea

With the thermometer easing itself toward 9,000, some nimble minded store is advertising featha panties. Can you imagine being serene in featha panties?

If it were the sleighing season, yes; but the brink of summer, no! However, if you have mingled patience with utter amazement, you'll learn that the "featha" refers to the weight of these comely new pants, which weigh only seven-eighths of an ounce. That puts them on the cool side of the fence, instead of the St. Vitus. They're pure-dye silk with invisible elastic sides, which results in a flat, smooth figure, naturally molded, with no fastenings to mar the sleek line.

Within reason, featha panties practically sign the death warrant for corseting ladies' evening figures.

Black Fabrics Worn at Night

Paris, June 10 (U.P.).—Though white and pastel tones are chosen for evening gowns during the summer months, there also is a great deal of black, in organdie, chiffon, or other lightweight materials, worn. The models combining white with black for the evening seem to have the preference, such as "Tarentelle" in black chiffon with the balloon sleeves in gay black and white checked chiffon; the black crepe romain model with white crepe sleeves in the form of a bow-knot; the black organdie, embroidered in small white flowers, which has a wide belt and four cala lilies in white pique.

We could keep on indefinitely, but that serves to convey the idea that while there are a few colors and combinations of colors considered smart, that if there is a grain of doubt in your mind, black and white will give you the stamp of fashionable approval.

Rubber Wear For Beaches Seen as Chic

Looks Like Crepe, Is Found Endurable and Can Be Worn White.

By DARE.

WHEN a big, important and successful industry which one never on earth associated with the idea of styles or anything for Miladi save the most utterly practical necessities turns its attention to style, there are only two possible results. One is to be ridiculous, the other is to arouse keen interest and approval.

Well, I've been waiting for the rubber beachwear to either go the way of all flesh, or prove itself interesting enough for me to write about, ahem! The answer is—I'm writing about it.

Rubber beach wear has achieved amazing success and quite astonishing beauty. It remained for a clever designer and an experimenting department to achieve a crepe effect in rubber, for instance, which is the newest of the new in these bathing suits. It is called "krepe-tex," which is the famous lastex all over again in another guise. Unlike lastex, however, which is a rubber thread finely wound with thread; krepe-tex is all rubber, and as its name indicates, a perfect crepe in appearance.

Delightful Styles In Krepe-Tex Material.

In this krepe-tex, one finds delightful styles—the shorts are perfectly tailored, neither too loose nor too tight; the bandanna brassiere top can be tied in a variety of ways, and snaps securely to the front of the suit. The white krepe-tex, the one I myself selected, is particularly lovely—because I think all of us have wanted a white bathing suit at some time or other and never dared! Now it's possible, because these suits are not the least bit transparent, are perfectly sheer and clean white looking, and ever so effective for almost any type of feminine coloring, and particularly lovely as a contrast to suntan!

Of course the crepe rubber is not the only rubber bathing suit. The smooth rubber ones are nice, too, their chief claims to the spotlight being the brightness of their coloring, which is unimpaired by sun, rain or fog or even dirt—something important, this. And their astonishing comfort both in and out of the water. In fact, in a rubber bathing suit one has exactly the same sensation that one has bathing "raw"—and how do I know that? Well * * *!

Now I can hear you ask whether these suits don't tear easily. They did, but they don't now. Any sharp thing—nail or knife, will tear them, to be sure. But they are so welded at the seams—a matter of the most technical processing and pressure you can imagine, that not one in ten thousand ever gives way at the seams. That leaves the possibility of their tearing depending upon contact with something sharp, which is just as much a menace to a cloth suit, don't you think?

Real Style Is Put In Garments.

One thing I am certainly glad to see—and that is that the clever manufacturers have not depended alone upon the novelty of rubber being fashioned into a bathing suit, but have spent time and money putting real style and fit into these garments. They don't fit too tightly—that is, not tighly enough to outline the figure more than one wishes—but they do fit tightly enough to give a lot of support to certain sagging muscles and to induce a perspiration which assists in reducing one in certain places whether one is dieting or not! Yes, they actually reduce, and I have it on the most inside information that next season will see some startling changes along these very lines—or, rather, I should say a serious taking of this fact into consideration.

Miladi chic can be rubber from head to foot this summer! Indeed, she might well be—starting with her bathing suit, which consists of shorts and triangular brassiere top, then adding the little cleverly fashioned cape when she comes out of the water, and the wrap around and knee-length separate skirt, for modesty, perhaps, or certainly for style. Then she takes off her bathing hat—yes, hat I said, not cap—more of these anon. Or perhaps she prefers a cap with a special arrangement on the inside, of tiny triangles which are suction in effect, and actually hold the cap so tightly to the head that the hair does keep dry.

Her white panamode slippers—rubber, but looking like Panama straw—have Cuban heels, my dear! Or she may prefer the white sandal with a cork and crepe rubber sole, which is designed especially to give plenty of pink toes to the air—but no odd joints or bumps.

These hats and sandals are a whole article in themselves—but the suits are today's item. Rubber bathing suits, which feel like nothing on, actually—or like one had nothing on!—that reduce one painlessly and rashlessly, if one lies on the hot sands in them—that mold and uplift the figure just enough and not too much so—that never soil or get dingy looking, and which look as fresh and bright when one comes out of the water as when one goes in—and that are so inexpensive that one's summer beach wardrobe is sure to consist of three or four complete outfits instead of the usual one or two.

Yes, I like 'em!

"Eel Gray" Tone New Shoe Color

Paris, June 10 (U.P.).—Schiaparelli's "eel gray" has been adopted by the shoe world.

Fashion mongers believe that it will be the high style shoe gray of fall and winter. It will make a shoe that can be worn with all other lighter tones of gray, with navy, red and even with black or brown. A problem thus has been solved for the bootmaker.

Another important kid leather shoe color is to be "taupe" for fall. As its name indicates, it is the shade of the little field mole, a brown with just sufficient gray to conform to the gray vogue.

Predictions for the future include a new "faun brown" as splendid for combinations. It should harmonize well with all the browns on the fashion bill of fare, and it is very smart combined with black kid—in the latest half and half type of shoe.

DR. ELLIS ELECTED FAITHFUL NAVIGATOR BY GENERAL ASSEMBLY OF K. OF C.

Garden Party Tea Is Given To Delphians

All Chapters Entertained at Home of Mrs. Latane in Alexandria.

The National Capital Chapter of the Delphians met at 9:30 Wednesday morning in Jelleff's Little Theater for the final meeting of the 1932-1933 course, completing the third year's work, which covered the subject of drama up to the eighteenth century.

A comprehensive review of the important phases touched on during the year was presented by the president, Mrs. H. A. Latane. The lesson, "Three Judgments at a Blow," under the leadership of Mrs. F. A. Casteel, was covered by Mrs. P. M. Chichester, Mrs. A. J. Maxwell and Mrs. Charles F. Schoonmaker, with general discussion by the members as a whole.

For the year 1933-1934, the officers elected were Mrs. P. M. Chichester, president; Mrs. A. C. Christie, vice president; Mrs. R. M. Kelley, secretary; Mrs. J. B. Hartley, treasurer; Mrs. Thomas J. Rice, chairman of advisory board; Mrs. Allan S. Wolfe and Mrs. Retta Maybee, assistants on advisory board.

Following the lesson, a parting gift was presented to the retiring president, Mrs. H. A. Latane, by Mrs. Arabelle H. Norton, in verse appropriate to the occasion and Delphian work and spirit. The gavel was then turned over to the incoming president, Mrs. P. M. Chichester.

Yesterday National Capital Chapter entertained Delphian chapters of the city at a garden party tea at the home of Mrs. H. A. Latane, Alexandria.

Russian Art Discussed By Delta Sigma Chapter.

Delta Sigma Chapter of the Delphian Society met Monday at the Shoreham Hotel, the president, Mrs. C. C. Cranston, in the chair.

The program for the day, "Russian Art," was presented under the leadership of Mrs. F. W. Braden, who gave a brief outline of the beginnings of Russian art.

"The Novgorod School" was presented by Mrs. L. M. Fuller. This school flourished until the seventeenth century, and is known as the golden period of Russian art. Pictures of this school were descussed by Mrs. Ruth H. Snodgrass.

Mrs. Guy Mason spoke on "Eighteenth and Nineteenth Century Painters."

"Later Russian Artists" was presented by Mrs. M. O. Hayes. These included Vereschagin, Vrubel, Levitan, Nesterow, Bilibin and Roerich.

"Religious and Sermon" pictures were discussed by Mrs. H. C. James. Pictures by later painters were discussed by Mrs. Charles Riordan.

A summary of the lesson was given by the president who said that Russian dancers set the standard for the world; that their theaters are the most artistic in the world; and that their art is easy to understand because it tells a story and expresses so vividly the varied feelings of the people. "Russia is one of the few places where there is an element of vigor which is not savage, but quietly profound," she said.

The chapter lunched at the Russian Troika, and later were conducted through the National Gallery and the Phillips Gallery by Mrs. Charles Val Clear, of the Art League.

At the next meeting, Monday, June 19, the annual election will be held.

Roman Comedy, Program Of Gamma Chapter.

Gamma Chapter, Delphians, met at the Shoreham Hotel, Monday at 8 p. m. Miss Emma Hoffer, vice president, presided. The literary program, "Roman Comedy," was under the leadership of Mrs. Pearl Friede. Topic reports were given by Miss Ellen Bulger, Mrs. Esma M. Lachowicz, Miss Eveline Kay and Mrs. Alice C. Elliott. The play, "Menaechemi," was read in dialogue by Mrs. Mary Mathiot, Miss Olive Newbold, Mrs. Ella G. Prescott, Mrs. O. N. Pausley, Miss Clara Dickerson, Mrs. Evelyn Haller and Miss Mary G. Wolford.

The retiring president, Mrs. Esma Maybe Lachowicz, was presented with the past presidents' jewel by the vice president, Miss Emma Hoffer. Guests for the evening were Miss Dorothy E. Hardin and Miss Evelyn Scott.

Relief Corps

Phil Sheridan Woman's Relief Corps met at the Thomas Circle Club, Mrs. Hattie Canada, president, presiding. Mrs. Cora Manoly, department patriotic instructor, was present and asked the assistance of the corps in Flag Day exercises, which will be held June 14 at the Sylvan Theater instead of on the Capitol steps as in previous years.

Mrs. Genevieve Craig reported help given several needy families and there were several calls made on the sick. Mrs. Charlotte Cary reported that she had the tickets for the Chesapeake Bay excursion June 24. See Mrs. Cary about your tickets at once.

Mrs. Martha Mangum gave a birthday reception for her father, Mr. Hazard Wheeler, Civil War veteran, on his eighty-seventh birthday June 10, at her home, 514½ K street northwest.

Mrs. Lida Oldroyd spoke in behalf of the golden anniversary of the Woman's Relief Corps, which will be observed throughout the country July 23-26. Mrs. Oldroyd has been a member of the organization for 50 years, and said it was the first patriotic organization in the world, and told of the wonderful work accomplished and especially of the privileges and opportunities of the Department of the Potomac Woman's Relief Corps.

Mrs. Pearl Miner Wilson presented a complete set of books, "Lives of Our Presidents," to the corps, which, in turn, were presented by the corps to the Americanization School, Thursday evening, June 8, at the Webster School.

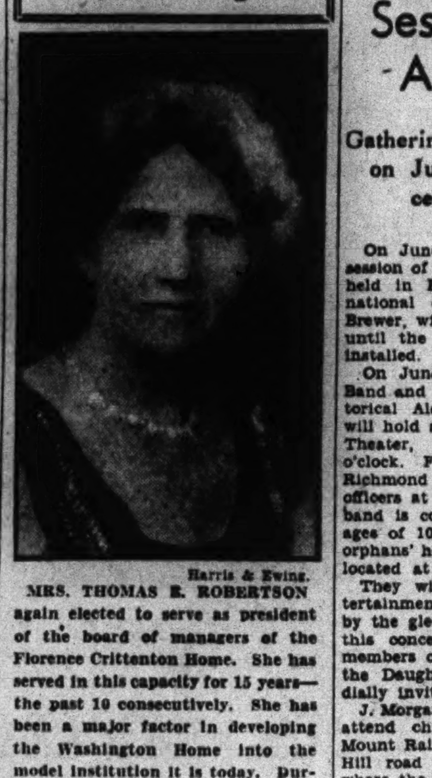
The next meeting of the corps will be held at the Thomas Circle Club, July 7.

Writers' League

The Writers' League of Washington will hold the first of its informal meetings of the summer at Hains Point, Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock, with a picnic luncheon. Clark Palmer Cole, vice president, presided at the last meeting. Miss Willard Howe read her prize-winning story, "Giant of the Battle," and Mrs. Ione Lee Mooney read a short story, "The Pewter Teapot's Two Dents." Miss Oeston read a poem, "Ode to a Wake."

Guests were Miss Rand, who told of the Javanese play, "Slamantan," and Miss Fitzgerald, of the Connecticut branch of the League of American Penwomen.

President Again



Harris & Ewing.

MRS. THOMAS R. ROBERTSON again elected to serve as president of the board of managers of the Florence Crittenton Home. She has served in this capacity for 15 years—the past 10 consecutively. She has been a major factor in developing the Washington Home into the model institution it is today. During her presidency the new home at 4759 Conduit road was secured and completely paid for and the hospital built and fully equipped. Mrs. Robertson is also vice chairman of the National Crittenton Mission Central Extension Committee.

Elks' Service For Flag Day Put on Radio

Grand Exalted Ruler F. E. Thompson Will Be Heard Wednesday, 2:15 P. M.

The Elks Grand Lodge statute adopted in 1908 makes it mandatory for each subordinate lodge to observe Flag Day on June 14 in each year. Thus the Order of Elks was the first and still is the only fraternal organization which formally celebrates the birthday of the United States flag. Through the courtesy of the National Broadcasting Co. there will be a National-wide broadcast of the Flag Day services to be held under the auspices of the Elk lodges of Virginia at Monticello, Va. This patriotic service, consisting of musical numbers, history of the flag and an address by Grand Exalted Ruler Floyd E. Thompson and other prominent Elks, will go on the air Wednesday, June 14, at 2:15 p. m.

J. Forest Reilly, chairman, and his committee have arranged to accommodate a large number of members and their friends who will attend this most impressive flag ritual, to be exemplified by the officers of Washing Lodge, No. 15, Wednesday, June 14, at 8 p. m. Past Exalted Ruler John J. Fitzgerald will deliver the address.

The board of governors can hardly fill the numerous engagements for the Elks Boys' Band. Today they go to Annapolis Lodge, Wednesday in the Lodge and next Sunday at Cobb Island, Md.

Fred W. Kneessi has invited the entertainment committee to celebrate his seventy-third birthday anniversary at Cobb Island, Md., on Sunday, June 18.

Phi Delta Gamma

Beta Chapter, of Phi Delta Gamma, held its monthly meeting at the home of Dr. Swischer, in Garrett Park, with Mrs. Helen Plitt, Miss Ruth DeGroot, Miss Mildred Hirt and Miss Agnes Farrell as hostesses. After the installation of the newly elected officers, Mrs. Bessie Ledig, a former Goucher graduate, gave an informal talk on Peru. Mrs. Ledig has lived in Peru for the past three years and illustrated her interesting talk with exhibits of pottery and weaving.

The officers who were installed were Phoebe Knappen, president; Ellen Anderson, vice president; recording secretary, Helen Plitt; corresponding secretary, Dorothy Corson; registrar, Elise Wildman; historian, Mildred Green; chaplain, Levina Bolton.

Soroptimist Club

The business meeting of the Washington Soroptimist Club took place at the Willard Hotel on Wednesday. President Nora B. Huffman presided.

The Washington Soroptimist project of bringing young girls and boys of high-school age who have proven to be the best citizens throughout the year to Washington from cities where Soroptimist clubs exist, is well under way for this year.

The program for the entertainment of Mercy Ellen Crehan, of Vancouver, B. C., president of the American Federation of Soroptimist Clubs, will consist of a tea given by Mrs. Mary Lewis, vice president of the American Federation on June 29; a joint dinner by the Washington and Baltimore club at Olney Inn on June 30; a sightseeing tour of Washington on July 1; a luncheon in Baltimore by the Baltimore Soroptimist Club on July 2, and another sightseeing tour on July 3. President Crehan will entrain for Montreal and Toronto on July 4.

The attendance prize at the meeting was drawn by Mrs. Julia Grey, and was donated by Mrs. Mary Lewis. The club voted to recess for the summer on July 12

Zonta Club

Zonta Club met Wednesday for luncheon at the Y. W. C. A., Seventeenth and K streets northwest. Karl I. Corby was the speaker. The president, Dr. Edith Seville Coale, had as her guest Mrs. Sallie E. Munson, of New York, mother of Ona Munson, of the National Players, and Miss Lucille Rosedale was the guest of Jennie Berliner.

Junior Order Session Meets At Richmond

On June 20, the national council session of the Jr. O. U. A. M. will be held in Richmond, Va., where the national councilor, Dr. Charles E. Brewer, will preside over the session, until the newly elected officers are installed.

On June 18 the Jr. O. U. A. M. Band and Glee Club will stop in historical Alexandria, Va., where they will hold a concert in the Richmond Theater, Sunday evening, at 8 o'clock. From there they will go to Richmond to accompany the national officers at the national session. This band is composed of boys from the ages of 10 to 18, and are from the orphans' home of the Jr. O. U. A. M., located at Tiffin, Ohio.

They will furnish a musical entertainment, and songs will be sung by the glee club. The admission to this concert will be free, and all members of the Jr. O. U. A. M. and the Daughters of America are cordially invited to attend.

J. Morgan Read Council, No. 1, will attend church services tonight at Mount Rainier M. E. Church, Bunker Hill road and Thirty-fourth street, where the Rev. H. Baker will deliver the sermon at 8 o'clock. All members of the order are invited.

Benning Council Increasing Membership.

The council which is rapidly increasing its membership, Benning Council, met on Monday evening, June 5, with Vice Councilor Long presiding. One of the candidates of this council, Mr. Lawrence Hufnagle, was taken to Edward J. Ross Council, No. 26, where the degrees of virtue, liberty and patriotism, were conferred upon him, and he was escorted there by Brothers George Anderson and H. Graves. Rev. O. F. Sherwood, of Waynesbow, Pa., a member of this council, paid us a surprise visit, and was the principal speaker of the evening. He also congratulated this council on the way the members have stuck together and built up the council during such hard times. The Rev. J. R. Glem, of Strauss Memorial Church, also made very interesting remarks.

A communiciation was received from the Tiffin, Ohio, Orphans' Home stating that the boy's band and glee club of the Jr. O. U. A. M. would hold a concert in the Richmond Theater, Alexandria, Va., Sunday evening, June 18, at 8 o'clock. Remarks were made by State Deputy William H. McClung, Thomas Ingels, Jo. R. Doggett and R. Lloyd.

William Gscheidle presided over J. Morgan Read Council, which met Friday evening, June 2, in the Star Hall, Mount Rainier, Md. State Conductor Edwin B. Pitts made an address on the principals of the order. The council made final arrangements to attend church services on Sunday evening June 11, Mount Rainier M. E. Church, where the Rev. H. Baker will deliver the sermon at 8 o'clock. The next meeting of this council will be held on Friday, when the nomination of officers will be the main attraction of the evening.

Anacostia Council Welcomes Past Councilors.

The last session of Anacostia Council was presided over by T. P. Redd, on June 5, Monday evening. Three new applicants for membership were received, and one member was reinstated in the council. A communication was received and accepted from the Tiffin, Ohio, Orphan's Home stating that the Boys Band and Glee Club of the Jr. O. U. A. M. will hold a concert in the Richmond Theater, Alexandria, Va., Sunday evening, June 18, at 8 o'clock.

The nomination of new officers, for the term of six months, of this council will be held at the next meeting of the council tomorrow. At the opening of the meeting the councilor welcomed nine past councilors of this council and Past State Councilor J. D. Simpson and State Deputy W. M. Martin. Remarks were made by State Deputy W. M. Martin, H. I. Beall, R. L. Little and others.

In Junior Temple, 808 I street northwest, on Thursday evening, Edward J. Ross Council was presided over by the councilor, W. Miller. The initiatory team of this council conferred the degrees upon Lawrence Hufnagle, a candidate from Benning Council, No. 21. Remarks were made by several brothers of the council. The next regular meeting of this council will be held Thursday, when the nomination of officers for this council will take place.

The last regular session of John L. Burnett Council was held on Wednesday evening. The chairman of the athletic committee reported that the ball team of this council is dated for every Sunday during this month. On June 22 the final nominations of officers of this council will be held. All members are requested to be present.

Liberty Bell Council To Attend at Richmond.

On Saturday, June 3, in the Northeast Masonic Temple, Liberty Bell Council met with Councilor L. E. West presiding. A large delegation from this council will attend Richmond Theater in Alexandria, Va., on Sunday evening, June 18, at 8 o'clock, where the Boys Band and Glee Club of the Tiffin, Ohio, Orphans Home of the J. O. U. A. M., will entertain the members with a concert. During the evening remarks were made by State Councilor C. H. Hild, Junior Past State Councilor F. C. Manginn, State Secretary J. Prender, and many of the brothers of this council. At the next meeting of this council, which will be held Saturday, the feature attraction of the evening will be the nomination of officers for this council.

Councilor A. E. Tavenner presided over Star-Spangled Banner Council, which met June 2 in the Junior Temple, 808 I street northwest. After the business of the evening was transacted refreshments were served by the good of the order committee. Those who spoke were State Vice Councilor E. M. Garrett, State Chaplain George L. Myers, Past Councilor W. M. Boyd, State Deputy O. Sunday and others. The final nominations of officers for this council will be held Friday, which is the next meeting night.

Memorial Rite By I. O. O. F. This Evening

Service Will Be Solemnized at National Christian Church for Dead.

Memorial services in tribute to the deceased members of the Order of Odd Fellows since last memorial services will be held this evening at the National Christian Church, Fourteenth and Massachusetts avenue northwest. Grand Chaplain Ashlan F. Harlan, chairman of the committee, announces that all plans have been completed and it is expected that the services will be very impressive. All members of the order are requested to attend and assemble at the church at 7:45, prior to entering the church at 8 o'clock. Subordinate bodies, Rebekah bodies, encampments and cantons are expected to turn out in full force. The officers of the Grand Lodge, Rebekah Assembly and Canton will attend in a body.

Grand Sire William F. Jackson of the Sovereign Grand Lodge is coming from Fort Scott, Kansas, to this city and has called for a conference of the officers of all grand bodies and the membership in general. The conference will be held in the Odd Fellows Temple on Wednesday evening, this week. The grand sire is desirous of having every officer of the grand bodies, also the officers of every subordinate, Rebekah and encampment branch present at this conference. The conference is expected to be important and all members and officers are urged to attend. The meeting will be presided over by the grand sire.

Eastern Lodge, No. 7, held an important business meeting last Wednesday evening. Arrangements were made to attend the funeral of Past Grand James L. Whiteside, of the lodge, one of the oldest and most active members of the order and the jurisdiction. The funeral took place from his home on Kearney street northeast, on Thursday afternoon, burial being in Glenwood Cemetery. A large delegation of the lodge members were in attendance. James L. Whiteside was well know throughout the jurisdiction.

Grand Guardian Linwood E. Donaldson called a meeting of the committee on banquet Monday evening in the I. O. O. F. Temple to discuss the advisability of holding a banquet in the latter part of the year. The committee took action towards postponing any action on holding a banquet until September, when the committee will meet again and take definite steps on the matter.

Lodges are busy with degree work, many of them having secured quite a number of candidates. Excelsior Lodge, No. 17, the Grand Master's own lodge, leads the jurisdiction at present, with additional new members numbering 12 candidates. Indications point to a banner year in the matter of applications of new members in the various lodges.

Delta Delta Delta

Delta Delta Delta Alliance will hold a business meeting tomorrow evening at 6 o'clock, at the home of Mrs. Howard Eales, 9118 Colesville Pike, Silver Spring, Md. The guests will first have supper in the garden at which the hostess will be the newly elected officers, Mrs. Howard Eales, president; Mrs. Bert Frost, vice president; Miss Marjorie Shaw, secretary; Mrs. Rollo G. Plumb, treasurer, and Mrs. George O'B. Bailey, correspondent to the Tri Delta magazine.

The yearbook directory will be presented by the chairman, Mrs. Edward H. Norton; the Pan-Hellenic relations will be discussed by Mrs. Amos A. Steele, delegate; Miss Eleanor O'Neal, liaison officer, will report, and the local chairman of the international convention of Delta Delta Delta, Mrs. James G. Cumming, will give the tentative plans for the meeting in June, 1934.

Wesley Heights

The last meeting of the year of the Wesley Heights Child Study Club was held at the home of Mrs. Joseph Elward on Hawthorne street on June 5. The following officers were elected: Mrs. Charles C. Gager, president; Mrs. William M. Ballinger, vice president; Mrs. LeRoy Hartley, secretary-treasurer; Mrs. Gregor Macpherson, corresponding secretary; Mrs. H. Laurie Garrett, social secretary, and Mrs. Dean M. Rathbun, librarian. Plans were discussed for the coming year and refreshments were served by the hostess, with Mrs. Ernest Hadley and Mrs. Walter Davidson assisting.

The last meeting of the Wesley Heights Florence Crittenton Circle will be held at the Brook Farm Tea House tomorrow, with Mrs. Howard G. Nichols, retiring president, in charge of arrangements. Reports will be received from various committees and the new officers elected at the last meeting will take over their duties. The new officers are Mrs. William Earl Clark, president; Mrs. Horace Dawson, vice president; Mrs. Harold Anderson, treasurer; Mrs. A. G. Wenley, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Homer Dawson, recording secretary.

Confederates Entertained by Lee Chapter

Luncheon Served to Camp 171, Whose Membership Has Shrunk to 11.

Camp 171, United Confederate Veterans, Gen. W. L. Wilkerson, commander, held its monthly meeting Tuesday at Confederate Memorial Hall, 1322 Vermont avenue northwest. Luncheon was served to the veterans and their guests by the Robert E. Lee Chapter, of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, Miss Ora Smith, president; Mrs. Maud Howell Smith, chairman of the luncheon committee. Other members of the luncheon committee were Mrs. Roberta Edmonston, Mrs. Oscar McWhorter, Mrs. Claude Bennett and Mrs. Horace Whittaker. They were assisted by Mrs. E. N. Emmart, hostess of Confederate Memorial Hall.

The serving of this monthly luncheon to the Confederate Veterans has been observed by the Robert E. Lee Chapter uninterruptedly for ten years, during which time Camp 171 has diminished through answers to the last roll call from nearly 150 to only 11 members. But the feeble remnant is still proudly and valiantly carrying on with the help of their good friends.

Guest of honor at the luncheon was Miss Byrd Mock, a granddaughter of Col. Thomas Jefferson Patton, of Confederate war fame. She received an ovation from the veterans after having recited her ode to the City of Washington and its founder, "Washington, My Washington." Miss Mock also recited a touching poem, "The Old Confed."

Miss Mock, who during her former residence in Washington served the veterans as press correspondent, was reappointed in this capacity by Gen. Wilkerson, commander, who gave a fine report of the annual memorial exercises held last Sunday in Arlington in honor of the Confederate dead. The memorial address was made by Representative John E. Rankin, of Missouri. Music was by the Marine Band and by the Confederate double quartet. Gen. Wilkerson was master of ceremonies. The invocation was given by Dr. Samuel Judson Porter, pastor of the First Baptist Church, and the benediction was pronounced by Dr. John E. Copenhaver, pastor of Epworth M. E. Church South. Marx E. Kahn recited "Scatter the Flowers" preceding the decoration of the graves. Prayer was offered by Dr. J. E. Briggs, Fifth Baptist Church.

Organizations assisting in the ceremonies at Arlington were the Daughters of the Confederacy, Sons of the Confederacy, Children of the Confederacy, Confederate Memorial Association, United Spanish War Veterans, U. S. A., Department of the District of Columbia, and the American Legion, U. S. A., Department of the District of Columbia.

After the strewing of flowers over the graves of the Confederate dead, wreaths were placed on the tomb of Gen. Joe Wheeler and on the tomb of the unknown dead.

The decoration committee was Mrs. Maud Howell Smith, chairman; Miss Ora Smith, Mrs. Albion Tuck, Mrs. E. N. Emmart; music committee, Miss Lillian Shenoweth. The flower committee was Mrs. Gabriel Edmonston, chairman; Mrs. Benjamin Grady, Miss Lucille Locker, Miss Virginia Grayson; executive committee, Gen. W. L. Wilkerson, chairman; W. F. Swaringen, Gen. H. Oden Lake and Capt. D. C. Grayson.

Knights of Pythias

Members of Syracusians Lodge, Knights of Pythias, in conjunction with Rathbone Temple Pythian Sisters, made a pilgrimage to the Hines Memorial Pythian Home, at Newmarket, Va., going by way of Luray and returning by way of Winchester, Va.

On Thursday evening a large crowd from this lodge and Rathbone Temple went on a moonlight ride down the Potomac. On June 30 there will be an entertainment and special feature in Syracusians Lodge.

Forest Oak Lodge, of Gaithersburg, received the following applications for membership at its last meeting: Charles M. Pope and Preston L. Payne. The lodge will hold its monthly entertainment on June 19, following the conferring of the knight rank. Nomination and election of officers for the ensuing term were held Monday.

The annual memorial services will be held on Sunday, June 18.

The Past Chiefs' Association will meet tomorrow evening instead of Tuesday at the home of Mrs. Addie Freeman, 3421 Twenty-fourth street northeast. It held a card party at Southern Dairies on Tuesday.

The Grand Lodge will conduct the annual memorial services of the order Tuesday, June 13, at the temple, 1012 Ninth street northwest.

Washington Company, No. 1, U. R. K. of P., will participate in the Memorial Day parade at Fredericksburg, Va., June 25, and will be escorted by the Girls' Drum and Bugle Corps of the Nelson A. Miles Auxiliary, No. 8, U. S. S. W. V., under Capt. Helen Kennicutt.

The company appointed an executive committee, consisting of George O. Sunday, W. W. Clements, under the chairmanship of R. B. Berryman. Flag Bearer Kate Young was appointed chairman of the entertainment committee and she will hold a 500 card party in the basement of the temple Monday, June 19.

Past Grand Chancellor Newcomb was appointed to vote the hall stock at the next meeting of the association. He recapitulated the activities of the company during the past year. Maj. Gen. Tuggle favorably commented upon the company having the only woman flag bearer in the United States and the only female member of the uniform rank. Brother Brown, of Alexandria, Va., and Lee B. Emory were elected to membership and initiated. The next meeting of the company will be June 19. The first meeting in July will be omitted. Lieut. C. F. Stoll and Sergt. Clements drilled the company.

Loyal Order of Moose

Columbia Lodge, No. 126, L. O. O. M., will meet at Moose Hall, 1414 I street northwest, Tuesday evening, when business of importance, particularly with reference to the continuance of the clubrooms, will come up for consideration and action. Under the summer schedule adopted in May, this coming meeting will be the only meeting of the lodge during June, and a large attendance is expected.

Director General Davis, who has just returned to Washington after a long absence due to illness, is expected to be present and address the Past Supreme Dictator Frederick N. Zihlman will also attend and

EASTERN STAR ACTIVITIES

The choral unit of the Eastern Star will hold a rehearsal in room No. 2, Masonic Temple, on Saturday, at 7:30 p. m.

Hope Chapter, No. 30, will meet Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock in the Masonic Temple. Following the regular business session the degrees of the order will be conferred. Worthy Matron Annie L. Fish and Worthy Patron Edward Towers have arranged a very impressive program.

Associate Matron Ruth Baujan has called a meeting of the home board committee at the home of Sister Florence Morsell, 5318 Kansas avenue northwest, on June 12, at 8 p. m.

Sister Florence Lewis, chairman of the floral circle, announces a card party at the Southern Dairies, 60 M street northeast, on Friday, at 8:30 p. m.

The matron of Columbia Chapter announces that the meeting tomorrow will be devoted to business and a special social program. The Star Point Society, junior past grand matron Edith A. Williams, president, will meet Wednesday at 8 p. m., at the home of Past Matron Mrs. Clara O. Leverton, 3651 New Hampshire avenue.

The officer's society met June 6 at the home of the marshal and president, Mrs. Alice Atkinson, 4907 Fourth street northwest, for business and a social time. Plans were set afoot for a day's outing June 18 to the summer home of Mrs. Mabel S. White, Port Tobacco, Md., on a bay of the Potomac River, 30 miles from Washington. There will be boating, fishing, crabbing, swimming, hiking and games. Port Tobacco is one of the most interesting historical spots around Washington. It was a very active center during colonial and revolutionary days. A center of tobacco shipping. In those days there was a sufficient draught of water for large merchant vessels. About 45 years ago there was a tremendous flood that filled in the bay so as to render it useless for a shipping point. The Smithsonian Institute is now excavating some of the mounds on the landing place, near the old remains of the burned down brick warehouse and has already found some wonderful Indian relics. The digging is now in progress. Nearby are the remains of the interesting Rose Hill Gardens, developed by the Dr. Brown family several hundred years ago. It was the home of the Dr. Gustavus Brown who attended Gen. Washington during his last illness. Dr. Kebler will tell those who go a wonderful story.

At the next meeting of Friendship Chapter on June 13, the charter members of the chapter and its past matrons and past patrons will be special guests. The star points and line officers have charge of the evening. The Chapter will close during July and August, but a number of activities are being planned during that period and they will be announced from time to time.

Tuesday evening after routine business the endowment committee of Electa Chapter will present a play. The next meeting of this committee will be at the home of Mrs. Elizabeth Koontz with Mrs. Blanche Reed assistant hostess.

The annual picture of the chapter will be given to Marshall Hall, July 18, with Norman Murphy, worthy patron, chairman.

Worthy Matron Anne I. Hartline, of Miriam Chapter, announces that the chapter will celebrate its sixteenth birthday Monday night. After the regular meeting, there will be an entertainment which will be followed by dancing in the banquet hall. The Worthy Matron cordially invited all members of the Eastern Star to attend this birthday party. The Home Board of the Chapter entertained the Campbell-Loeffler Sewing Club at the Masonic & Eastern Star Home recently.

Lebanon Chapter will entertain the children of its members on Tuesday evening, June 13. Past Matron Lillie McKenzie has charge of the program.

Saint John's Lodge Chapter will have "Kiddie' Night" at the next regular meeting, June 19. Edna Anderson is in charge of the entertainment. Members having children wishing to take part will please call Lincoln 7297-J.

At this meeting, the members having birth anniversaries in June, July and August will be special guests. Please notify the chairman, Mildred Dower, Col. 6565. Entertainment and refreshments.

Worthy Matron Mrs. Bernice Carlton, of Brookland Chapter, announces the meeting on Wednesday night will be kiddies night, under the direction of Mrs. Loraine Watt. On June 22 Mrs. Carlton will serve dinner on the lawn of her home, 1359 Lawrence street northwest.

The past matrons and patrons of Areme Chapter were entertained at Areme's regular meeting Wednesday night. The worthy matron, Mary Jane Jester welcomed the guests and Mrs. Selma Klein and Mrs. Rose Hartung sang a very amusing song, accompanied by Mr. Earl Klein. A group of songs was rendered by Mrs. Marie C. Deal, associate conductress of Bethlehem Chapter, accompanied by Mrs. Elsie Harvey Weaver. A comedy skit was given by Mrs. Edith W. Clark, worthy matron of Naomi Chapter, and Mrs. Annie B. Wiley, past matron of Naomi Chapter. Refreshments were served after the meeting.

More announcements were made about the excursion and crab feast July 8 at Chesapeake Beach. Mrs. Selina Foster, chairman of the obituary committee, submitted resolutions upon the death of Mrs. Mary J. Brashears, mother of Past Grand Patron Edward S. Brashears. The Dramatic Club met last Monday evening at the home of Mrs. Rose Hartung.

The home board of Washington Centennial Chapter will be tentertained at the beach home of Mrs. Margaret Birmingham, Plum Point, Md., Wednesday, at an all-day picnic. The ladies of the board were recent hostesses at the Campbell-Loffler Sewing Circle monthly meeting held at the Masonic and O. E. S. Home.

Members of the chapter have been invited to attend the opening June meeting of the Silver Spring, Md., Chapter, O. E. S.

The Endowment Committee June meeting will be a picnic held June 22 at 5 o'clock p. m., in Rock Creek Park, Sixteenth and Kennedy streets entrance. The chapter will meet Wednesday for the last time during the summer months, after which it will be in recess until Friday, September 1.

At its regular meeting Friday, Lebanon Lodge, No. 7, will enjoy a short address by Past Master Blair McKenzie, and brief talks by Senior Warden James Brown, Senior Steward Fred Minnigh and Junior Steward Edward Payne. All will speak on Masonic subjects. Refreshments will be served.

Bethlehem Chapter at their meeting on Tuesday evening will have as their guests the home folks who are members of the O. E. S. The officers of the general home board will also be the guests of the evening. The officers of Bethel, No. 2, of Job's Daughters, will exemplify the degrees at this meeting.

The Star Point Society of this chapter had a dinner at the Girls' Friendly Holiday House, on the Mount Vernon boulevard, on Saturday. Dinner was served, followed by games and enthertainment. The next meeting of the home board will be held at the summer home of Past Matron Malissa Talbert, at Arundel Bay, on June 22.

The home board's "tacky" party of Bethany Chapter will be held at 614 E street northwest Thursday evening. The sunshine committee, Mrs. Corinne Edwards chairman, with assisting hostesses Mrs. Bieber, Anna White and Mrs. Horton, will be entertained by Mrs. Lila White at her home, 3122 Mount Pleasant street northwest Thursday at 12:30 p. m. The chapter will recess during the months of July and August.

Loyalty Chapter conducted routine business at the meeting on Wednesday evening. Mrs. Beulah Bonaface was installed as Martha.

The chapter will hold religious services at the Masonic and Eastern Star Home today at 3 p. m., in charge of the Rev. Mr. Johnson, of Grace Baptist Church. The next meeting will be the final meeting of the season, preceded by a pot-luck dinner.

Masonic Blue Lodges

East Gate Lodge, No. 34, has been keeping a record of attendance of its membership during the last year. A tabulation shows that out of a resident membership of 304, the lodge had 107 of its members in attendance during one or more communications during the last three months, or a percentage of 35.1. The M. M. degree was conferred by the lodge on June 7 and the next meeting, Wednesday, will be for rehearsal and instruction. Brother Junior Warden Carson has been appointed liaison officer between the lodge and the Masonic Service Bureau.

St. John's Lodge, No. 11, presented an evening for and in charge of its past masters last Friday night. The third degree was conferred by the past officers with the cast for the various stations and places selected by Brother Barnes. T. J. Trodden New Admiral, Fourth Degree

W. Francis Delaney Chosen Grand Knight at Carroll Council Meeting.

Officers were elected last week by the Washington General Assembly, Fourth Degree, Knights of Columbus and also by Carroll Council of the Knights.

Dr. George R. Ellis becomes faithful navigator of the general assembly, succeeding Thomas J. Trodden, who becomes faithful admiral. The meeting was held at the Mayflower Hotel last Monday night. In surrendering his position Admiral Trodden presented his annual report which recounted the activities of the assembly during the year.

Other officers named were: Faithful captain, Carmine Garafola; faithful pilot, Richard F. Fields; faithful comptroller, Wilfred P. Ross; faithful friar, Rev. W. Coleman Nevils, S. J., president of Georgetown University; faithful scribe, Frederic J. Diegelmann; faithful purser, Thomas K. Gallaher; faithful inner sentinel, William J. Kelly; faithful outer sentinel, Michael O'Brien.

The annual election of officers of Carroll Council was held Tuesday, at which time the following were elected: W. Francis Delaney, grand knight; Henry J. Kane, jr., deputy grand knight; John H. Pellen, chancellor; Louis A. Kelly, recorder; Joseph A. Handley, treasurer; James B. Flynn, advocate; W. C. P. Morris, warden; Louis E. Rosenberger, inside guard; Vincent Childs, outside guard; Joseph Quinn, trustee; Michael J. Rattigan and Thomas J. Hughes, delegates to building company; John F. Dunn, delegate to State convention. Henry J. Kane was reappointed as financial secretary, and William D. Willcoxon and Charles J. Tobin, delegates to chapter.

The newly elected officers will be installed the early part of Juy.

The council voted to hold but one meeting each month during the summer, and the next meeting will be held on Tuesday, July 18.

Red Men

The memorial service was held under the direction of Great Directress Anna Jarboe on Wednesday at White Eagle Council. The memorial drill was given with members of all councils participating, with Mrs. Helen Roland as degree mistress. Mrs. Lulu Mastin acted as mistress of ceremonies, with Mrs. Louise Moriarity as flower bearer. A duet was given by Mrs. Louise Gill and Brother Martin Williams.

Idaho Council, No.1, conferred the adoption degree at its last meeting.

Waneta Council, No. 6, will hold a candlelight tea on Tuesday. Great Sachem Harry J. Thompson, Great Directess Anna Jarboe and Past Great Directress Helen Roland paid official visits. A draping of the charter service was exemplified under the direction of Past Great Directress Cleada E. Horne in memory of Edgar A. Proffit, by Pocahontas Damaris Colbert, Wenonah Blanche Stone and Prophetess Ploris Nally. Eulogies were by Harry J. Thompson, Charles Storm, John W. Tidler and William Nally, past great sachem.

Mineola Council, No. 8, will give a bingo party, on Saturday. Mrs. Annie Swindells and Mrs. Mary Douglas, chairmen. Mrs. Alice Muller was installed as keeper of wampum.

Hiawatha Council, No. 9, will have a card party Saturday, June 24.

James T. Norvell, of Logan Tribe, No. 8, has recovered from his recent indisposition and is now out.

Women Geographers

Newly elected officers of the Society of Women Geographers, an international organization with headquarters in Washington, were inducted into office on June 1.

Mrs. Franklin Adams, for 8 years president of the society, has been elected the honorary president. Mrs. Adams, who is an explorer, author and lecturer, has trailed the world in the interest of her field: Spain and Portugal, their colonies past and present; the American aborigines, from Alaska to Terra del Fuego. Mrs. Adams will leave Washington this coming winter, when her husband retires as counselor of the Pan-American Union, to start once more on the world trail.

The following Washington women have been elected to serve on the council: Elsie Bell Grosvenor (Mrs. Gilbert H. Grosvenor), Caroline Benedict Carroll (Mrs. Mitchell Carroll), Alice Tisdale Hobart (Mrs. Earle T. Hobart), Frances Carpenter Huntington (Mrs. W. Chapin Huntington), Miss Helen Wells Seymour.

Curley Club

The tomb of Mother Seton on the spacious grounds of St. Joseph's Church, Emmittsburg, Md., was the scene of the pilgrimage of members of the Curley Club last Sunday. About 50 members of the club gathered in K. of C. Hall at 11 o'clock, where automobiles conveyed the little group to the historic spot in Maryland.

After luncheon on the spacious grounds surrounding the historic St. Joseph's Church in the Valley, sisters attached to the several colleges on the grounds conducted the little group to the several places of interest. Benediction in the chapel at 4 o'clock completed the program for the day. The pilgrimage to Emmittsburg was conducted under the auspices of the Literary Circle of the Curley Club, with Miss Ethel Ammon in charge of arrangements.

Members of the executive committee will gather next Thursday evening at the residence of Miss Dorothy Barrett, 10 Bryant street northeast, for the monthly meeting.

HOLLYWOOD VISION AT ST. PETERSBURG

Buster Keaton Plans to Make Six Pictures There in Next Two Years.

St. Petersburg, Fla., June 10 (A.P.). Visions of becoming an "Eastern Hollywood" are filling some St. Petersburg minds now that Buster Keaton has announced his intention of staying here two years to make at least six pictures.

The Keaton pictures are to be made at Kennedy City, located on what was formerly called Wheedon's Island, where Aubrey M. Kennedy has established a studio. Kennedy says a new sound stage, one of the largest in the country, will be constructed for the Keaton's pictures.

Lew Lipton came here with Buster and will serve as manager and partner of the comedian. Who will play with Keaton in the St. Petersburg films has not been announced, but Lipton says an outstanding commedienne will be chosen.

Meantime Olive Borden, now playing in the first full length feature film ever made here, professes a belief that St. Petersburg will become an important center of motion picture production and will rival Hollywood.

Both Keaton and Lipton assert that they consider St. Petersburg ideal for pictures, and that they hope it will develop within the next year or so into a real center for picture production. Marshall Neilan will direct the Keaton pictures.

Lipton says he is enthusiastic about the opportunity for pictures here.

Ideal for Great Drama.

"The other day I saw a pack of dreamy-eyed, ear-drooping bloodhounds," he said, "and at once it came to me that this would be the ideal place to make 'Uncle Tom's Cabin.' I saw that it could be made here mostly out of doors with perfectly natural sets that would cost a fortune in Hollywood. So I think we will have Keaton do 'Uncle Tom's Cabin.'"

Lipton says both he and Keaton have "reached the point where there are things much more important than making money."

"We are not working just to make money," he continued. "We could quit now and live comfortably, but we are not ready to go into inactivity. So we cut loose from Hollywood and propose to make pictures according to our own ideas."

Seniors to Speak At Takoma Rites

Arrangements have been completed for the commencement exercises of the junior and senior groups of the Takoma-Silver Spring High School this week, with the programs to be given almost entirely by the pupils, eliminating the usual addresses by outside speakers.

The closing exercises for the senior high school will be held Tuesday night, with Harold Brown giving the salutatory and Evelyn Crown, the valedictory. Dr. George L. Edmonds, a member of the county board of education, will present the diplomas and the awards will be made by Prof. E. M. Douglas, principal of the school. Ben G. Davis, former Mayor of Takoma Park, will represent the board of trustees of the school. On Sunday the 75 graduates of the school will attend baccalaureate services at the Silver Spring Baptist Church, when the Rev. J. Wesley Loftis, pastor of the church, will deliver the sermon.

Approximately 100 pupils will be graduated from the junior high school, with commencement exercises Wednesday morning. Theda McNall will give the address of welcome and Henry McCeney the speech of appreciation. The program will include a one-act play and songs.

23 at Chevy Chase Will Be Graduated

Charles Warren, former Assistant Attorney General, will deliver the address to the graduates at commencement exercises of the Chevy Chase Junior College and Senior High School, to be held at 4:30 p. m. tomorrow at the school.

Twenty-three girls will be awarded diplomas, 15 from the junior college and 8 from the high school. The following girls are graduating from the junior college; Virginia Addoms, Ellenar Bicket, Barbara Bramwell, Elizabeth Bristow, Jane Fitz Hugh, Alberta Gerber, Frances Grant, Regina Griffith, Caroline Hutzler, Esther McDowell, June Mendillo, Jeanette Ricketts, Pauline Strandberg, Dorothy Wetzel and Frances Wood.

Those graduating from the high school are: Jacqueline Byrd, Catherine Fuller, Margaret Harmes, Marlice Hunziker, Anna Belle Phillips, Gage Phillips, Betty Williams and Edwina Wise.

Service Record Is Made By Phyllis Wheatley Y

The Phyllis Wheatley Y. W. C. A. has established a service record for the first six months of its fiscal year, according to a report received yesterday by the Community Chest. The report shows that 35 groups had 579 meetings with 17,473 attendants; 55 religious activity meetings had 1,460 attendants; 981 people attended 84 committee meetings; 87 general meetings drew 5,289 attendants; 25 different outside organizations had 172 meetings with an attendance of 4,985.

In addition, 357 different persons lived at the building at 901 Rhode Island avenue northwest, and 21 were placed in registered homes. The association gave 134 night's lodgings to worthy women; received 370 calls for help and placed 160 girls and women in jobs. During the period the association took care of 447 relief cases. There were also 20 special meetings with an attendance of 2,320.

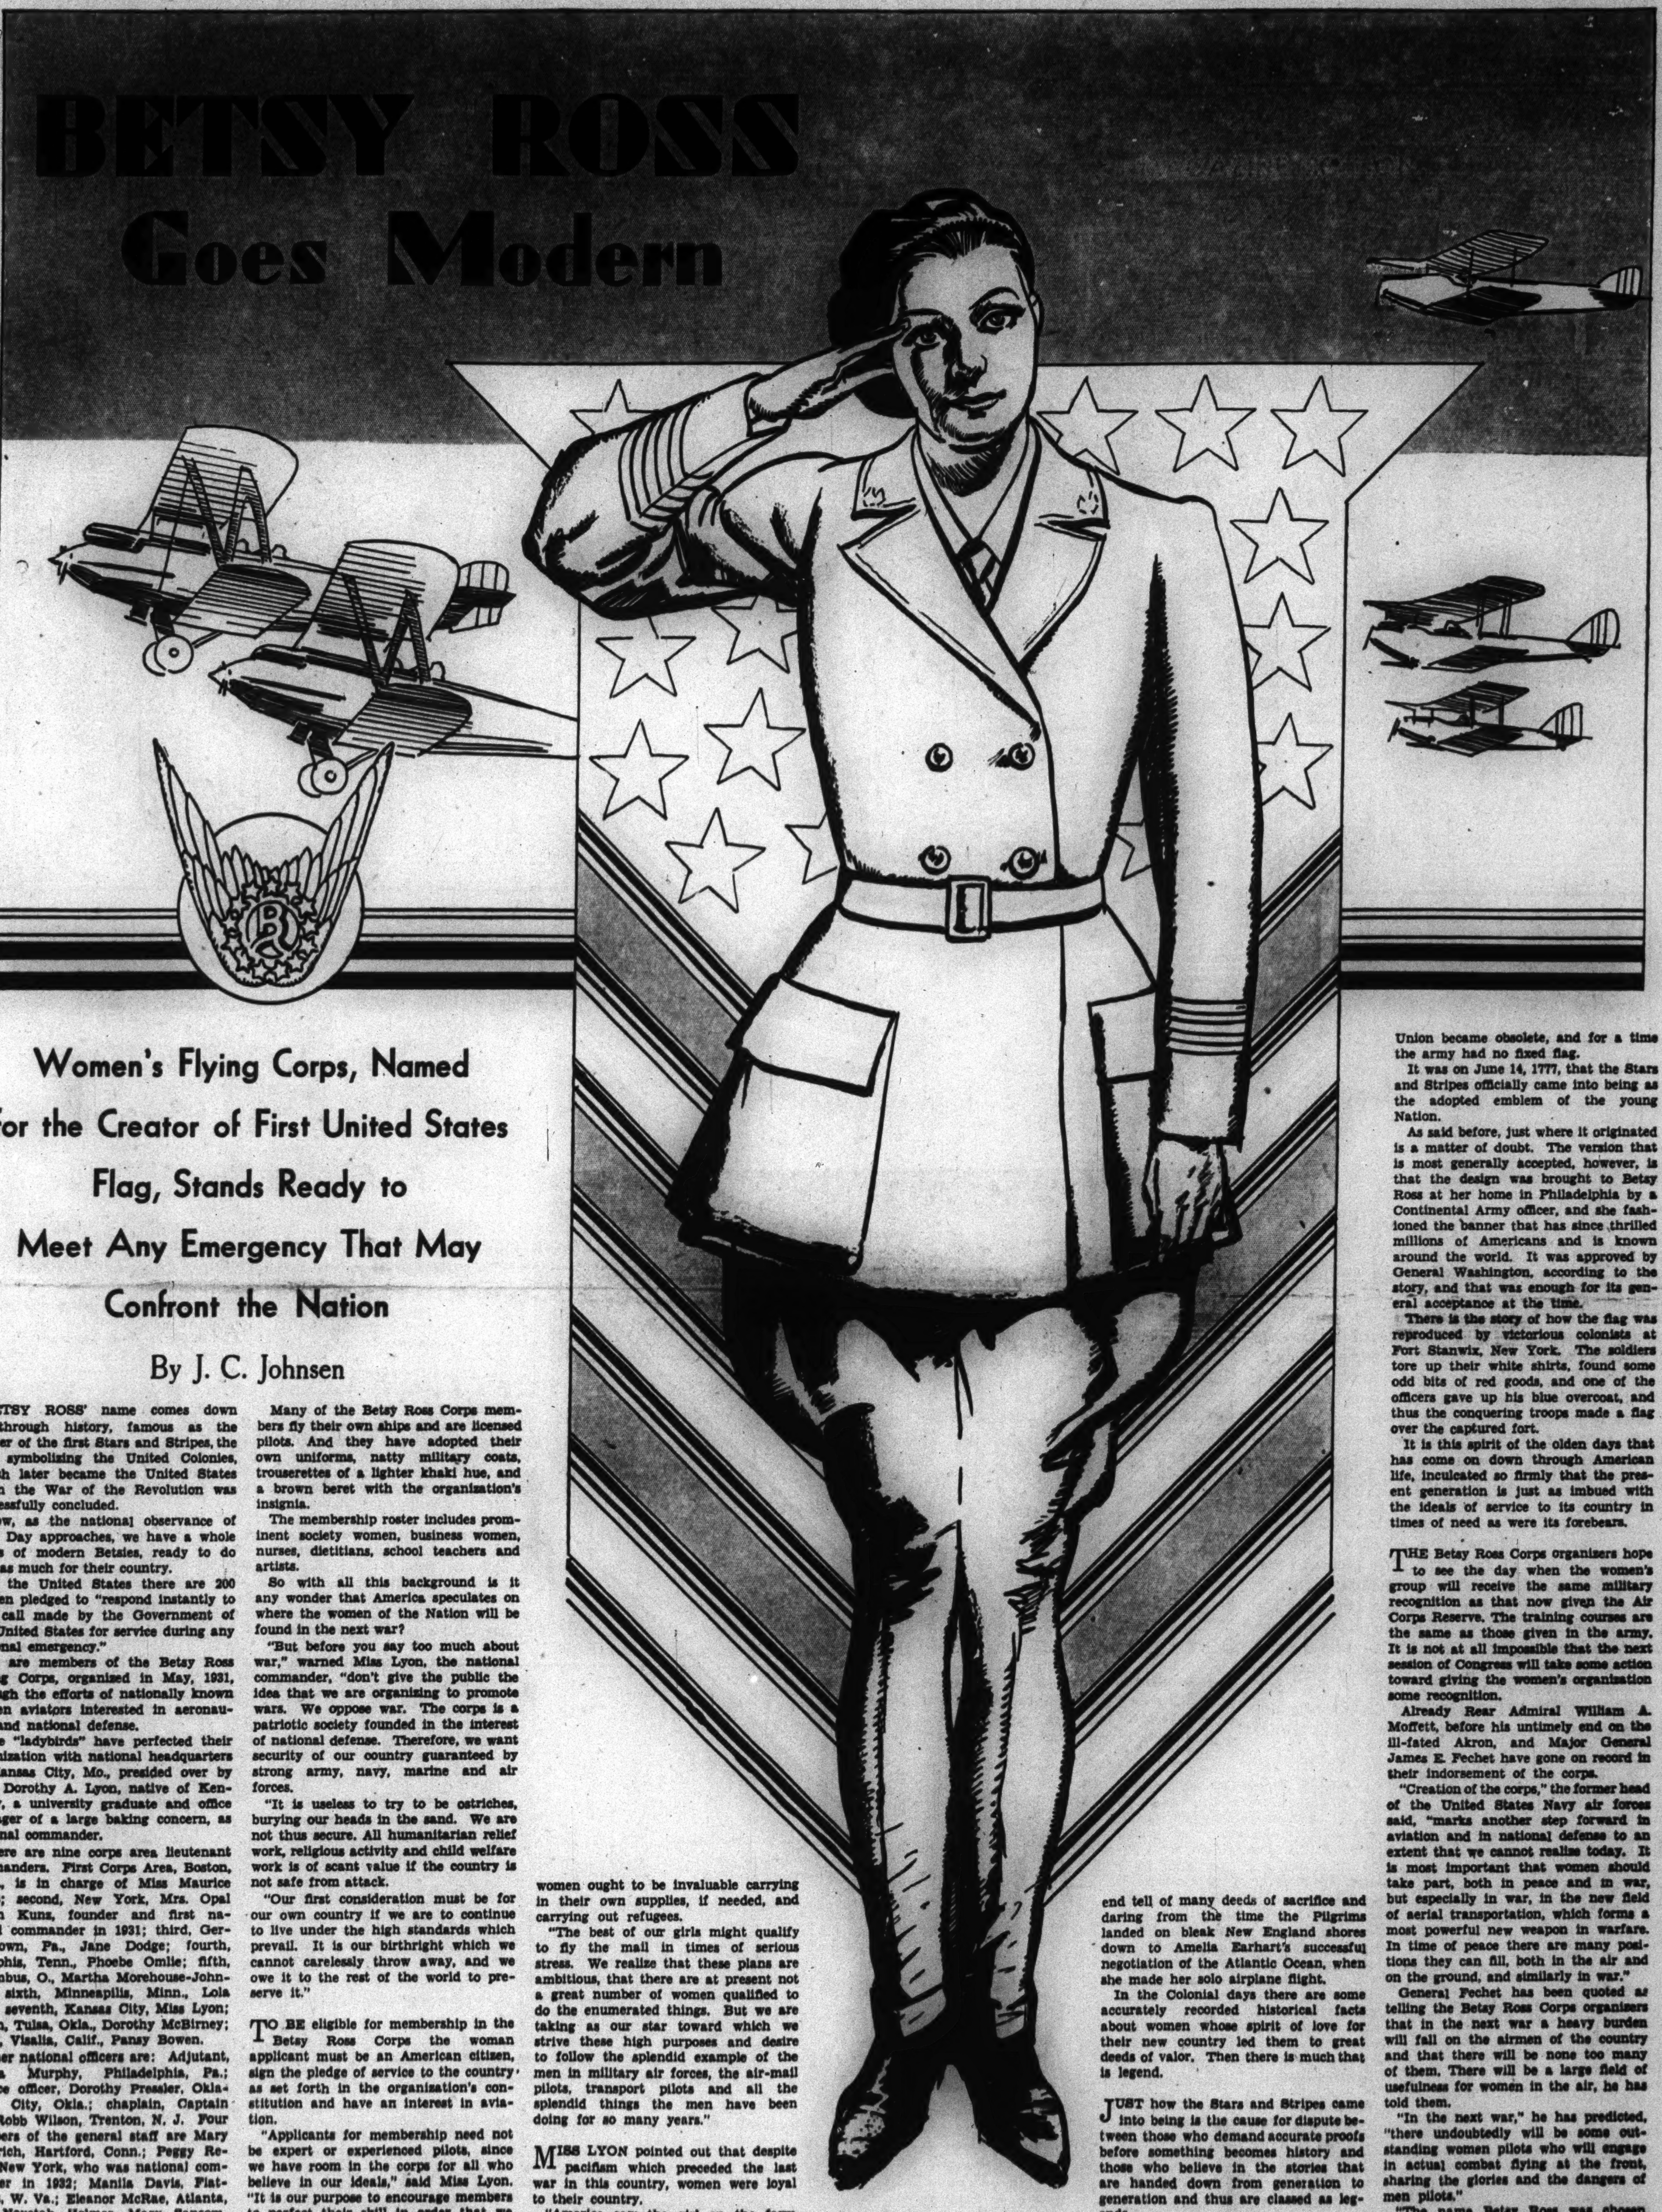
BETSY ROSS Goes Modern



Women's Flying Corps, Named for the Creator of First United States Flag, Stands Ready to Meet Any Emergency That May Confront the Nation

By J. C. Johnsen

BETSY ROSS' name comes down through history, famous as the maker of the first Stars and Stripes, the flag symbolizing the United Colonies, which later became the United States when the War of the Revolution was successfully concluded.

Now, as the national observance of Flag Day approaches, we have a whole corps of modern Betsies, ready to do just as much for their country.

In the United States there are 200 women pledged to "respond instantly to any call made by the Government of the United States for service during any national emergency."

All are members of the Betsy Ross Flying Corps, organized in May, 1931, through the efforts of nationally known women aviators interested in aeronautics and national defense.

The "ladybirds" have perfected their organization with national headquarters in Kansas City, Mo., presided over by Miss Dorothy A. Lyon, native of Kentucky, a university graduate and office manager of a large baking concern, as national commander.

There are nine corps area lieutenant commanders. First Corps Area, Boston, Mass., is in charge of Miss Maurice Ames; second, New York, Mrs. Opal Logan Kunz, founder and first national commander in 1931; third, Germantown, Pa., Jane Dodge; fourth, Memphis, Tenn., Phoebe Omlie; fifth, Columbus, O., Martha Morehouse-Johnson; sixth, Minneapilis, Minn., Lola Lutz; seventh, Kansas City, Miss Lyon; eighth, Tulsa, Okla., Dorothy McBirney; ninth, Visalia, Calif., Pansy Bowen.

Other national officers are: Adjutant, Althea Murphy, Philadelphia, Pa.; finance officer, Dorothy Pressler, Oklahoma City, Okla.; chaplain, Captain Gill Robb Wilson, Trenton, N. J. Four members of the general staff are Mary Goodrich, Hartford, Conn.; Peggy Remey, New York, who was national commander in 1932; Manila Davis, Flatwoods, W. Va.; Eleanor McRae, Atlanta, Ga.; Novetah Holmes, Mary Sansom, Hartford, Conn.

PROBABLY no more determined group of women has ever organized more methodically in the interest of national defense than the Betsy Ross Corps. They have received semiofficial recognition in Washington. They have been presented with a building for national headquarters at the municipal airport in Kansas City, and they have been given a tract of ground at Orange City, Fla., to be used as a national training field for members of the corps.

Many of the Betsy Ross Corps members fly their own ships and are licensed pilots. And they have adopted their own uniforms, natty military coats, trouserettes of a lighter khaki hue, and a brown beret with the organization's insignia.

The membership roster includes prominent society women, business women, nurses, dietitians, school teachers and artists.

So with all this background is it any wonder that America speculates on where the women of the Nation will be found in the next war?

"But before you say too much about war," warned Miss Lyon, the national commander, "don't give the public the idea that we are organizing to promote wars. We oppose war. The corps is a patriotic society founded in the interest of national defense. Therefore, we want security of our country guaranteed by strong army, navy, marine and air forces.

"It is useless to try to be ostriches, burying our heads in the sand. We are not thus secure. All humanitarian relief work, religious activity and child welfare work is of scant value if the country is not safe from attack.

"Our first consideration must be for our own country if we are to continue to live under the high standards which prevail. It is our birthright which we cannot carelessly throw away, and we owe it to the rest of the world to preserve it."

TO BE eligible for membership in the Betsy Ross Corps the woman applicant must be an American citizen, sign the pledge of service to the country as set forth in the organization's constitution and have an interest in aviation.

"Applicants for membership need not be expert or experienced pilots, since we have room in the corps for all who believe in our ideals," said Miss Lyon. "It is our purpose to encourage members to perfect their skill in order that we may be ready to serve our country in any emergency of war or peace.

"It is not our purpose at any time to train women for combat, but for the countless auxiliary jobs which will have to be done in the event of an emergency, such as flying the mail or piloting airplane ambulances.

"Peace services are the detection of forest fires, working in conjunction with the Government foresters, relief in times of hurricane or flood. Several of our members are graduate nurses who also hold pilot's licenses. These young women ought to be invaluable carrying in their own supplies, if needed, and carrying out refugees.

"The best of our girls might qualify to fly the mail in times of serious stress. We realize that these plans are ambitious, that there are at present not a great number of women qualified to do the enumerated things. But we are taking as our star toward which we strive these high purposes and desire to follow the splendid example of the men in military air forces, the air-mail pilots, transport pilots and all the splendid things the men have been doing for so many years."

MISS LYON pointed out that despite pacifism which preceded the last war in this country, women were loyal to their country.

"America saw the girl on the farm become the farmerette," she pointed out. "The country saw the city girl take her place on the street car as the conductorette. We saw them on the elevators, in the munitions factories—virtually everywhere. Then why should it be so very hard to visualize women as airplane pilots in the country's service in the next war, should it come?

"We are not trying to bring forth a freakish lot of women, nor are we contemplating any theatrical, hysterical or sensational activities. Our work is the same humanitarian relief work which has always been done by women, only we are using the latest, most modern medium for our service. Most of our members are married and many of these have children. The requirements of the corps will never interfere with a member's first duty—her children and her home."

THE Betsy Ross Flying Corps is only following in the footsteps of American women from the day the first white woman set foot on the soil of this continent. History books and popular legend tell of many deeds of sacrifice and daring from the time the Pilgrims landed on bleak New England shores down to Amelia Earhart's successful negotiation of the Atlantic Ocean, when she made her solo airplane flight.

In the Colonial days there are some accurately recorded historical facts about women whose spirit of love for their new country led them to great deeds of valor. Then there is much that is legend.

JUST how the Stars and Stripes came into being is the cause for dispute between those who demand accurate proofs before something becomes history and those who believe in the stories that are handed down from generation to generation and thus are classed as legends.

One historian, after years of research, says that the Stars and Stripes had its origin in the Grand Union, the flag of the original thirteen Colonies. The Grand Union was only a slight variation of the British Union ensign. The colonists broke up the solid red field, making it into thirteen alternating red and white stripes to represent the Colonies. This Grand Union flag was first hoisted over the Colonial troops in January, 1776, at Cambridge, Mass. Then, when the Colonies proclaimed their independence on July 4, 1776, the Grand Union became obsolete, and for a time the army had no fixed flag.

It was on June 14, 1777, that the Stars and Stripes officially came into being as the adopted emblem of the young Nation.

As said before, just where it originated is a matter of doubt. The version that is most generally accepted, however, is that the design was brought to Betsy Ross at her home in Philadelphia by a Continental Army officer, and she fashioned the banner that has since thrilled millions of Americans and is known around the world. It was approved by General Washington, according to the story, and that was enough for its general acceptance at the time.

There is the story of how the flag was reproduced by victorious colonists at Fort Stanwix, New York. The soldiers tore up their white shirts, found some odd bits of red goods, and one of the officers gave up his blue overcoat, and thus the conquering troops made a flag over the captured fort.

It is this spirit of the olden days that has come on down through American life, inculcated so firmly that the present generation is just as imbued with the ideals of service to its country in times of need as were its forebears.

THE Betsy Ross Corps organizers hope to see the day when the women's group will receive the same military recognition as that now given the Air Corps Reserve. The training courses are the same as those given in the army. It is not at all impossible that the next session of Congress will take some action toward giving the women's organization some recognition.

Already Rear Admiral William A. Moffett, before his untimely end on the ill-fated Akron, and Major General James E. Fechet have gone on record in their indorsement of the corps.

"Creation of the corps," the former head of the United States Navy air forces said, "marks another step forward in aviation and in national defense to an extent that we cannot realize today. It is most important that women should take part, both in peace and in war, but especially in war, in the new field of aerial transportation, which forms a most powerful new weapon in warfare. In time of peace there are many positions they can fill, both in the air and on the ground, and similarly in war."

General Fechet has been quoted as telling the Betsy Ross Corps organizers that in the next war a heavy burden will fall on the airmen of the country and that there will be none too many of them. There will be a large field of usefulness for women in the air, he has told them.

"In the next war," he has predicted, "there undoubtedly will be some outstanding women pilots who will engage in actual combat flying at the front, sharing the glories and the dangers of men pilots."

"The name Betsy Ross was chosen for the corps because of its historical value and the many fine qualities in the Colonial woman that the modern girl would do well to remember," according to Miss Lyon. "It is well known that Betsy Ross was an intimate friend of General George Washington, and she was commissioned to make the first flag of the United States, which consisted of thirteen stars in a circle. This is the reason for the thirteen stars in a circle on the Betsy Ross Corps insignia."

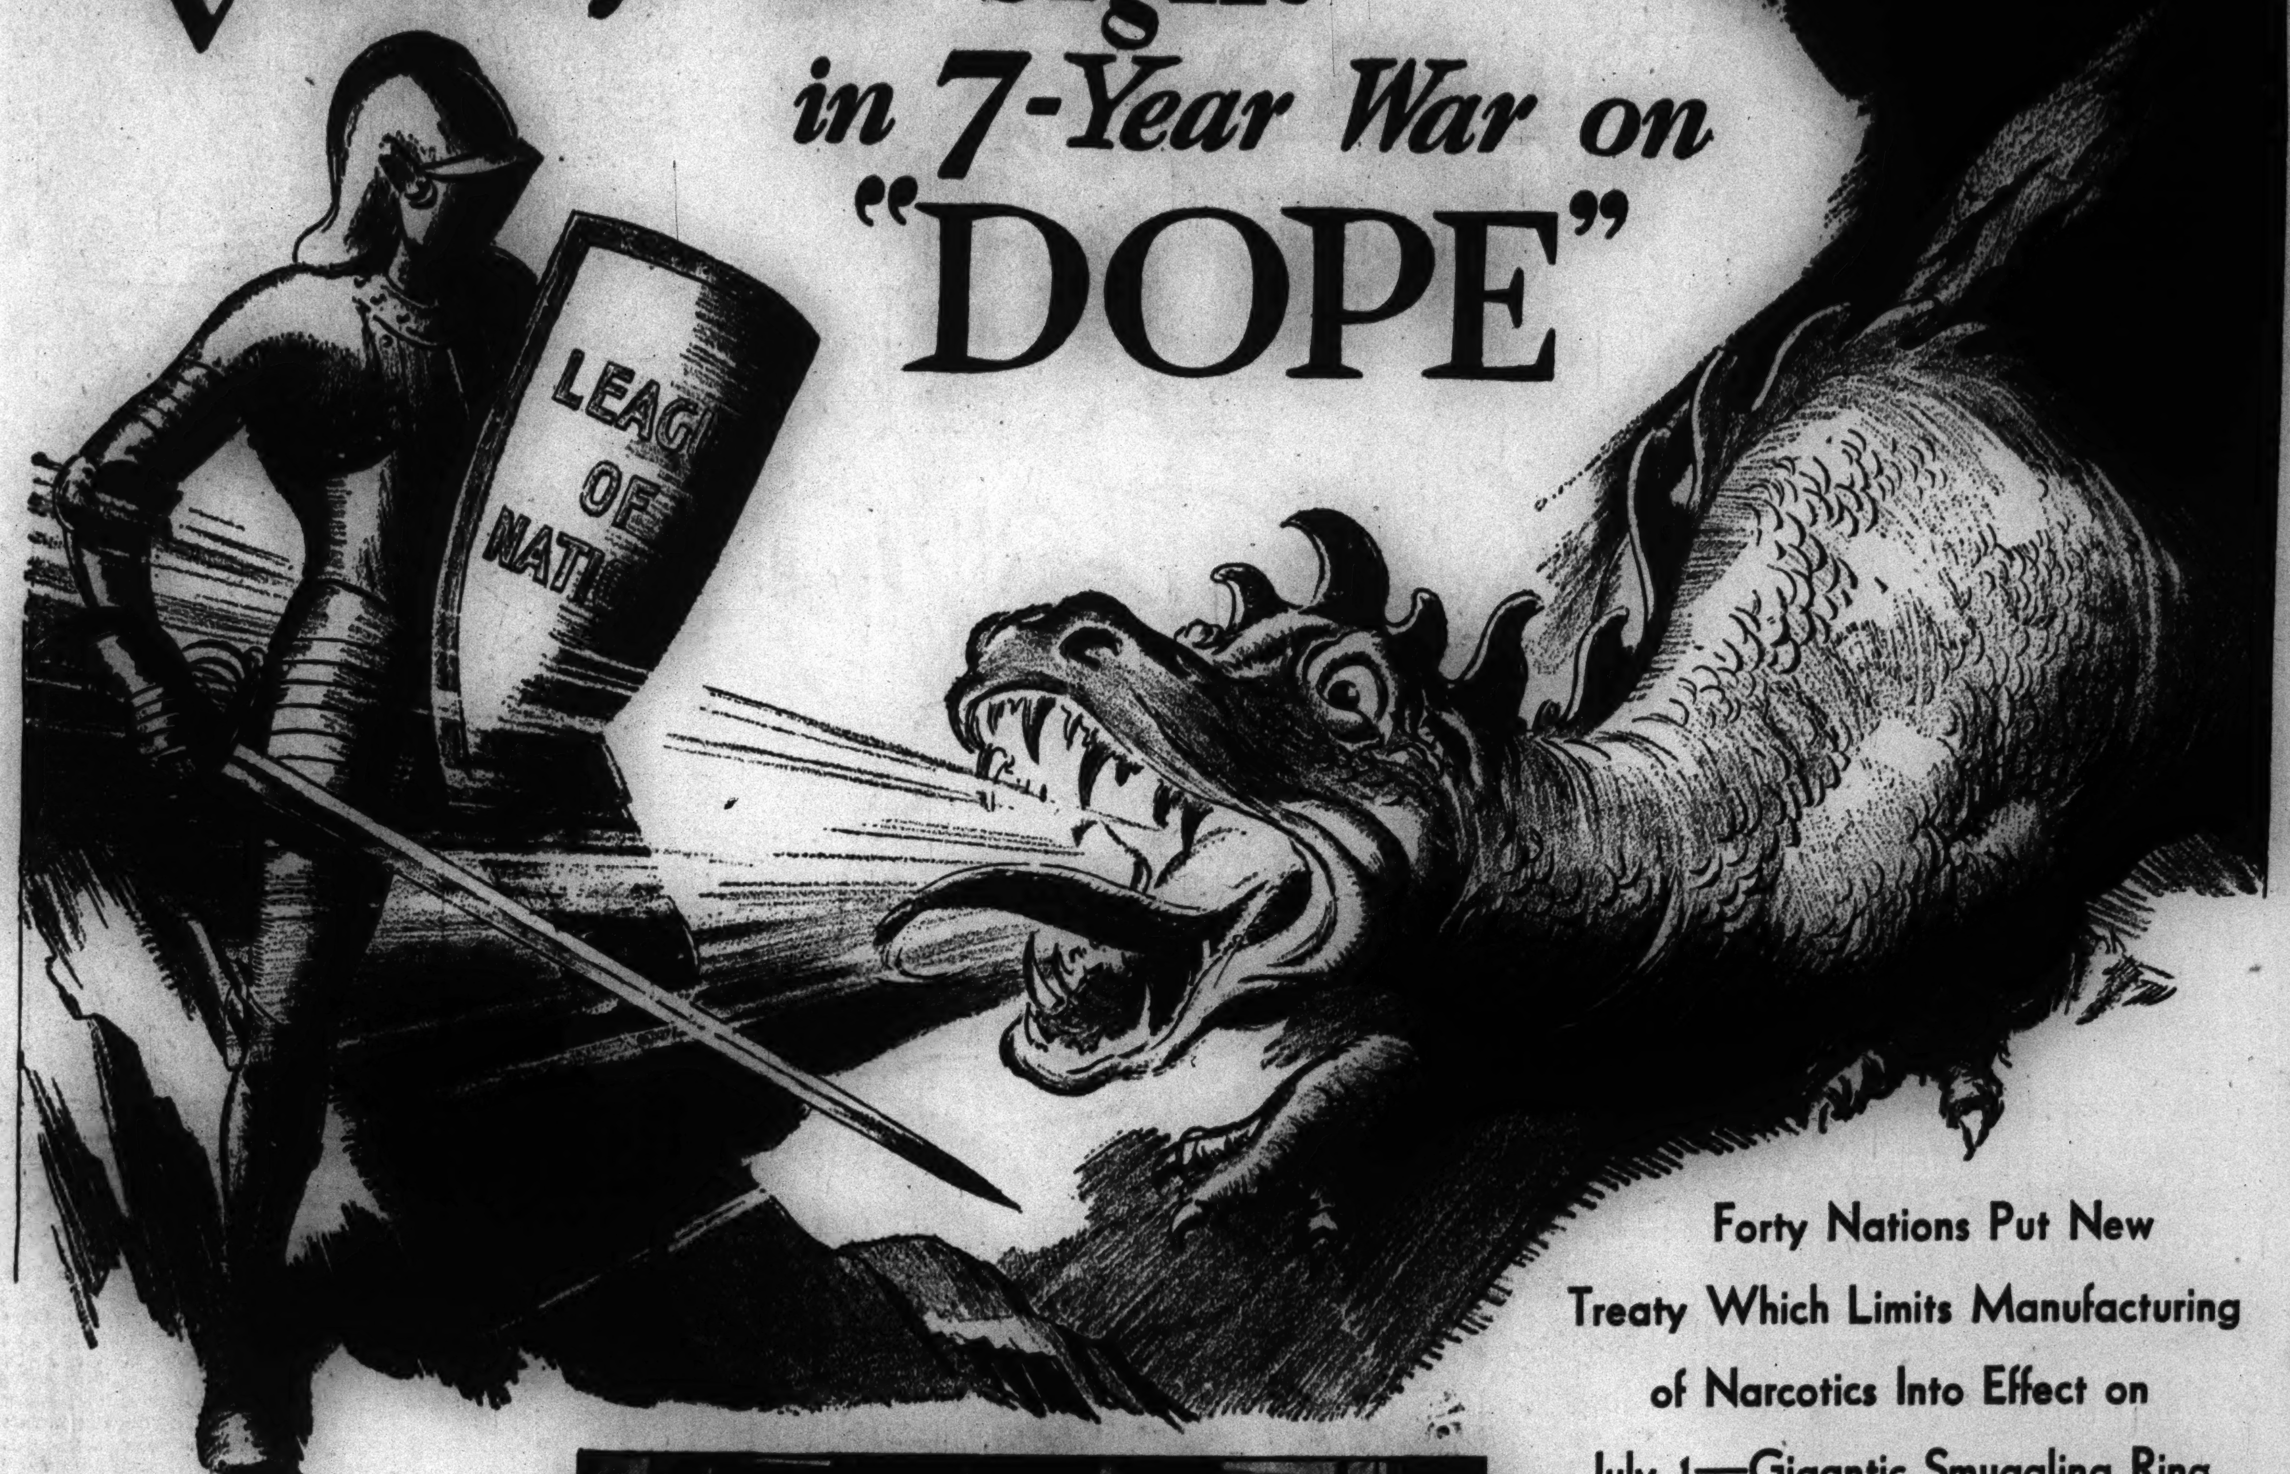
Victory in Sight in 7-Year War on "DOPE"



Forty Nations Put New Treaty Which Limits Manufacturing of Narcotics Into Effect on July 1—Gigantic Smuggling Ring Uncovered by International Secret Police

By James Nevin Miller

AFTER seven years of effort the world's most smashing blow against the "dope" evil is about to be achieved. Forty nations, acting together as a single body, have succeeded in bringing the Geneva anti-narcotic treaty into force on July 1.

This treaty, if rigidly obeyed, will stop the flow of tons of deadly "dope" which have been inundating American shores from abroad. Almost simultaneously with its ratification, secret police of forty nations announced the unmasking of a gigantic "dope"-smuggling net with centers in the world's best-known capital cities.

The United States is the greatest sufferer from "dope" addiction among the advanced and enlightened nations of the world. At present some twenty-five tons of narcotics are smuggled annually into America, though three tons are ample for the medical and scientific requirements of the entire world. Addicts living in the United States total somewhere between 110,000 and 150,000, according to Government reports.

Under terms of the new treaty the manufacture of narcotics will be limited to the world's actual medical and scientific needs. Every grain of "dope" in world commerce must be accounted for. The world has pledged unceasing war against the illicit traffickers in narcotics.

Contraband seized last year by the narcotic squad of the New York Police Department and valued at $500,000. The drugs are being shoveled into a furnace under supervision of police officials

Although thirty-six countries have now ratified the Geneva pact, only twenty-five were needed to bring it into effect. Virtually all important nations are included. The United States was the first to ratify.

In the fight for this new treaty the United States led the way. Harry J. Anslinger, United States Commissioner of Narcotics, and Dr. Walter L. Treadway, of the United States Public Health Service, American delegates to the Geneva conference of 1931, drew up the terms of the agreement and virtually forced the League of Nations to adopt it.

In a recent interview Mr. Anslinger explained:

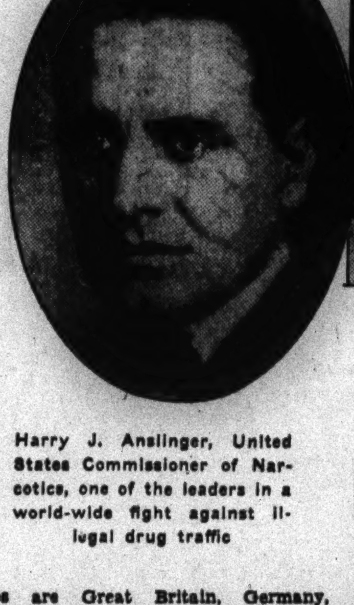
"Strict control of the world's 'dope' supply, for which the United States has fought unrelentingly in a battle to stamp out the 'dope' traffic and catch the smuggler, is now in sight. At The Hague in 1912 and at Geneva in 1925, the leading nations undertook to achieve such control. Their pledges proved to be mere scraps of paper. However, the new agreement is exactly what the United States has been striving for. It represents the biggest forward step thus far taken toward limiting and controlling the world's narcotic supply and the suppression of the evil.

"In its substantial features the Geneva plan follows the American system of regulating the production and distribution of dangerous narcotics. This system simply determines the nation's medical needs in terms of raw materials and only such amounts are permitted to be imported for the manufacture of narcotic drugs. A co-operative step is careful supervision of distribution in order to prevent diversion into illicit channels.

"The Geneva conference provides that the needs of the various nations are to be estimated after the American system and that the manufacturers of narcotics are to restrict their output, not to the total of these estimates, but to the legitimate orders received within these estimates. To carry out these provisions a model enforcement plan also similar to that employed in the United States was recommended by the convention to individual nations.

"EMBODIED in this measure is the most savage and destructive blow that has been dealt the illicit 'dope' traffic since the 'seven years' war' began. If the signatory nations strictly enforce it, the manufacture of narcotics will be limited to the world's medical and scientific needs, and the large leaks in the legitimate narcotic trade known to have been the principal source of the smuggler's supply, and the main obstacle to successful control, will be effectively checked.

"This conference was the first at which the so-called victim countries have emerged victorious over the manufacturing countries in defining measures of control. The principal victim countries are China, the United States, Canada, Spain, Italy, Argentina and Egypt. The chief manufacturing countries are Great Britain, Germany, France, Holland and Switzerland. They form the powerful opium bloc which has dictated the terms of the conventions which nations have previously signed for the international control of the traffic.



Harry J. Anslinger, United States Commissioner of Narcotics, one of the leaders in a world-wide fight against illegal drug traffic

"Naturally, during the three international conferences that have been held to discuss the subject of narcotics control, the manufacturing countries opposed any measure that would seriously disturb the thriving industry that had been reared among them by the legitimate consumption of narcotics.

"However, the situation was altered radically at the last conference in Geneva. Not only did the victim countries succeed in obtaining a convention providing broad and drastic powers for the control of the manufacture of drugs and their movement in international commerce, along with the machinery properly to enforce these measures, but they also defeated the control plan, advocated by the manufacturing countries. This was known as the quota plan, and if it had prevailed it would have had the effect of establishing a gigantic European cartel possessing a virtual monopoly of the narcotic industry.

"While the Geneva conference was acting to crush the 'dope' evil, another rich source of the illicit traffic was being shut off through American diplomacy, which succeeded in obtaining the pledge of Turkey to manufacture only for legitimate business. Up to three or four years ago Turkey made no drugs at all, but three or four factories suddenly sprang up in the neighborhood of Istanbul. However, none of their output went to fill bona fide orders for scientific or medical purposes, so far as could be determined. It was, indeed, later disclosed that one of these factories had been established solely for supplying the illicit trade.

"Narcotic authorities in the meantime had been seizing large amounts of Turkish-made drugs in various disguises at Marseilles, Rotterdam, Hamburg and Hongkong on ships coming from Istanbul. In December, 1931, American agents captured half a ton of morphine on a steamship that had just arrived from a Turkish port to New York. This seizure, one of the largest ever made in America, led to the promise of the Turkish Government to place its drug factories under strict supervision and control so they would manufacture only for bona fide orders attested by an import certificate from the country of destination."

Three-quarters of a million dollars recently went up in smoke from fuel gathered by narcotic agents of the Golden State

That Turkey has been acting in good faith is proved by the fact that the exports of raw opium from that country decreased from 776,600 pounds in 1931 to 453,200 pounds in 1932. The bulk of the opium is sent to Marseilles, where it is re-exported, mainly to Japan. It is understood that the three factories at Istanbul are still closed and tha. there is no likelihood of their being reopened within the near future.

As recently as February 25, 1933, Mustapha Kemal once more put on the reformer's armor and elaborated a definite program for the limitation and state control of poppy growing in Turkey. Turkey's loss due to limitation of opium production will run into several million dollars annually. However, Kemal believes the moral gain will compensate for this tremendous loss in revenue.

The great smuggling interests which carry on illict trade from country to country have been crippled in Turkey but have raised their heads again in the Balkans. They have quailed before the iron rule of Mustapha Kemal but have created a new center for the manufacture and illicit-export of "dope" in Bulgaria.

AS FAR as the United States is concerned, the principal problem continues to be narcotics smuggled into the country. As Mr. Anslinger points out: "Steady progress has been made in efforts to detect and prevent smuggling and to eliminate the wholesale type of "dope" peddler. State authorities have been asked by Uncle Sam to assume responsibility for the local police narcotic work. However, it has been found necessary for the Federal force to continue to perform a large part of this work except in California, where, in addition to the State Narcotic Division, the City of Los Angeles maintains an efficient, highly trained narcotic squad consisting of approximately sixteen men."

Pennsylvania has recently followed California's lead. The Bureau of Narcotic Drug Control of the State Health Department has installed an identification system to aid in enforcing the Pennsylvania Anti-Narcotic Law. The system is divided into two sections. The first covers persons suspected of being engaged in illegal traffic in narcotics, while the second section records those actually engaged in the traffic as established by court procedure.

EACH section contains photographs of persons listed, together with personal description, fingerprint record and brief history. It is proposed to keep this system up to date by checking with police and Federal records. It covers not only those connected with the illicit "dope" traffic in Pennsylvania, but also those throughout the United States.

The installation of this record system, which is national rather than local in scope, will make it exceedingly difficult for outside narcotic traffickers to do business in Pennsylvania. Moreover, narcotic fugitives from other States will discover that their records have caught up with them. The installation of this latest method of criminal identification marks an important advance in "dope" enforcement in Pennsylvania, Federal authorities point out.

Avoid Danger in "THEM THAR HILLS"

"Hold that line!" is not only the chant of football fans in November, but it is also a good admonition, especially when one has a desire to explore the crevasse of a glacier

National Park Superintendents Tell How to Travel Safely Through the Mountains if You Contemplate a Tour This Summer

By Arthur H. Carhart

THE mountains are calling to thousands of persons this summer. Already tourists are taking to the highways. Many persons will go into the high hills, especially in the Rockies, for the purpose of seeking hidden wealth. Others will go there for vacations. Still others will seek to eke out a living from the soil, having been compelled to abandon their regular pursuits in life because of economic conditions.

The mountains are dangerous—yet they are safe if common sense is used and the advice of men who are thoroughly familiar with them is heeded. It is with the idea of helping visitors to the mountains avoid tragedies that I discussed this matter of mountain safety with Roger W. Toll, superintendent of the Yellowstone National Park, and Edmund Rogers, superintendent of the Rocky Mountain National Park.

Winter? No. Just a summer scene in the Rocky Mountains, where visitors believe in reversing the seasons

A FIRST rule of back-country travel is never go alone. Even the best outdoors people should follow this rule. Here is one example.

The Rocky Mountain National Park was dedicated in 1915. The day before the dedication Dr. Thornton Samson, of Austin, Tex., started from the west side of the Continental Divide to hike, alone, to the dedicatory exercises that were going to be held in Estes Park on the east side of the Divide. He was an experienced mountain man, having traveled many trails with light pack on his back.

Two guides who were crossing the Big Ridge saw the doctor near the top. He inquired the way to Fern Lake. They told him the trail to take and it was agreed that a sign should be left at a certain point and the rangers would verify the fact that he had passed by in safety. The sign never was left and Dr. Samson disappeared. For years there was mystery surrounding that disappearance. Frantic, thorough search was made of the entire mountain country.

For a time this disappearance joined the long list of men who have gone into the hills alone and have failed to come back.

Then, in the summer of 1932, a trail crew was blocking out the survey of a trail relocation. As the survey party crossed a certain slope they found a human skull. Near it was a knapsack and other personal effects. From this point the story becomes more like a bit of detective fiction than something that happened.

Believing that at last the mystery of Dr. Samson's disappearance was to be solved, Edmund Rogers sent word to the son of the doctor. On several previous occasions similar messages had been sent, but each time the trip, the time, the effort and the anguish had been for naught. The son asked for more proof.

From some source Rogers got an old photograph taken at "Squeeky Bob" Wheeler's ranch on the west side of the Divide, on the day the doctor started on his fateful trip. In it was shown the cap worn by the missing man, his knapsack and a peculiarly shaped pipe. These corresponded to the evidence found by the trail crew.

But more positive was a frozen diary that Rogers' men had found. On the pages that had been preserved in ice were entries of the trip and other data. Taking the diary to headquarters and having one of the stenographers transcribe it before the words would fade and the book disintegrate entirely, the record was preserved.

In the little book were numerous references to "Jango." No one could tell what that word referred to. But the minute that was submitted to the younger Samson, positive evidence was established. It was a pet name that only Dr. Samson used when designating one of his favorite daughters.

Another mystery of the mountains was cleared after years had lapsed.

IN MY own memory is a vivid moment when my own foolish action while traveling mountain trails alone almost made me a mountain mystery. It was near Mount Evans, west of Denver. It was early in my mountain travel. Taking a side trail, climbing a rock formation called the Owl's Head, I decided to climb down over the face of the cliffs through chimneys and gashes in the rock. A bit of rotten rock broke out from under the hobs on my boots, I skidded over one ledge, but finally stopped not more than a foot from the edge of that rock shelf and, staring down, saw a drop of nearly a hundred feet and beyond that others that would have mashed any one taking the tumble into a pulp. It was off trail, I was alone—but I was lucky. That was a lesson.

A primary rule, therefore, is do not try to travel back-country trails alone, no matter how much experience you have back of you. It is the man who has had enough outdoor experience to develop self-reliance who attempts this sort of trip; the one who makes the "mountain mysteries."

It is a fixed rule of the Colorado Mountain Club that any party going on back-country trips shall have four persons in it. This will allow one to stay with the injured person and two to go for help. Then, even if one going for help should be injured on the trip out, one is almost certain to get through and bring help to the injured. This club is made up of some of the most able mountain climbers in the Nation, some of the best outdoors folk. Experience has shown them that it is dangerous to go alone and that four in the party is the safe minimum.

The most usual situation where accident comes to a lone traveler is to know who is lost, but not be able to find them. But another situation not uncommon is to have some one hurt or killed in the back country and not know who it is until some clue to identity is run down.

TWO years ago an inexperienced man tried to climb Longs Peak alone. He deserted the trail. Short cuts are always dangerous. That is a second rule; stick to the established trail. It leads somewhere and some one is likely to come along the trail where they will not be poking around in hidden pockets of high valleys.

This man lost his life. The only key to his identity, the only written or printed material on the body, was half a program of an athletic field day between the personnel of two coal-mining companies. On this was pencilled a notation giving the dollars and cents of a pay check for the first half of a given month. Only that and no more identification. Rogers telephoned the two coal companies, gave them the exact amount of the check, and they replied that a check for that exact amount had been issued a certain worker and the man's identity was disclosed.

Not only is it good policy to have identification with you even in the back country, but it is also wise to advise the rangers of where you may be going.

REGISTERING at park or forest tourist registers may seem like a bit of collegiate foolishness to the average traveler, but it has often put rangers on the trail of people who did not show up at their destination within reasonable time.

I remember well one incident that happened some years back in the Superior National Forest of Minnesota. A young couple went into the forest on a honeymoon. I was in the party that met them as they passed Lower Basswood Falls on the International Boundary. They were staying two weeks. They should have gone out over the Loon Lake portage about a given date. They did not. This was in July. Word went around, notices were posted on portages, August passed and early September came, and still the rangers on both sides of the boundary, in the Quetico Park and in the Superior Forest, were watching for signs of the pair. Then one day the rangers found them, crossing a portage and on their way out. They had found a hidden lake off trail, had liked it, could stay until mid-September if they wanted to and chose to stay. They had outfitted with new grub well over into Canada at a point not usually reached by the rangers in their regular runs, and had come back to their lake to finish the honeymoon. It was a bit of serio-comedy, but it well illustrates how the ranger man keeps tabs on travelers and begins getting anxious for their safety when they do not arrive at some point according to schedule.

Perhaps the foundation for most accidents in the hills and woods comes from a lack of realization on the part of city folks that here they are not guarded by the intricate community safeguards that are so well established in urban centers. No rule-of-thumb that will apply to the more highly organized conditions will suffice in the hills. One must realize the conditions are different and then use good sound sense in meeting those conditions.

This is well illustrated in two tragedies of last summer when two automobile loads of plains folk were caught on high mountain roads during sudden fog. Not realizing how acute the hairpin turns of mountain roads may be, they kept on. Fog thickened. They were hurrying to get down below it. They came to a turn, but did not make it. The car carried them over a cliff. On foot, horseback or in automobile, when weather conditions become so thick it is impossible to see ahead, stop.

"Automobiles don't think," said Rogers as he spoke of this unfortunate incident. "I remember a case at Crater Lake, where an autoist left his engine running while he went into a store to make some purchases. He was gone but a few minutes, and just as he emerged from the door he saw his car plunging over a cliff hundreds of feet into the lake below. It wasn't the fault of the machine, but the thoughtless motorist who left the engine running."

Toll related an unvarying rule that rangers making winter trips in Yellowstone must travel in pairs. They carry a small bottle of gasoline for emergency, for there are times when a fall in an unfrozen stream with the air temperature at 20 below or a sudden storm coming with swiftly falling thermometer may mean death if a fire cannot be flashed into life in a hurry. The gasoline is that split-second start of the fire. To stop and attempt to build a fire with shavings or twigs in such a moment might be disastrous; or at least mean frozen feet or fingers. Thinking out what might happen in the outdoors and then being reasonably prepared will block most every form of accident.

THE final rule, and the one we all consider the most important, is not to get stampeded. More people get into danger through becoming excited and jittery than from the initial accident or situation that brings the fright.

It is safe in the hills; safer than in the rushing, plunging hurry of machine-driven cities. But conditions are different. The individual's own headwork counts in far higher ratio than where populations and machines are concentrated. The safest place in the world, perhaps, is on a mountain trail. The thing that brings danger is ill-advised action followed by stampede.

The first rule is not to get in a jam. But once in a jam the first rule becomes, "Keep your head."

If any one knows you are in a certain piece of country and are checking, in a friendly way, the time you should come out, and you do not come, they will get some one started to looking for you. That is, if you have gone into the country alone.

But do not travel alone. The ideal party is four.

And avoid short cuts. Established trails are safe.

When not positively familiar with the country and conditions force you to travel blind—don't travel.

If you go into the mountains of the Eastern or Western part of the United States or the Canadian Rockies this summer, remember your safety depends entirely upon you.

Don't go into back country alone, and don't stampede, whatever happens.

Why men SHUN MARRIAGE

Alexander Kirkland, Hollywood's Most Desirable Bachelor, Gives You a Definition of Love and the Reasons Why Young Men Are Not Rushing to the Altar

By Alice L. Tildesley

"I hate petting. It's cheap, and I believe the important thing in li'e is not to be cheap," says Alexander Kirkland, here shown with attractive Marian Nixon

THE Young Man of 1933 is not hurrying to the altar. He's spoiled. He's selfish. He has the privileges of an engaged man with none of the obligations. He won't take a girl out unless she "pets."

This is the recent indictment of Young Mr. 1933 set forth in a well-known writer's column. Is it true?

As ambassador of worried maidenhood, I consulted Hollywood's most desirable bachelor, Alexander Kirkland. Alexander is young, good-looking, successful and well endowed.

"It's true that men seem not to be marrying so young as they once did," he agreed. "I have seen statistics to prove that this is so. No doubt, the economic condition has something to do with it, for how can a man support a wife and family unless he has a job?

"But I believe there is a far more important reason for delay. The young man and the young girl of today are not content with the old idea of marriage. They are looking for something better, something higher. They want real love and not just a substitute recommended as just as good.

"IT USED to be that when a girl became 18, her family selected a youth of, say, 21 and urged her to marry him because they knew he was healthy, hard-working, had prospects from his father or was in line for a better job; and his family approved of the girl because they knew she was healthy and 'good' and they wanted to see him 'settled' before he became a sower of wild oats. With sufficient encouragement and sufficient propinquity, Nature stepped in and the marriage was made.

"There was no desperate love about it—at least not often.

"The girl knew that marriage was all she had to look forward to, and that not to be married was considered disgraceful. The boy wanted freedom from parental restrictions and the position of head of a family.

"All this sounds very dull to us today. We want real, deep and abiding love when we marry.

"In Hollywood there's another reason why young men don't marry, and that

The well-known movie star was born in Mexico of Irish and Spanish parentage and his real name is William Alexander Kirkland is because they are, most of them, cynics. Everywhere men hear of girls who calculate the probable wealth of their admirers, of girls who deliberately scheme to trap a man into marriage so that they may collect alimony later. We hear of cheap women who barter all they have for chance of advancement in their professions. I don't mean that women who amount to anything on the screen do this, but there are those who think they can manage careers so.

"ONLY yesterday a woman star told me of a young girl who came to her to ask if a certain suitor really had the money he was supposed to have, for, 'I'd have him in a minute if I knew he was really rich!' said she. The woman star said: 'Oh, yes, he's rolling, my dear! He has millions!' Not because she has the least idea of his finances, but because she is so sick of gold-diggers.

"Things like that make men cynical.

"But the real reason men don't marry is that they are seeking the right girl. When they find her, they marry.

"I hate petting. It's cheap. And I believe the important thing in life—as well as love—is not to be cheap.

"I know it's a common thing today for a man to get into a car, see a strange girl there, and before he knows her name, she puts up her mouth for a kiss. That's disgusting. It's cheap. There's no thrill in it.

"Only real love is thrilling.

"I think each of us knows, when he cannot explain how he knows, when he has found love.

"The ancient Greeks had an idea, you know, that before people were born, they lived on Mount Olympus as Siamese twins. When the time came for them to be born, an angel—or probably a god, since they had no angels there—separated the twins with a shining sword, and they went to earth separately. Thereafter they went through life always seeking their lost twin, who was their true and only mate.

"There may be something in that idea, for love is incalculable. In an instant we can know our beloved.

"The first time I fell in love, it was like that.

"I was waiting in a hotel for some one when I saw a girl walk through. I wanted to run up to her and say: 'You are the most beautiful woman I ever saw! You are the most beautiful woman in the world!' I even got up, but I stopped myself. 'She'll think you're crazy. She'll call the police and have you arrested,' I told myself.

"Next day I was there again and once more I saw her, and she looked at me and I knew I was mad about her and wanted to know her. But on the third day I knew who she was and could have met her, but I thought I would let it work out by itself because it seemed fated, so I just stood there and looked at her.

"She sent me a telegram asking me to a party she was giving, saying she knew it seemed unconventional, but she wanted me to come and hoped I would telephone to let her know.

"And when I got her on the telephone, I said: 'I love you!' and she said: 'I love you!' It was like that.

"We were in love for a year and a half. It was marvelous. Yet somehow we didn't speak of marriage. I was economically unimportant then and I don't suppose she would have married me—I still had my way to make, so I felt I couldn't ask her, since she was already well known.

"Then we drifted apart. I came to see that she wasn't the one person in the world for me. Either the Greeks were wrong, or I was part of a group instead of one of twins.

"Love came again. But neither did this end in marriage, partly because she didn't want to be married, she felt it would bind her, and partly because I suppose I subconsciously knew that I hadn't yet found the one.

"NOW I am again in love. Perhaps this time it will lead to marriage. I hope so. I think it would be quite marvelous to be married and never to have to part from the beloved. But I can't tell because this one is so new.

"I was just thinking, as I came along to meet you, that love isn't what poets say it is. It isn't sweet. It isn't a glowing thing that makes you see the world with rosy spectacles and so on.

"No. Love is like a worm in the heart of an apple. It gnaws away inside of you whenever you are separated from the beloved one.

"It isn't jealousy. You aren't jealous or suspicious or unworthy, you don't distrust her. You just can't imagine life without her, so you have a thousand fears for her—that things won't be the same between you when you get back to her, that something will happen before you see her again, that this perfect thing you have won't last—insane ideas all of them, but there, gnawing away, gnawing away.

"Yet when you are together, it's wonderful. It's wonderful.

"I believe strongly in freedom in love.

"That is a dangerous statement, because I don't mean by 'freedom' what the average boy is likely to think I mean.

"I mean that we must have freedom in love—that we must not love for what we can get out of it, that we must not marry for wealth, for security, for protection or for the dignity of name, for comfort or for convenience, but we must love for purity, for devotion, for all that is good and high and sweet, for unselfishness and generosity, for complete trust and absolute understanding."

HE SPOKE his litany of love earnestly, his green eyes serious under their heavy lids.

"I don't think a woman should hold her love back and use it as a means with which to bargain for what she wants of life. I think that is cheapening love.

"Marriage ought to be on a finer, higher plane than that of barter and trade. You marry me and I'll give you myself—that's sickening. She should give her love because she wants to give it, because she loves him, not because in return she will receive support and so on.

"You can't have real love without respect, and you won't get respect if you are shrewdly bargaining with something precious. If you really love some one, you are eager to give her something, she has no need to bargain with you.

"Love isn't all happiness. It's a combination of happiness and unhappiness, and sometimes unhappiness is almost as wonderful as joy when it's because you're in love.

"But whatever is changed today, one thing never alters. Men wish always to be pursuers. They hate to have the woman take over this prerogative.

"I think this is true wherever a man may live."

ALEXANDER should know, for he has lived in many countries.

He was born in Mexico City, Mex., and is Irish on his mother's side and half Spanish, half American on his father's. The elder Kirkland was in Mexico as legal representative for many American companies because he could speak Spanish; thus the son and heir found Mexico his birthplace.

Kirkland senior was brought up in Brussels, Belgium, and did not speak English until he was 21; and Kirkland junior spoke only French and Spanish until he was 11.

Then one day his Irish grandfather objected to the importing of a new French governess "when the kid can't speak his own language—English," and the kid, having listened unobserved to his grandfather's gift for slight profanity, cut in: "I do speak zee English, you dam' fool!"

His friends call the young actor "Bill." He was named for his paternal grandfather, William Alexander Kirkland, rear admiral of the United States Navy, known as "Red Bill" because of his hair and disposition. Alexander's hair is brown, not red. I do not know about his disposition.

"Red Bill" distinguished himself by saving the natives during the eruption of Mount Pelee, on the Island of Martinique, and by representing the American Government at the opening of the Kiel Canal in Germany.

It was there that he met the Kaiser, then Crown Prince, and formed a friendship that lasted until his death.

The Kaiser, by the way, gave "Red Bill" a gold snuffbox set with diamonds, which was so costly that it required a special act of Congress to allow him to accept such a gift from a foreign Power.

"Red Bill" painted seascapes and Alexander inherited his talent. At 15 the boy had an exhibition of his paintings sponsored by his cousin, Baroness Clare de Graffenrid.

"I think people today look on conventions with a somewhat different viewpoint from our fathers and grandfathers. There was little of this so-called 'free love' that you read about in the popular novels of the day, or that hurry people off to Reno or other divorce centers for quick releases. I don't know whether love meant more then than it does now. But I do know that at least marriage unions lasted longer than they do today.

"Life comes down to one thing: Don't be cheap," the grandson of "Red Bill" continued sagely.

"People who try to get something for nothing are cheap; people who are insincere, who play politics, who sham all the time. That's one reason I don't like Hollywood—I mean a certain side of Hollywood — because there is so much sham.

"I believe every one should do what he honestly wants to do, as he really feels it should be done, and not do what he imagines is expected of him, for no reason at all.

"I believe in sincerity—in love and in life."

The swinging fists of Ben Chapman, of the Yankees (No. 6), at right, and Earl Whitehill, Washington pitcher, in a recent altercation which drew a fine of $100 and five days' suspension for the participants

BABE RUTH Suggests "Bigger and Better Brawls"

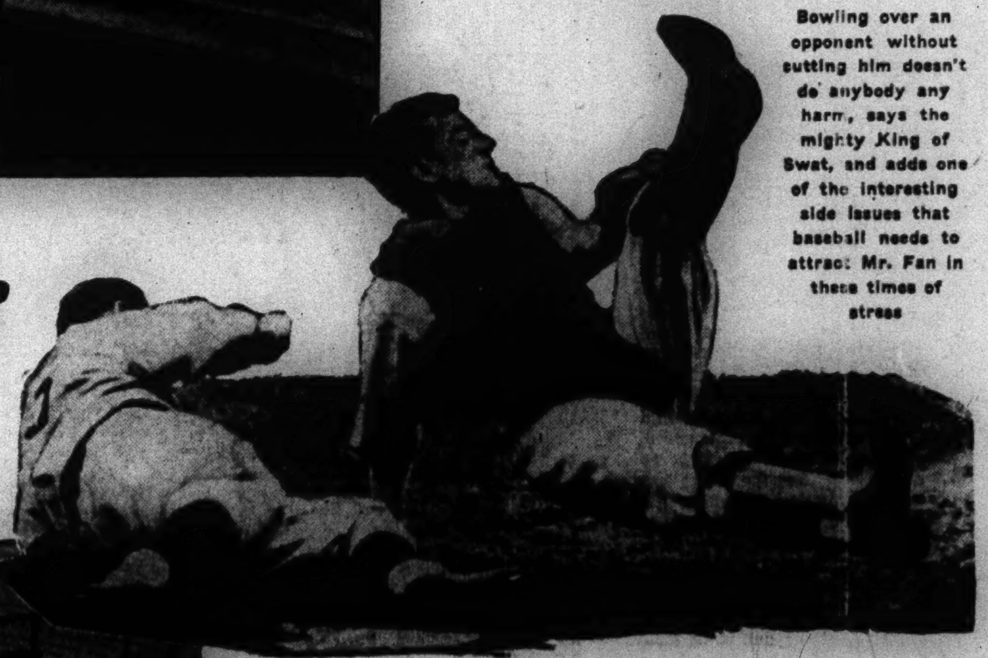
Veteran Slugger Says Baseball Needs Something to Liven the Interest—However, He Is Against the Deliberate Spiking of Opposing Players



Bowling over an opponent without cutting him doesn't do anybody any harm, says the mighty King of Swat, and adds one of the interesting side issues that baseball needs to attract Mr. Fan in these times of stress

By C. William Duncan

GEORGE HERMAN RUTH, widely known for his ability to propel baseballs long distances, is for bigger and better brawls on the diamond.

The Babe, huddled in a corner of the Yankee dugout at Shibe Park, Philadelphia, gave me an interview which might well be entitled "Aggressiveness in Baseball and What I Think of It."

The historic encounter in Washington between Buddy Myer and Ben Chapman, which also involved a side skirmish between Chapman and Earl Whitehill, had faded far into oblivion, but I reminded the Babe of it and asked his opinion of fighting on the field in general and the Washington-Yankee episode in particular.

Mr. Ruth, who can express himself most briefly and most forcibly when the occasion warrants, was content to sum up the situation in three words as far as his views were concerned.

"Let 'em fight," he growled.

I urged a more detailed opinion.

"IT'S a great thing for baseball—this battling on the diamond. The fans love it and so do a lot of the players. I hope we have more of it," he opined.

"Now understand, I'm not for cutting a guy's leg off. I'm not even for using the spikes in any way to hurt a guy. He's making a living out there just the same as I am. If you slide in there to cut him and do it, you may shorten or ruin the other fellow's career. That isn't right.

"But you can bowl him over without cutting him. That's what I'm for. You know the play at second base where the runner coming from first blocks the shortstop or second baseman and keeps him from making the throw to first for the double play.

"That's where most of the arguments start. Well, the runner can do that blocking without cutting the other fellow. He can go into the base and block the shortstop or second baseman like a halfback blocks an end in football.

"That starts fights without the cutting and doesn't do anybody any harm. When two teams show some hatred for each other the fans come out by the thousands, and that is what we want. Baseball needs side issues to draw the people during the hard times. I hope we have some battling in important games during the late months of the season.

"Will Harridge, president of the American League, was right when he gave the fellows in the Washington brawl only five days' suspension and $100 fine. A light sentence makes a fellow feel good. Years ago I socked Brick Owens, the umpire, on the jaw and I know I felt good when they gave me only ten days and a hundred bucks fine."

The Babe grinned and his eyes had a faraway look. He was dreaming of the good old days and the wallop he took at Brick. I believe, veteran though he is, he would still love to get mixed up in a few hand-to-hand affairs himself.

"In recent years baseball has got too tame. If they don't watch out every day will be ladies' day at the ball park and the fans will stop coming to the games. That's why I'm for bigger and better battles in baseball."

He coughed.

"What's the matter. Got a cold?" I asked.

"Yes, and a bad sore throat. I ought to be in bed instead of out here playing ball," he answered, pointing to a bandage around his throat.

The Babe wasn't feeling well. That was evident.

But during the game that followed he summoned sufficient strength to totter up to the plate and hammer one of "Sugar" Cain's offerings over the right-field wall.

A fist fight that threatened to become a battle royal when Pat Malone, Cubs' pitcher, was accused of "dusting off" the Dodgers during one of last seasons games

WHAT a man! We talked of other things and I reminded him of the interview a year previous.

He had revealed then, to my surprise that his chief ambition was not to hit seventy home runs in a season, but to round out twenty years' continuous service in the American League.

This is his twentieth.

"Well, you are on the way to achieving your ambition. Will this season be the last one?" I queried.

Babe hedged. All ball players do when it comes to retirement. The game gets in their blood and they hate to leave it. Ty Cobb was one exception to this rule, but he played twenty-four seasons in one league, so he had a right to say. "Enough."

"It all depends on how I feel," said Babe. "If I feel as rotten as I do today I'm going to quit. But I know I won't. When the hot days of July and August get here I'll be great. If I'm O. K. at the end of the season and am given an attractive offer, I'll likely be back for season twenty-one, but I'm making no promises."

The Yankees were coming out in numbers by this time, Dickey, Gomez, Pennock, Gehrig and the rest, and I left the bench with the promise of the slugger to meet him later in his hotel.

So we reconvened that evening. Babe wore a natty-looking brown suit then, blue shirt and tie to match and looked more cheerful than he had on the bench. Maybe it was the homer he had clouted in the afternoon.

"I was asking you whether you intended playing next season," I reminded him.

"It's the legs, Kid, they're what count," he went on. "Kid" is the name applied by Babe to newspapermen and baseball men and all sorts of men from coast to coast. He can't remember names and "Kid" covers everybody.

"I'LL last just as long as the old pins hold out. Every winter I work out in a gymnasium in New York, throwing the medicine ball, playing handball and taking leg exercises. On the field, as you must have noticed, I take it easy if there isn't much chance of my reaching first base on an infield hit. I must watch the pins carefully because a 'charley horse' or two will mean the end of me as an active player.

"My ambition is to finish this season and then laugh at the other guys trying to make twenty years in the American League. It's a long time."

The Babe is a very patient soul. Thousands of American boys can attest that fact, as he has autographed countless baseballs for them. He was patient during our talk.

He pulled on a cigar during the interview and, between puffs, expressed his views in regard to the chances of the Yanks in the 1933 pennant race. He had proved himself a good prophet in 1932. He told me in the spring of that year that the Yanks would beat out the favorites, the Athletics, if young Allen came through on the mound and that he thought Allen would come through. Allen came through and so did the Yanks.

This year the Yanks are the favorites and Babe thinks there will be no upset. He predicts he will be in the World Series and, as usual, able to make three or four homers to wreck the National League entry.

"YOU told me last year you thought Allen was very promising. Who looks good to you among the younger players this season?" I asked.

"Bob Johnson, of the Philadelphia Athletics. He's the best-looking youngster I've seen in '33. I think he'll be a star later on," said the Bambino.

This was interesting to me, as little was written about Johnson during the winter because of the many glowing reports involving Lou Finney, who also came to the Athletics from Portland, of the Pacific Coast League. Jim Peterson, pitcher, was the first person whom I heard paying tribute to Johnson.

I asked Babe his opinion of the Chicago White Sox as a probable factor in the 1933 pennant race.

"Simmons, Haas and Dykes have given them added power but not enough to keep them in the thick of the race during August and September," he said. "I think they'll land at the top of the second division or perhaps in fourth place, but no higher than fourth."

To my surprise, Babe doesn't expect Washington to come in second. He believes the Athletics, despite a very poor start, will finish higher than Washington.

"When Connie Mack's youngsters get confidence they'll go all right," he opined.

"Confidence is the big thing. The youngster who has it stays up here. The one who loses it goes back to the minors. Johnson has plenty of it and he'll keep it."

So he expects the race to end with the Yankees on top, the Athletics second, with Washington, Cleveland, Chicago, Detroit, St. Louis and Boston trailing in the order named.

"Here is a question, Babe, that has nothing to do with the 1933 pennant race. I'd like to see the veteran spitball star of the Pacific Coast League, Frank Shellenback, get a chance in the majors. There would be plenty of drama and color attached to it if the magnates would waive the rule against spitballers and give Shelly a chance. What do you think of it?"

"Great. I'm against spitball pitching as a rule because I think it is insanitary and am glad we are rid of it. But Shellenback is the only man now using the spitter who was attached to a major league club when the ruling was made. He's been a fine worker and a credit to the game. I'd like to see him get a chance up here and the magnates would make a smart move if they'd give it to him."

"Which is the toughest baseball city in the country, in so far as riding by the fans is concerned? Is it St. Louis or Cincinnati?"

"Neither. Brooklyn is the answer to that question. How those wolves can howl! As a money-maker it's a great town. Give them a winner and they'll pack the ball park every day. They don't have to win the pennant; a contender will do the trick."

IN MY travels I have often been asked the question, "What kind of a fellow is Babe Ruth?"

I cannot answer that query as an intimate friend, for I have never been as close to the Babe as I have to Simmons, Cochrane, Cobb, Howley, Sherdel, Haines, Gelbert and a few others. But I have interviewed him four times and have watched him from the stands when he played on the field of his Industrial School in Baltimore, as a splendid left-handed pitcher with the Boston Red Sox and as a star home-run pounder with the Yankees.

I would say he is a big boy who has emerged from the University of Hard Knocks in Baltimore to a national favorite and has carried his laurels exceedingly well. He is good-humored, human and patient, and has made dozens of trips to hospitals to see sick boy admirers when more impatient players would not have troubled themselves.

He is drawing to the end now of a glamorous career, but can look back on it and consider his work well done. He has been a boon to baseball.

After the Babe — who? We do not know. Perhaps Foxx, perhaps some one else. The game did not die after Cobb left. It will survive Ruth's passing, for the game itself is bigger than any one individual in it.

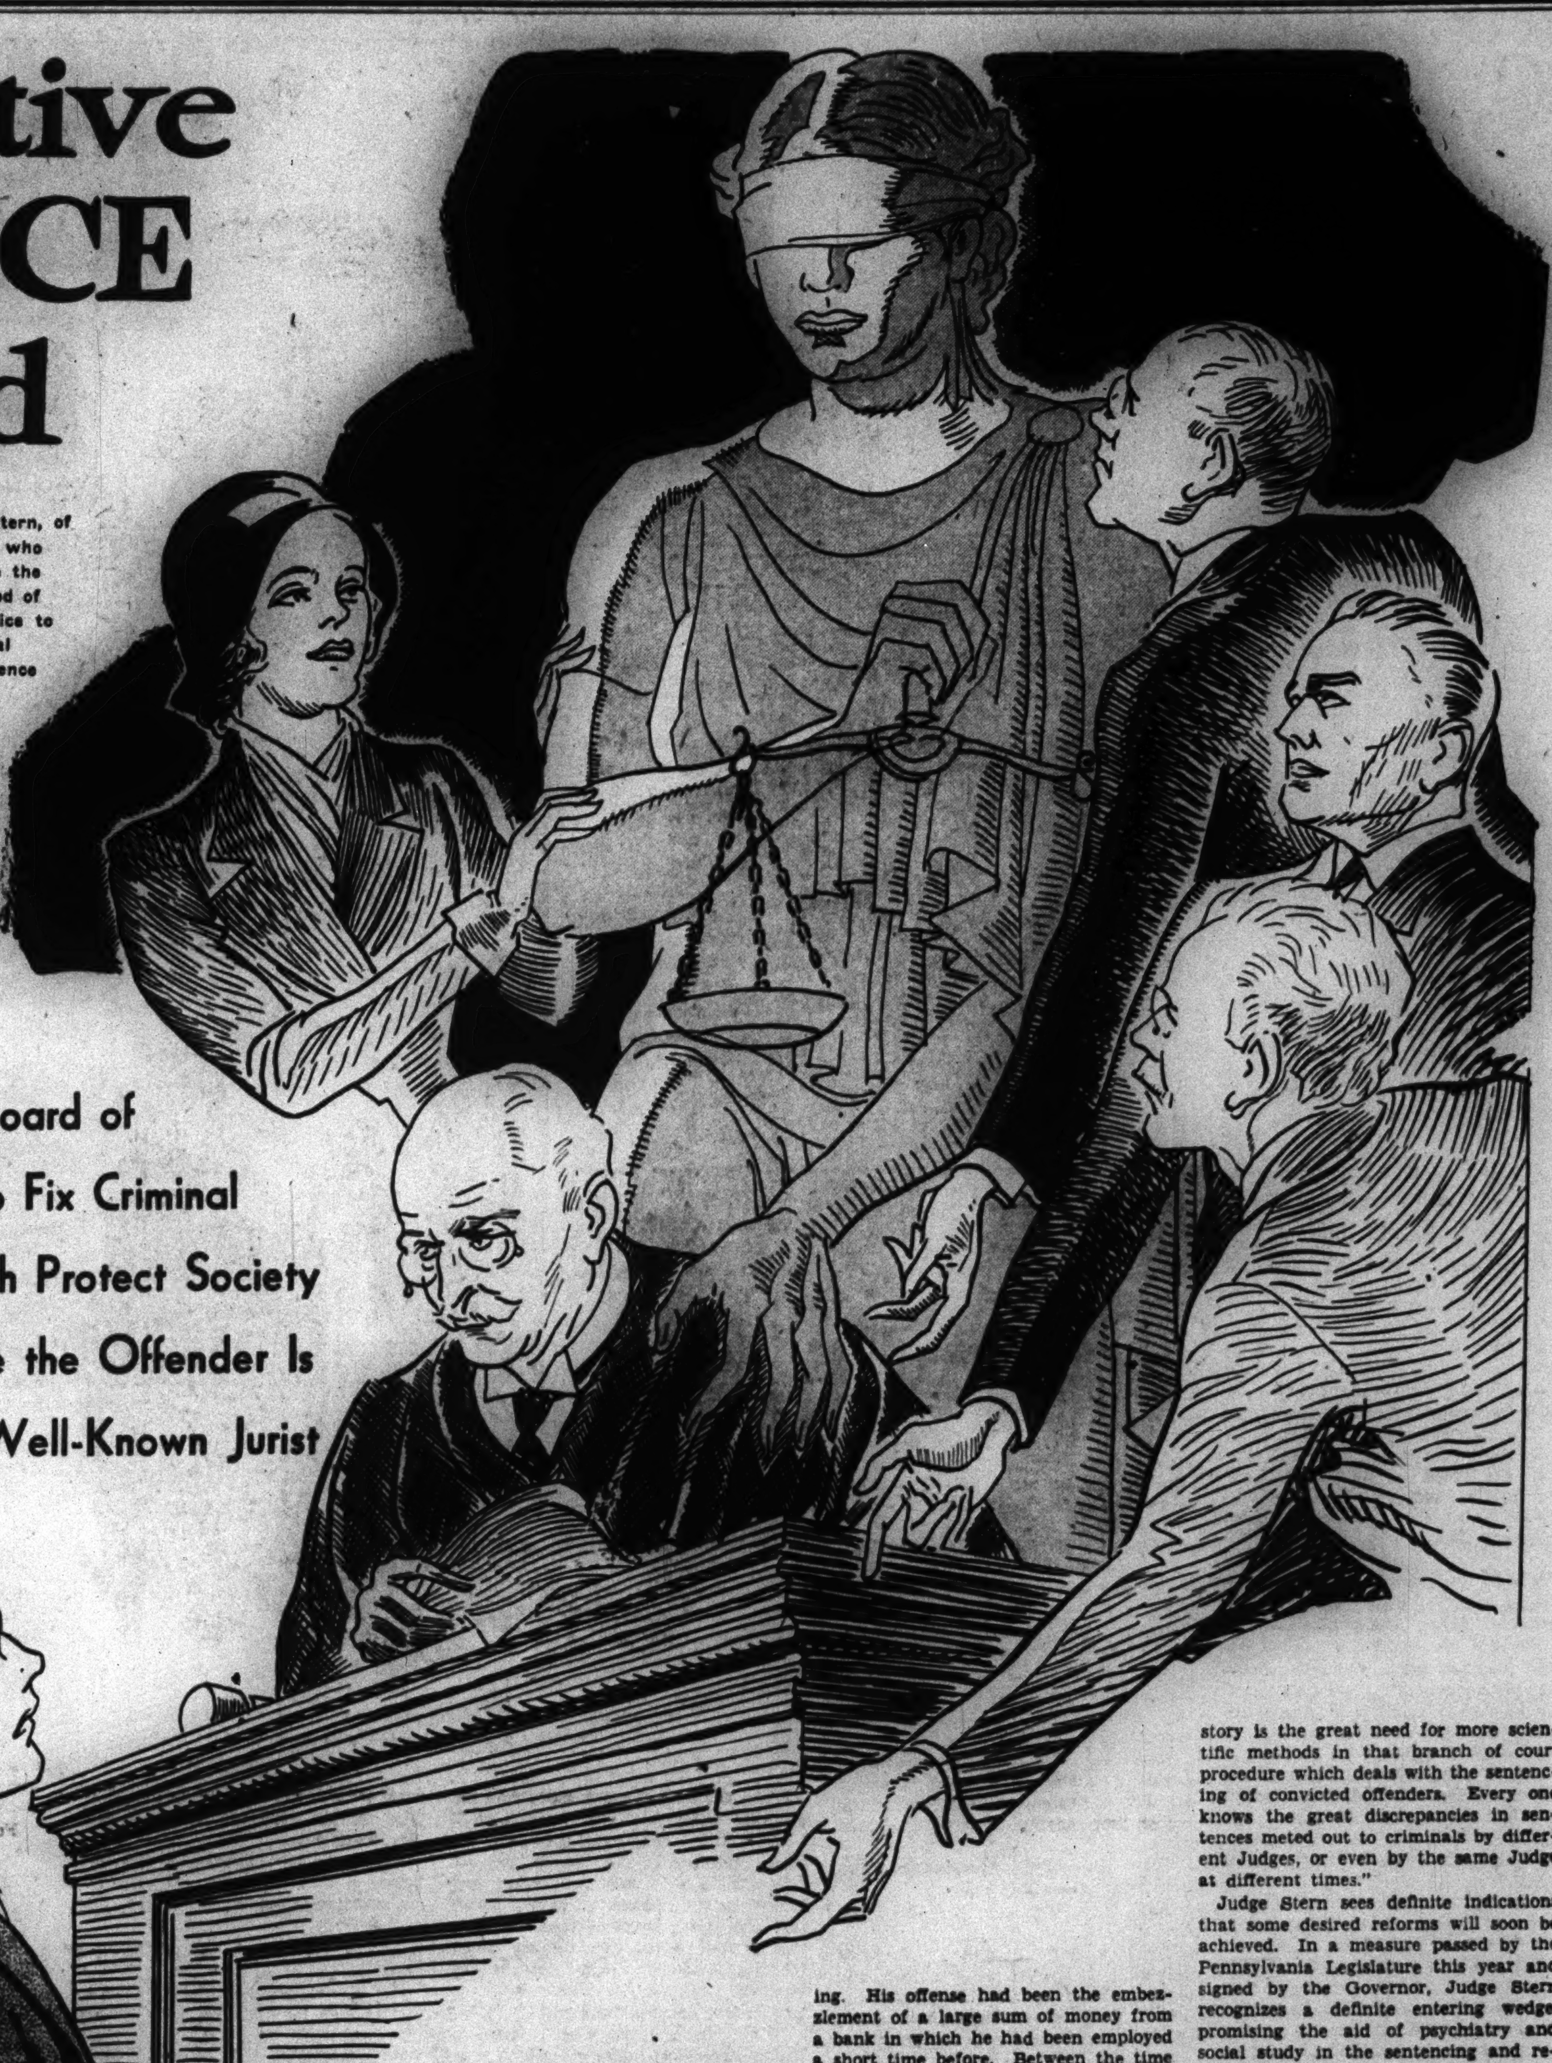
Constructive JUSTICE Urged

Judge Horace Stern, of Philadelphia, who would change the present method of dispensing justice to the criminal awaiting sentence



A Board of Experts to Fix Criminal Sentences Which Protect Society and Rehabilitate the Offender Is Advocated by Well-Known Jurist

By Charles G. Reinhardt

HERE are two men who represent different problems to society. In each case a prompt solution is demanded.

The first is the head of a poverty-stricken family. A welfare organization must determine whether or not to award him relief consisting of a few dollars a week. To aid in its decision, it can and does call upon the investigations and judgment of trained social workers, physicians and psychologists.

The second is a convicted offender against the criminal laws. A Judge must decide whether or not to sentence him to prison and, if sentence is pronounced, how large a segment should thus be cut out of his life. Yet the Judge has little or no information regarding the man's psychological, sociological or medical background essential to a wise decision, and few facilities for obtaining it.

He does not know whether a prison sentence will reform or irretrievably wreck the offender's character. He does not know the motivations which turned the man to crime. Yet alone, and without much of the aid that modern science can afford, he must reach a conclusion significant to both the man and society.

UNDER such conditions, declares President Judge Horace Stern, of Common Pleas Court No. 2, Philadelphia, the efficiency of the current workings of our penological system is greatly impaired. He believes that a Judge, whose decision may concern even life and death, should have not merely the same facilities for obtaining essential information that the social-service agency enjoys, but responsible co-operation from trained psychiatrists, physicians and men of affairs.

"What," asked Judge Stern, "is the fundamental purpose of a sentence? Is it simply an expression of the vengeance of society for an offense committed against the public? Is it aimed as a deterrent to others? Is it to protect society by imposing restraint on the offender? Is it an effort to straighten out his twisted life and to train him for constructive citizenship?

"In my opinion, several of these elements are frequently involved. Sentence must sometimes be imposed for its effect as a deterrent, sometimes as a remedial action calculated to restore and reclaim the individual, sometimes for both these purposes in the one case. The deterrent element has as its object the good of society; the remedial element the good of the offender. These two important functions often run counter to one another and therefore make the problem extremely difficult.

"THE first step forward is a realization of the fact that the decision as to what makes an intelligent and socially constructive sentence for crime is more than a one-man job. It requires at least the combined knowledge and experience which any social-service agency can call to its aid.

"I have frequently urged a revision of criminal-law procedure which would provide that the 'sentence' of a convicted offender, or, as I would rather state it, his future relations to society, should be determined by a board of experts instead of by an individual Judge. On that board would sit:

"A physician capable of determining to what extent the convicted prisoner's physical characteristics contributed to his delinquency and what therapeutic methods, if any, would supply the remedy.

"A psychiatrist capable of performing the same service in relation to his mental characteristics.

"A trained social worker to study the effects of past and future environment.

"A business man, for his knowledge of life and of general conditions which might affect any particular case.

"The Judge, representing the authority and the attitude of the law.

"Such a board would have nothing to do with determining the guilt or innocence of a defendant. That would be a matter, just as now, for the Judge and the jury. Its purpose would not be to coddle the offender. Instead of a Judge trying to guess in advance the number of years' confinement to which the offender should be subjected, such a board would study the prisoner periodically from all angles and would release him only when in fact it would appear that paroling him would be for the best interests of society and of the offender himself.

"As far as the deterrent purpose of a sentence is concerned, this could be accomplished by the Judge pronouncing a minimum sentence sufficient in his opinion to warn other potential lawbreakers, and then the remedial effect would be achieved through the board's decision as to how long the sentence should actually run and under what conditions it should be served. Since the board would keep the prisoner under observation during his entire period of incarceration, it could study his progress toward reformation and determine the length of his confinement accordingly, subject to the minimum sentence imposed by the Judge."

IN URGING this reform Judge Stern stands by no means alone. Many prominent laymen, sociologists and jurists have recommended similar changes in methods of sentencing. In an address before the Crime Commission of New York several years ago, former Governor Alfred E. Smith had this to say:

"I believe that the power of sentence ought to be taken away from Judges entirely, and I further believe that fixed and definite sentences should be made dependent upon the finding of a commission. * * * The jury ought to determine guilt or innocence without anything in their minds except did he commit this crime or did he not, and as soon as the verdict is rendered and he is found guilty, he ought to be turned over to the State of New York for such disposition as would be determined by a board of the highest-salaried men that we probably have in our community.

"I DO not think it would be a mistake for the State of New York to set up a board properly constituted of psychiatrists, alienists, lawyers and students * * * and let them make the final disposition of that man in the best interest of the State and the best interest of the man himself, and thereafter the control and disposition would remain with that body with the power to recommend parole or transfer probably to a State institution for the care of the feeble-minded or the insane. * * * A clearing house, after conviction and before sentence, ought to be provided where these men could be under close observation for the pesiod that a psychiatrist suggests as necessary to make some diagnosis of his case so as to determine all the factors. * * * After sentence a good many things are found out about a man that the Judge does not have in mind when he is sentencing him.

"There are no two criminals alike. There are no two crimes exactly alike. There is a different set of facts and circumstances that lead up to them all. A great many of them are accidental, and if you can have a board to study this thing, spend money on it, it is worth while spending it."

"But," continued Judge Stern, "the layman mav say: 'This appears to be an involved method of solving what seems, after all, to be a very simple problem.'

"My answer is that the problem is by no means simple. The elements are extremely involved. The question of what constitutes the proper handling of a criminal offense would puzzle anybody. I have proved this by an actual experiment conducted several times over a period of years. Let me describe it.

"The experiment is, at the conclusion of an address on the criminal law and on some phases of penology, to picture to the audience the case of a defendant who once stood before me for sentencing. His offense had been the embezzlement of a large sum of money from a bank in which he had been employed a short time before. Between the time of the peculation and the trial relatives had made restitution in full and the man himself had married, was truly penitent and reformed, and was achieving both social and business success. Neither the bank nor the District Attorney nor any one else asked for punishment.

"What, I ask then, would members of the audience do in this case if they sat on the bench?

"Sentence the erstwhile embezzler to prison, thereby ruining his career, breaking up his family and benefiting no one concerned in the case?

"Or permit him to walk out a free man, thereby holding that theft can be committed without penalty if only the offender becomes sorry, and especially if he has wealthy relatives who, by making restitution for him, help to deaden the clamor for prosecution?

"Hearers are asked to indicate their opinions. The results are interesting.

"Regardless of educational, social or other backgrounds, the audiences invariably vote about 50 per cent for the prison term and about 50 per cent for freedom. The proportion never varies greatly. There is not only no unanimity of opinion, but the opinion is always about equally divided.

"The fact that in one such typical case thousands of average persons are so evenly divided on the decision illustrates how difficult is the administration of the criminal law.

"TRAINED and experienced jurists vary in their opinions of the proper penalties for crime as markedly as do lecture-hall audiences. There was once a new Judge who reserved decision in a case in the criminal court. He sought the advice of an older and much-respected jurist of long experience.

"'Why, that's quite simple,' explained his adviser. 'The offense is one of the common derelictions of youth and not likely to be repeated. Put him on probation.'

"Then he put the question to another veteran of the bench also justly esteemed as an able and conscientious Judge. The answer was equally firm and decisive.

"'A serious offense,' he was told. 'You should impose at least a two-year sentence.'

"The essential significance of this story is the great need for more scientific methods in that branch of court procedure which deals with the sentencing of convicted offenders. Every one knows the great discrepancies in sentences meted out to criminals by different Judges, or even by the same Judge at different times."

Judge Stern sees definite indications that some desired reforms will soon be achieved. In a measure passed by the Pennsylvania Legislature this year and signed by the Governor, Judge Stern recognizes a definite entering wedge, promising the aid of psychiatry and social study in the sentencing and rehabilitation of criminals.

The bill provide for the deferring of sentences in certain cases pending mental examination of the offender by qualified psychiatrists.

After that first step has been completed, Judge Stern believes, the establishment of institutions wherein the mental defective may be treated and the social misfit may be recast for citizenship will follow.

"BACK of many of our difficulties," Judge Stern added, "lies the fact that lawyers and Judges are likely to look askance on attempts at scientific criminology and penology. These sciences, so important in our modern civilization, appear to remain the exclusive province of the sociologist. Unfortunately, the lawyers, as a general rule, regard practice in the criminal courts as one of the lower branches of the profession.

"Some of those who do practice there too often are engaged in employing the tricks of the trade rather than impressed with the social responsibilities of their calling. Of course, this criticism does not, by any means, apply to all, for we have some of the ablest and finest lawyers at the bar who practice largely in the criminal courts.

"One project of which I am very fond is that of establishing a course in criminology as a compulsory part of law-school training. This will have a beneficial effect on the attitude of lawyers attracted to practice in the criminal courts and would make them more socially minded in their work. Moreover, since Judges come from the ranks of the bar, it would mean that they, too, would profit from such studies, and would be able to handle the complex problems presented to them with full appreciation of modern scientific knowledge. In short, the entire administration of the criminal law would, I think, be improved."

In support of this theory Judge Stern has frequently expressed his eagerness that a chair of criminology and penology should be endowed by some broad-minded and wise citizen in the Law School of the University of Pennsylvania, from which he was graduated and where for many years he lectured to the students.

Scornful Lady

By George Thorp Rayner

Which Type of Girl Does Man Like Better: the Clinging-Vine, Honeyed-Word Kind or the Girl Who Speaks Her Mind?

"Oh!" she trilled. "Mr. Douglas! Zelda's talked so much about you. And I've been simply dying to meet you"

ZELDA BROWN was lovely, with that very special kind of loveliness that can survive a New York party and come up smiling to meet the dawn. Moreover, it was a loveliness that included sleek, raven's-wing hair, jade green eyes and a dusky-amber skin. She could wear every color but blue. She looked particularly magnificent in yellow. And that, of course, was an achievement.

She was the type that men glance back at for a second look, and women for a third. Pallid little stenographers would gaze at her enviously as she passed and mumble "Park avenue" tonelessly.

But they were wrong. Oh, quite wrong! For Zelda's own days were also a like succession of interminable pot-hooks, and she was not above washing out her chiffon stockings in the wash-basin, either. * * *

Tonight, at the Harland Masons' party, history had been repeating itself. It was the same old story. Entrance at 10 in a wrap that was ermine to all but the most lynx-eyed, and a yellow gown that promptly killed every other dress in the room. At 10:30 a dance with the most desirable man. At 11, complete disappearance in a huddle of dinner coats. But alas, at 1:30, she was quite alone in a corner divan with the same old aching smile on her face, racked with that terrible necessity of looking alive—and happy—and facing another ghastly hour or so of loneliness.

That was the way it had always been. And that, according to Marge, was the way it would always be. "If you'd only learn!" she would say in that soft, injured voice of hers; "if you would only learn to flatter the men—or else keep your mouth shut!"

TONIGHT was even more dreadful than usual, though. She'd had a premonition when Marge had offered her the bid to this party. "Oh, but Zelda!" she had cried, "you won't mind going blind just this once, will you? After all, he's a friend of Charlie's, and that ought to mean something!"

He'd been a washout, of course. A tall, gangly chap called Bertram with a ready-made dress tie that kept coming down and flapping on his shirt-front. To make matters worse, he wrote poetry. He had brought along a sheaf of it to read to Zelda.

Then when he'd asked her how she'd liked it, she had answered, with her usual frankness: "I think it's rotten!"

Fifteen minutes after that he had gone off in a huff for his hat and coat and cleared out, leaving her stranded.

So there was nothing left for her but the fervent prayer that the party would break up soon. Her hostess had come over to the divan on three different occasions to talk with her, which was horrible enough, and although that so desirable man had glanced her way more than once he had unfortunately been usurped by a little redhead, who had clung to him, leech-like, throughout the evening.

Zelda loathed women who clung. And she was beginning to loathe the men who let them.

Some day. * * * Some day. * * * "Send me a man who doesn't want to be soft-soaped!" she prayed silently.

She glanced up with over-bright eyes and saw Marge and Charlie coming her way.

"Oh, Zelda!" Marge was using her "company" voice, but her eyes were searing. "I'm so sorry about Bertram! He was ill, wasn't he?"

"No," she said. "I told him the truth about his poetry, and he couldn't take it."

Marge's blonde prettiness had gone a trifle blotchy, and her eyes had that 3 o'clock look, but Charlie's arm was about her as rapturously as ever.

"Oh, dear!" She stood looking down at Zelda and biting her lip. "Well—— Of course you must come with Charlie and me. We — we're going on to a night club, but we'll drop you off at the apartment. If you don't mind. * * *"

"Don't bother. I'll taxi."

"No!" Charlie exclaimed, "I couldn't let you do that! You let us take you home in our taxi!"

WHEN they were in the car Zelda sank back, grateful for the sudden darkness. She was careful, however, to edge up near the window and keep her eyes determinedly outward. She liked to stare into the warm gray darkness, at the glitter of the lights, and now—they were cutting through Central Park—to feel that ecstatic lift in her heart at the sight of the 59th street sky-line, with its luxurious outlines. New York was such a swell place—on the outside!

"Oh! * * *" Marge was cooing, "I've had such a glorious time, Charlie! I simply adored everything, and especially the way you danced!"

"Say," he said, "you're not so bad yourself!"

Zelda tried not to listen, but couldn't quite help catching the soft whisper of that kiss. Then there was silence and the heavy caress of Marge's perfume.

The soft, purring voice started again: "It was really the loveliest party. Although I hardly noticed any one else; though there were some awfully nice-looking men there. Not that they could compare—— No, I won't say that. I don't want you to get conceited, Charlie! But there was just one chap—you know, that awfully dark one in full dress?"

"You mean Jeff Douglas? Yeh, he's pretty smooth."

"Well, I wouldn't exactly say that. Do you know him well?"

"I see him around a lot. He's manager over at the Clarendon Arms. Pretty swell job."

"Oh! * * *" Just the faintest sigh. "Of course I don't really like his type. I just wondered. * * *"

THE next day, at exactly 5:05 o'clock, Zelda went into the phone booth in the cigar store on the corner. She lifted the receiver and gave a number that was especially thrilling—as all new numbers were, at first.

"Hello—— Is this the Clarendon Arms? I wonder if I might speak to Mr. Jeffrey Douglas?" She leaned back, rather limp, against the dusty tin partition.

Then she heard, startlingly close, that deep, masculine voice.

"Oh, Mr. Douglas — this is Zelda Brown!"

The polite, puzzled, answering monosyllable dropped on her heart like a stone. Then he didn't remember!

She waited for a moment, forcing her voice back to normal. "At the party last night—I——"

"Oh! * * *" The voice buzzed with sudden warmth. "The lady in yellow! The superlative lady in yellow!"

Ah, life was sweet! "Yes," she said, and went on very earnestly: "I did so enjoy meeting you. And I wondered if the—the pleasure—was mutual. I——" She hesitated, breathing deeply against the absurd pounding of her heart.

There was a moment of complete silence at the other end of the wire. Then he said in that same warm voice: "You know, you must be a mind-reader! You certainly did make a big hit with me—I've been kicking myself all day because I hadn't got your name. Nobody at the party seemed to know. I——"

She laughed, then; but it wasn't one of her sarcastic laughs, for a wonder. This one was low and trembled a bit.

"I'm sure glad you called!" he said. "It's one of those chances one looks for in one's wildest dreams. I'd sort of given up hoping that I'd find a woman who was—who was different! * * *

"I'm liking you better by the minute!" he went on. "And listen. What are you doing tonight * * *?"

When she reached home, at ten minutes past 7, she found Marge fussing and fuming away in the kitchenette, a half done cross-word puzzle and a plate of congealing lamb chops on the table.

"Well!" Marge glared. "And where have you been, may I ask?"

"Busy. Sorry I'm late!"

"What are you getting a shampoo and a manicure in the middle of the week for?"

"Going out tonight."

"Any one I know?"

"Nope."

It was easy to see that Marge was not going out. She still looked a trifle blotchy from last evening, and her lip-stick had smudged. She was also in a temper. "Well, I don't see why under the sun you rate the dates you do. The way you treat men! Anyway, I don't notice that you get many repeats. Why, last night——"

"Isn't it my own life?"

"Don't you think it was humiliating to me, having you insult Charlie's boy friend? But never mind that. I'm thinking of your own future, Zelda Brown! Here you are, 26 years of age, and not a prospect! You'll still be pushing a pencil twenty years from now!"

Zelda shoved her plate aside and sat up, very straight. "Listen! Get this. If I can't find a man who will take me as is and like it, I'll go to the old ladies' home with nary a whimper. But I'll not be a welcome-mat to any man's feet. I'm going to meet them on their own ground. When they ask me things I'll give them my honest opinion. No weeping on the shoulder and no languishing glances from me!"

"Well! You'll never meet a man on this earth who doesn't need some flattery—and you can take my word for it!"

"No?" And Zelda smiled her most determined smile. "Perhaps I have already. Who knows?"

WHEN the bell rang an hour later Zelda was dressed and ready. She was wearing the ravishing geranium frock she had bought that afternoon, and for which she had mortgaged her next month's pay. With it she wore her black coat and a black hat with the coq feathers.

She met him halfway up the stairs. "Marvel of marvels!" he cried, "A girl who's on time!"

When they were on the curb, at the side of the swanky maroon roadster he said, apologetically: "Sorry I haven't a closed car. But I'll put the top up for you."

"I like the wind," she said. "If you don't mind."

He stared down at her quizzically. "Say, you're too good to be true! I'm beginning to doubt that you're real, even. Every girl I know gets the jitters about driving with the top down. Afraid it'll take the curl out of their hair."

They zoomed off, on up the avenue, with the moonlight falling over them in a silver shower.

"How'd you like to go out to Ben Riley's? You'll get plenty fresh air there, out on the terrace."

"Couldn't be better!"

"The moonlight, you know, and everything. * * *"

"I was thinking more of the floor. It's a good one."

THEN he laughed expansively. "Oh, it's a pose! It's got to be!"

She found herself laughing, too. It was so absurd! * * * But he liked her! She could tell by his eyes. She'd never seen any quite like them before. So crystal-brown. And the way his black hair could reflect moonlight!

It turned out to be the kind of a date she'd always dreamed about. A man you could really talk to. A man who danced like nobody's business and didn't have to be told so every ten minutes. A man who respected you.

Then it came. She wasn't quite prepared. There hadn't even been the premonition of that first kiss. It had been so unexpected. So complete. The most satisfactory one she had ever had. She couldn't help but surrender to it. She wanted to.

When she opened her eyes the world swam a little, with the colors of the lanterns swarming about her. So * * * so heavenly.

And that is what she should have said.

But it was Jeff who broke the silence, a little too quickly. "Oh," he breathed, "I—I want to apologize!"

She looked up, startled. Could she be hearing aright?

"I mean it! I—I should have known better!"

"But * * *" She was completely stunned.

"You see," he went on, "I could see from the start that you were the kind of a girl that is—shall I say, above that sort of thing? It was so unusual meeting you, and finding that you were absolutely real that I sort of lost my head."

"I don't get you!" she said, finding her voice at last.

"But don't you see? You're the only girl I've ever met who didn't want to be made love to. And, Great Scott, how I've yearned to meet some one like that! A girl who could be straight from the shoulder——"

She swayed, and would have fainted, if she had been that kind.

"Don't you see?" he breathed. "You're what every man hopes for but never gets. Just a pal! A real pal!"

"Oh! * * *" she said. That was all, that tiny, twisted word that sounded very far away.

SHE didn't see Marge again until the next evening. The barrage of questions had been put off that long, at least.

"Well!" the soft, purring voice came from the bedroom, "I can't see why you won't talk about him! Surely, if he's as grand as you say you're not going to keep it a secret!"

Marge was going out that evening. So there couldn't be so many questions.

"But is he handsome? Does he——"

The telephone rang, suddenly.

"Will you answer that, Zelda? If it's Charlie say I'm getting ready—but if it's any other man I'll answer."

It was Jeff.

She closed her eyes and listened, finding her heart still throbbing at the sound of that voice. The voice of the only man she'd ever loved! But what was the use? A pal! "No," she said, after a pause, "I'll be busy tonight. Sorry!"

A long, piercing shriek came from the other room. "Zelda! You fool!"

"Oh," she said calmly into the mouthpiece, "that was the dumbwaiter. It needs oiling so badly." Then, suddenly, she continued: "Jeff, I guess I can come at that. Yes. At 10:30."

And at 10:30 to the dot she again met him halfway down the stairs; this time in chartreuse chiffon and a little white velvet jacket.

"Zelda," he cried exuberantly, "I want you to meet some college friends of mine. They're all doubting Thomases—said there couldn't possibly be a girl on earth the way you sounded—but I said I'd show 'em! I want you to meet——"

There were four of them, staring at her in quite evident delight.

"We're going to make the Grand Tour! Top of the Empire State. A night club. And Harlem, if we last!"

A pal! Just a pal! Well, what of it? "Come on!" she cried, catching his exuberance, "let's go!"

And it would have been an ecstatic evening, it would have been an utterly marvelous evening, if it hadn't been for that tiny, cold pain nestling against her heart. The girl who didn't want to be made love to!

They treated her from the start as though she had been another man. Atop the Empire State, where they had had the most absurd time throwing peanuts down into the void; on 6th avenue at a shooting gallery, where Zelda won a box of cigars. She could give back a joke or a wisecrack with the best of them. It was a grand lark. Until, that is, they reached the Palm Grove.

For there they met Marge and Charlie. Although, of course, he didn't matter.

They hadn't been in the club fifteen minutes before she had come over to them. With her sweetest, little-girl smile.

"Oh! * * *" she trilled. "Mr. Douglas! Zelda's talked about you so much! And I've been simply dying to meet you!"

She was looking her absolute best tonight. Her frilly blue dress, her fluffy golden hair, and those eyes that were like turquoises, as blue—and as flat.

Zelda realized afterward that it was at this moment that everything crashed.

She remembered how Marge had got him off into a corner, and how she had run her hands up over his coat lapels. Oh, Zelda had been watching, despite the fact that one of Jeff's friends was carrying on the most animated conversation with her at the time.

What was it he had been saying? Oh, yes. * * * "You know——" And his voice had been deep and masculine, too. "You know, Zelda, a girl of your type gets a great deal out of life that other girls don't. But I guess you realize that!"

IN THE weeks that followed she preferred not to think of that night.

After all, she prided herself on her honest thinking. It was all over between her and Jeff. It had been all over before it had begun. And if it hadn't been Marge it would have been somebody else.

Although she resented Marge's leering secrecy. Several times lately she had said: "Going out tonight. And guess with whom? A friend of yours, Zelda!" And she had answered: "I don't give a hoot whom you go out with. You make me sick to my stomach when you talk that way."

Tonight, however, they had both elected to stay at home. Zelda had offered to help fix over Marge's second-best evening gown. It had been getting a lot of use lately.

But Marge had been acting strangely during dinner. At last she said: "Listen, Zelda, never mind about the dress. There's a good movie on down the street at the Bijou. Why don't you run over and see it?"

"Oh, stop beating about the bush! If you want me to get out, say so. Only you know we made the agreement that we'd never have any men come up——"

"Zelda! How can you hint at such things? You see, it's this way—he's coming to take me out tonight—and he'll have to wait a while because I simply won't be ready. I thought it might embarrass you, seeing him again."

"I'll clear out. What time does he arrive?"

"About 10 o'clock, I guess. Oh, Zelda, you are a good pal!"

"Listen!" she cried. "Don't call me that! I can't stand it!"

The fates, however, were slightly contrary that evening. At any rate, the party who had left the downstairs door open was somewhat to blame, also. For it was at the exact moment when Zelda was about to go out that a knock sounded on the door.

She stood there, petrified. It was only 9 o'clock! And Marge was in the bath-tub, splashing away.

Well, there was only one thing to do. Let him in, toss him a brief greeting, and pass on.

"Zelda!" he exclaimed, going red at once.

"Hello!" she said, in what she hoped was a breezy manner. "You're a little ahead of time. I guess Marge got her time mixed. But she'll be ready in a while, though. Won't you come in and wait?"

"Gee whiz! Do you have to rush away? Sit down a while. I want to know why you won't see me any more nowadays, Zelda. It isn't like you!"

She wavered. The splashings had ceased and there was the rattle of a cold-cream jar and Marge's voice trilling a current tune.

"Just a minute," Zelda said, "I'll tell her you're here and to put on some steam."

It was at that moment that the telephone sounded down the hall. The bathroom door opened and Marge's voice cried blithely: "Never mind, Zelda, I'll answer it."

Zelda sank down into a chair. Perhaps she should have gone out and warned Marge. Perhaps. But she wasn't going to.

"Hello?" The soft voice carried to the living room with surprising clarity. "Oh, hel-lo, Albert! I've just been longing to hear your voice again! * * * Yes! * * * Oh, now, listen, honey! You know there isn't any one on this earth I like better than you! * * * No, really! * * * No, now, I mean it! * * * Yes, I am going out tonight. I'm awfully sorry. Such a horrid, stuffy man, too. I wish I could break it. * * * No, it isn't any one you know. But I'll be thinking of you, Bertie, when I'm suffering through this evening. How's that? * * * No, I mean it! I'll be thinking of you simply every minute!"

ZELDA looked down at her hands, aware of the frozen silence in the living room. Then she said: "We've been having rather cold weather for June, haven't we?"

But he didn't answer.

There was a sudden silence at the end of the hall. A tiny gasp, and the sound of a receiver clicking into place.

Marge appeared in the doorway in her faded pink dressing gown, her face creamed to a metallic shine, her hair in a crazy pyramid of curlers. "Zelda, who on earth are you talking——" Then she stopped, dumfounded. "Oh! * * *" she cried, her face whiter than the cream. "Oh! * * * It's Jeff!" Then she disappeared.

Zelda followed her down the hall. There was the slam of the bedroom door, and a dismal wail. "Tell him to go away!" she cried. "Tell him I'm sick! Tell him I'm dreadfully sick!"

In five minutes Zelda reappeared in the living room. "I'm sorry," she said, "but Marge isn't feeling well. She won't be able to go out this evening."

"I see," he said. His jaws had gone very white, and there was the strangest look in his eyes.

They stood there, staring at each other.

"Well——" Zelda said uncertainly.

He was still staring at her. Then he gave a start, as though he were coming out of a bad dream. "Can't I see you to—to a taxicab?"

They walked down the stairs silently. There wasn't any roadster at the curb. Marge had evidently rebelled against that.

A cruising cabby sighted them, swerved over to the curb. Jeff stood holding the door.

"Good night, Jeff!—I'm sorry about Marge!"

But he had got in and closed the door, and they were off!

"I'll go as far as you're going, Zelda, if you don't mind! I want to talk to you. * * *"

Her thoughts were cluttering together. "But—— But I'm not going anywhere! I was just going to drive around the block and come back!" Telling the truth, even now!

"Oh, Zelda! * * *" His hands had grasped hers in a grip that hurt. "I've been such a fool! Such a damned fool!"

"Yes," she said, "you have."

He was silent. He had let go of her hands.

And it was then that the most peculiar thing happened to her. Something snapping—her heart stopping for a moment, and then racing madly on—and the inside of the taxi revolving about her. She felt herself toppling toward him. * * *

He caught her in his arms. "Zelda! Zelda!"

She strove, ineffectively, to sit up straight. He had her in a warm, almost suffocating embrace. He was kissing her madly. "But I love you! I have even from the start! What a fool I was not to have known!"

She did not stir. She didn't want to stir again, ever. She felt so—so comfy. Her head was against his shoulder, her hands creeping up over his coat lapels, and she was crying.

Crying on his shoulder! Crying—for a man!

But she didn't care! It was worth it, just this once. * * *

SECTION OF THE WASHINGTON POST

WASHINGTON, D. C., JUNE 11, 1933.

GREAT PATRIOTIC DAYS HAVE INSPIRED FINE WORK!

Our Writers, Artists and Poets Contribute to Special Numbers

Dear Post Boys and Girls:

Hurrah, hurrah, for Flag Day and The Junior Post Flag Day number, of which we were all so proud, and hurrah for Fourth of July and The Junior Post's Fourth of July number, which will be issued Sunday, July 2!

The editor of The Junior Post is very proud of the manner in which The Junior Post writers and artists and the boys and girls of the Knighthood of Youth get the real spirit of our great patriotic days in their drawings, writings and poems.

Already we have a very fine collection of drawings, stories and poems for the Fourth of July number. They are not all on vacations, picnics, good times and fireworks, either, but many of them deal with the real meaning of our great day of independence from patriotic and citizenship standpoints.

Even Ding-How, the editor of the Pets' Corner, is getting out a special patriotic Fourth of July corner and the pets are sending in some stories to him.

The Junior Post Editor hopes that many of the boys and girls will be able to take advantage of the Girl Scout and Boy Scout camps, and the camps of the Girl Reserves of the Y. W. C. A. this summer, and, of course, other such camps.

Those of you who can not, might take advantage of our own lovely parks in and around Washington. Perhaps mother will let you fix a luncheon some day and you can have a good time "hiking" down to the banks of the Potomac River. You can fish and read and play games and enjoy your luncheon just as much as though you had traveled miles by train or motor to a sylvan spot by the side of a river. Our own lovely, dreamy Potomac River is very nice.

Very few boys and girls have the chance to visit such a beautiful park as our own Rock Creek Park, with the entertainments of the National Zoological Park so near.

You can ride out there and sit by the banks of the lovely, ripply brook and eat your luncheon there, or the whole family can go out and have supper under the trees, and even cook a meal in the ovens provided for that purpose. We have so many advantages for health and the pursuit of happiness right here in our beautiful Capital City!

Then, of course, do not forget our playgrounds, with all their advantages for play and work.

EDITOR, JUNIOR POST.

A Summer Day.

Summer is here
And flowers appear—
The birds are singing so gay.

The birds pop out
And begin to sprout—
All is in a summer way.

The birds sing sweet
In the city street—
All on a summer day.

Sleep.

When sleep comes to meet me at my bed at night,
He comes in a cloud that has a tremendous light;
He puts brown sand in my big, blue eye
And tells me not to be so shy.

I always call him when I'm tired
And he is always at my service, as if hired,
Then he tells me to go to sleep
And not to open my eyes and peep.

For if you do, you will fall in a hole
And on your cheek will rest a mole.
So just watch and it will be all right,
But you better watch out, because it might happen some night.

Algebra.

I love thou, oh, so dearly, dearly;
I see thou, oh, so clearly, clearly;
Thou art at times quite easy;
In fact, thou are at times quite pleasing.

But when thou ask me just to do
Those pesky problems through and through,
Thou art not truly then my friend,
But I will get thou in the end.

Thou are strong and firmly anchored,
But thou are early found and conquered.
When my will power seems to cease,
Thou will not leave me in peace.

But just thou wait and thou will see
Who is the boss, "you or me?" (or, I hope, it's me);
Then again thou art my pal
And friend to friend thou are swell.

The American Flag.

Two men sat talking together one day. They were considered great magnates in the business circles. People wishing advice came to talk with them, and went away satisfied with the answer of men, full of the knowledge and wisdom of a swiftly moving world.

Outside their office window the sun shone down on a banner of red, white and blue, that waved gaily in the summer breeze. While inside on a highly-polished desk, a calendar showed the date to be June 14, Flag Day. The eyes of both men as if drawn by a magnet rested on the flag and both hands were raised in a salute to America's standard.

Somewhere a bugle sounded, bands began to play, a parade was passing in review. Below in the streets crowds of people were gathered to witness this patriotic spectacle. Both friends went to the window, raised it, and the strains of the national anthem floated up on the air.

One of the men told his companion that the American flag was his standard in life. The other man asked why, and received his answer thus, "When I was a boy I respected the flag, because it held a strange meaning to me, but when I grew older that meaning so incoherent in my younger days appeared transparent. It stood for unity and justice. Many times I have felt that I was defeated, everything looked black, and then I remembered my standard. I thought of the bitter wars that had been fought, the lives snatched away. But the union had remained whole and entire all through the chaos and sorrow. Why should I be disheartened by financial trouble when a nation had weathered the storm of war and distress? The banner of freedom still waves on and I hope it will forever more!"

They stood again and saluted "Old Glory" that floated and rippled proudly on the breeze.

Spring.

Spring is a wonderful season,
You can always give a reason,
The flowers are in bloom,
With their sweet perfume,
And all of the trees,
With most of their leaves,
Make Spring a wonderful season.

Gardens.

In our back yard are six flower beds in which the spring and summer flowers are in bloom.

Near the fence is a pretty mixture of white, pink, President Hoover and American Beauty roses. Between them are pink poppies, white peonies and many colored iris. Daisies, phlox, roses, iris, delphinium, look over the terrace, while watching from below, the hollyhocks grow along the fence. Beside the garage on the one side, are wall flowers, nasturtiums and sweet alyssum, and on the other side, morning-glories, ladies' slipper, china pinks and baby iris adorn the walls. In the two remaining gardens are petunias, pansies, and everlasting bushes. To fill in wall spaces are climbing roses, hydrangeas and other bushes and trees.

Now in this beautiful time of the year we can't help but feel contented as we walk along the path.

Dear Editor: I am sending a few more contributions for your paper. My cousin is also sending two poems through me. Her mother says she composed them herself when she was supposed to take a nap. I think they are rather cute myself. I am corresponding with a girl in England. If you know of any one who would like to correspond with one the next time I write I will send for the names and addresses of some of her friends.

Yours respectfully,

The Jungfrau.

The Jungfrau is one of the Alps. It is seen from Berne, which is the capital of Switzerland. It is a very high mountain. In the evening the mountain is very pretty with the alpine glow. There is a shadow that looks like a large cross on it. Many people go and ski on this mountain. A train goes near the top of it where there is a hotel. The train goes through tunnels most of the way.

In her frosty mantle of snow,
Dance the sunbeams as they glow,
The rocks and glaciers hang over the crag,
And near the top stands her country's flag.
In her rocks of paradise,
The snow lies deep,
And on her breast roll chunks of ice,
Which wake the torrents from their sleep.

The Morning Star

Oh, Jean, come on. Wake up,
For you must go to school.
Remember what I told you.
That must be your rule.

Jean, dear, come here and look
Out at that Eastern sky.
A strip of pink and up above
The morning star so high.

As I looked out I saw
Such a glorious hue of pink;
And up above the morning star
So bright that I began to think.

When birds announce that spring
With flowers gay, is near;
'Tis like the morning star
That tells us morn is here.

The Pets' Corner

Edited by Ding-How of Hydegree.
(Mascot of The Junior Post).

Heigho! heigho! Dog days are just around the corner, bow wow wow and all the pets are going to celebrate by taking nice long naps every afternoon and eating lots and lots of ice cream and cake and drinking nice cold milk, bow wow wow wow wow.

I have been around to tell Hop Toy Pekinese he can not be an editor unless he sends us in some news. Meggie says that Little Sistle Dall and her Little Brother Buzzie went to the circus last week in a White House car and saw lots of relatives of the pets who belong to this corner. Meggie Scottie Roosevelt has invited me to swim in the new White House pool, but an editor is so busy that it is very hard to find time enough to swim or to walk. But, of course, if I took my typewriter I would be able to write about the good times the President and his family have in the pool and how very glad every man woman and child and pet in the country are that they have this pool.

Murphy Aitchison Fox Terrier says he is going to learn to do some more circus acts. Perhaps he will be able to see the White House pool, too. But, of course, Murphy is only an actor and I guess the White House knows he does not really mold public opinion like an editor does. Here I am looking through my glasses at the world.

Sandy Orkney Terrier Gordon has been here and is bragging again about how much he knows about the law. He was in my house so I did not say anything about his breaking my typewriter, but if it happens again I will go to law myself. When I walk in court with my new Flag Day necktie, my eye glasses on and long sheets of paper with typewriting on it, the law will have respect for me, too.

Mike Great Dane, Daisy and Spider are having a very good time these days enjoying the country and the flowers so much. Of course, they are good reporters but they are not editors.

Mr. Tweet Canary is singing another song. That bird says it is summer, although we all know that June is a spring month.

The Honorable Mrs. Plum Tree is getting ready to go to the sea side and acts as though she were the only person that ever went away. But she goes with such a nice lady that we really envy her, bow! wow! wow! wow!

Dear Ding-How: That salutation sounds so formal that I do believe I shall say "Hello!" next time. I hope your lordship won't mind, but if you do, I certainly will not try to offend you. My mistress says she doesn't know what she'll do with me if I don't stop fighting, but I can't help it if the others pick on me. Anyway, I hope she doesn't do anything. My mistress got bitten about two weeks ago, but she says it is all right now (the bite, I mean). She was wrestling with her girl friend when he snapped at her leg. The dog was my old friend, Tippie Collie. Was I surprised or was I surprised? Well, that's all I have to say except that Vamp plays with me now. So long. Don't bite any one, no matter how hot you get, unless one runs off with your typewriter.

July 4 Patriotic Incentive for Recruiting Campaign

THE JUNIOR POST AIRSHIP

"In the good old summer time," sang the pilot as the editor climbed into the airship for the weekly tour of the world, for the benefit of The Junior Post Writers, Artists and the Knighthood of Youth. "I have just had a good swim in the pool and I feel fine."

"So do I, and so have I. I mean I feel good and have had a nice swim in the pool!" asserted the editor.

"So has the President of the United States in common with other men and boys all over the Nation today," said the pilot, as they circled the White House and looked down on President Roosevelt swimming in the White House pool, the gift of the people of the Nation. The water looked so nice and emerald green, which of course is just an illusion, because the sides are of green marble. It is a pretty pool and pretty deep, too. Just see how well he swims."

"Yes, indeed, and there goes little Sistie Dall, his granddaughter," pointed out the editor, as the little girl plunged into the pool and struck out hand-over-hand in an expert manner to meet her grandfather in the water. "What a good time she is having."

"They always do, those Roosevelts," returned the pilot. "Laughter is in order in the White House. Mrs. Roosevelt has gone by air to the Coast, but will be back in a few days. A fine, typical, happy, accomplishing American family, the Roosevelt family."

They flew over the Public Library and saw the boys and girls going in to visit Hitty, the century-old doll, who has had a whole book written about her by Miss Rachel Field. Hitty has come to Washington under the chaperonage of Miss Field and receives every day at the Public Library.

They circled over Arlington National Cemetery and floated over the beautiful memorial gateway, which has just been completed.

Then back to the White House they came just in time to see Mrs. Pattie Willis South, of Kentucky, 81 years old, who was a luncheon guest at the White House. Mrs. Roosevelt heard that it was the ambition of this venerable woman to eat a meal at the White House, and invited her for luncheon. What a good time Mrs. South did have, too!

Over the Washington Navy Yard they caught a glimpse of some of the sailors wearing the new Navy hats, higher and wider and more "snappy" looking according to Uncle Sam's man-of-wars men.

Then off they flew to London just in time to see the American Ambassador, Robert Bingham, and Mrs. Bingham arriving at Buckingham Palace to present their credentials to King George. They rode in a royal carriage with scarlet coated driver and footman.

In the British Channel they saw tests being made of the new British navy diving suits, in which the man inside the suit carries his own air supply and does not have to get it from the surface through tubes as heretofore.

In Geneva, Switzerland, they were in time to hear the United States Ambassador at Large, Norman Davis, enunciating our foreign policy at the meeting of the World Conference.

They floated over Paris to look down on the citizens gathered in the Hall of Justice to receive instructions on the adjustment and wearing of gas masks in the case of enemy attacks in event of war.

They saw many Americans putting flowers on the graves of American soldiers in our cemeteries in France.

Children Should Join Knighthood To Serve Nation

As patriotism is the highest ideal of knighthood, the Fourth of July is a good time for a special recruiting campaign for the Knighthood of Youth.

This Nation-wide organization of boys and girls is sponsored in the District of Columbia and nearby communities by The Washington Post.

Boys and girls up to 12 years of age are invited to become members of this noble band. The high objectives of this organization are to instill in the youth of this country the value of high ideals and good habits and the virtue of the overcoming of bad habits.

Parents and children and their teachers are invited to come into the Knighthood of Youth office of The Washington Post and learn all about this fine organization of boys and girls.

During this summer we will print special stories on the various knights of history and are always glad to get contributions of Knighthood pictures from our young artists.

Contentment Big Virtue All Knights Must Cultivate

Contentment is one of the essential virtues all members of the Knighthood of Youth should cultivate in order to reach the pinnacle of knightly character. Of course, there is a great difference between being contented and being indifferent to what is going on around us.

A contented person believes in doing his very best at all times, not despairing because the world does not go his way.

The best parents in the world are those who are content and delighted in making sacrifices for their children; are content to work and guide them. On the other hand, the most contented children in the world are those who accept with gratitude what their parents give them and do not constantly compare what they have with what other children have. A contented child will accept the chance to learn and work and have a good time.

THE STORY BOOK LADY

"Hurrah! We are so happy!" shouted Maude and Martha as they hurried to meet the Story Book Lady and the members of The Junior Post Writers Club and the Knighthood of Youth for the weekly pilgrimage to Story Book Land. "Hurrah! We are going to Chicago to the Century of Progress World's Fair to see all the wonders of science. Father says he will buy us any books that will help us enjoy the fair more. So I hope we find some today."

"Yes we will!" said Lilian and Bill. "Mother and father and our big brother are back. Of course we are going to motor out there and have such a good time. We have begun to read up things now."

"We are going, too," said Susan, and other boys and girls chorused that they were on their way to the fair.

"Well," said the Story Book Lady, when all were gathered about her. "I am going, and I feel that I would like to read books that would help me enjoy the fair. So we will keep our eyes open today."

"I hope you will give me a list," said Mr. Gnome who keeps the gate of the Fairy Tale Bridge leading to Story Book Land. "I am going to take my three grandsons, Blick, Flick and Little Mick. We are going on our wheels. What a good time we expect to have and what a lesson or many lessons we are to learn."

"We hope we see you there," said the Story Book Lady, and all the boys and girls as they hurried through the gateway while Mr. Gnome and his three grandsons held open the gate so politely. They then all stood in a row and made deep bows with their green hats with its scarlet feathers on them in their hands.

"We are going, too," said the Story Book Fairy, as she flew out of the Fairy Tale Wood in her golden airplane, followed by the Story Book Fairy Children, Merry and Jolly. The queen is going and her court and all of us in Story Book Fairly Land."

"Perhaps we will see you," said Little Lillian.

"Anyway, you can see me now," said a white sparrow at the end of a book street. "Come right in."

"Oh, thank you," said the Story Book Lady, leading the way. "Let me see. Where are my magic glasses? Oh, here they are. It is called 'The White Sparrow,' by Padriac Colum, with illustrations by Lynd Ward (The Macmillan Co., New York). It is all about a little white sparrow who lives in a nest in the Luxembourg Gardens in Paris."

"'Well, well," said a King and Queen in their royal robes, standing in front of another book street. "Come right in."

"Of course we will," said the Story Book Lady, putting on her magic glasses. "Let me see. It is called 'Kings and Queens,' by Eleanor and Herbert Parjeon, with 36 colored plates by Rosalind Thorneycroft (E. P. Dutton & Co., New York). It is just full of rhymes about kings and queens and how we will enjoy reading them."

"And here is a book about our little Manchurian cousins," said Nell.

"Oh, yes," said the Story Book Lady, putting on her magic glasses. "It is true enough. 'Our Little Manchurian Cousin,' by Dr. Twhyi Hsieh, with illustrations by Owl (L. C. Page, Boston). Any child would enjoy reading this book."

Memorial Day.

Memorial Day is a day in the spring of each year, which is set apart as a legal holiday in most of the States of the American Union to do honor to those who fought on either side in the War of Secession. Beginning with the practice by bereaved Southern women of strewing wild flowers on the graves of their soldier dead one certain day each year, the beautiful custom has become Nationwide. The celebration of the day has been extended to include the honored dead of the Spanish-American and World Wars.

Gen. John A. Logan, commander in chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, in 1868 designated the thirtieth day of May as the day on which the graves of dead Union soldiers should be decorated, and this date is now universally observed throughout the Northern States. April 26 is appointed as Memorial Day in Alabama, Florida, Georgia and Mississippi. In North and South Carolina the day set apart is May 10. The second Friday in May is observed in Tennessee. In Louisiana, Jefferson Davis' birthday—June 3—was once that State's Memorial Day, but it is now April 26. Decoration Day is a day of dignified addresses, exercises, parades and military salutes, as well as strewing of flowers and planting of shrubs.

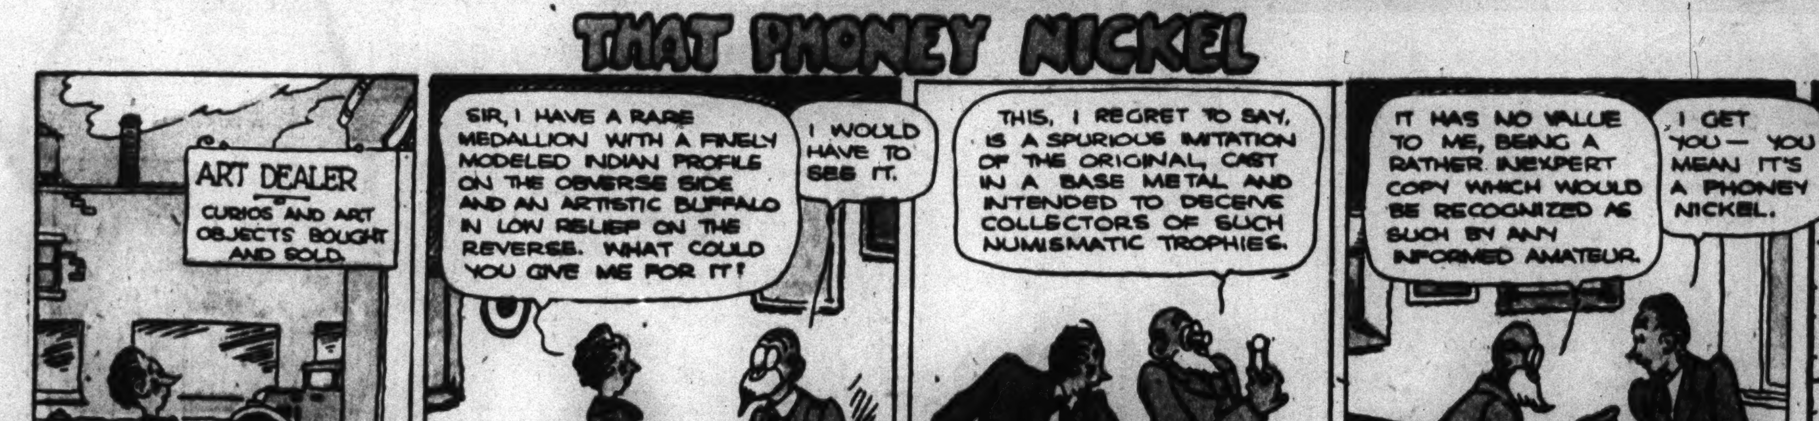
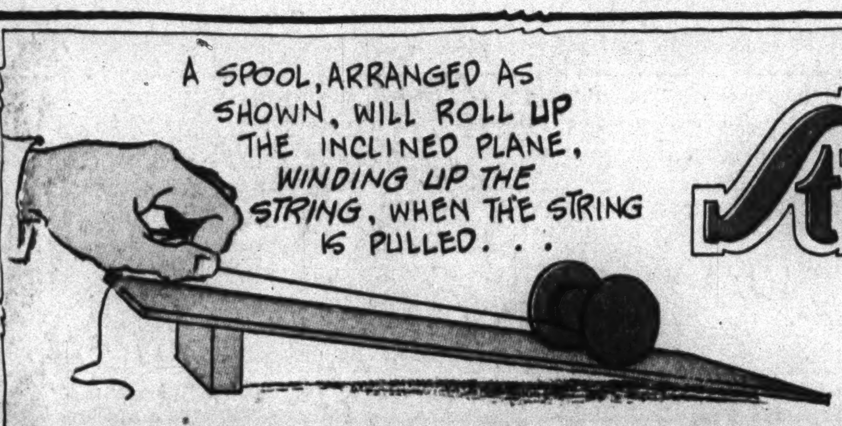
Laugh with the Gumps Every Day in The Post



Gasoline Alley Runs Daily in The Post

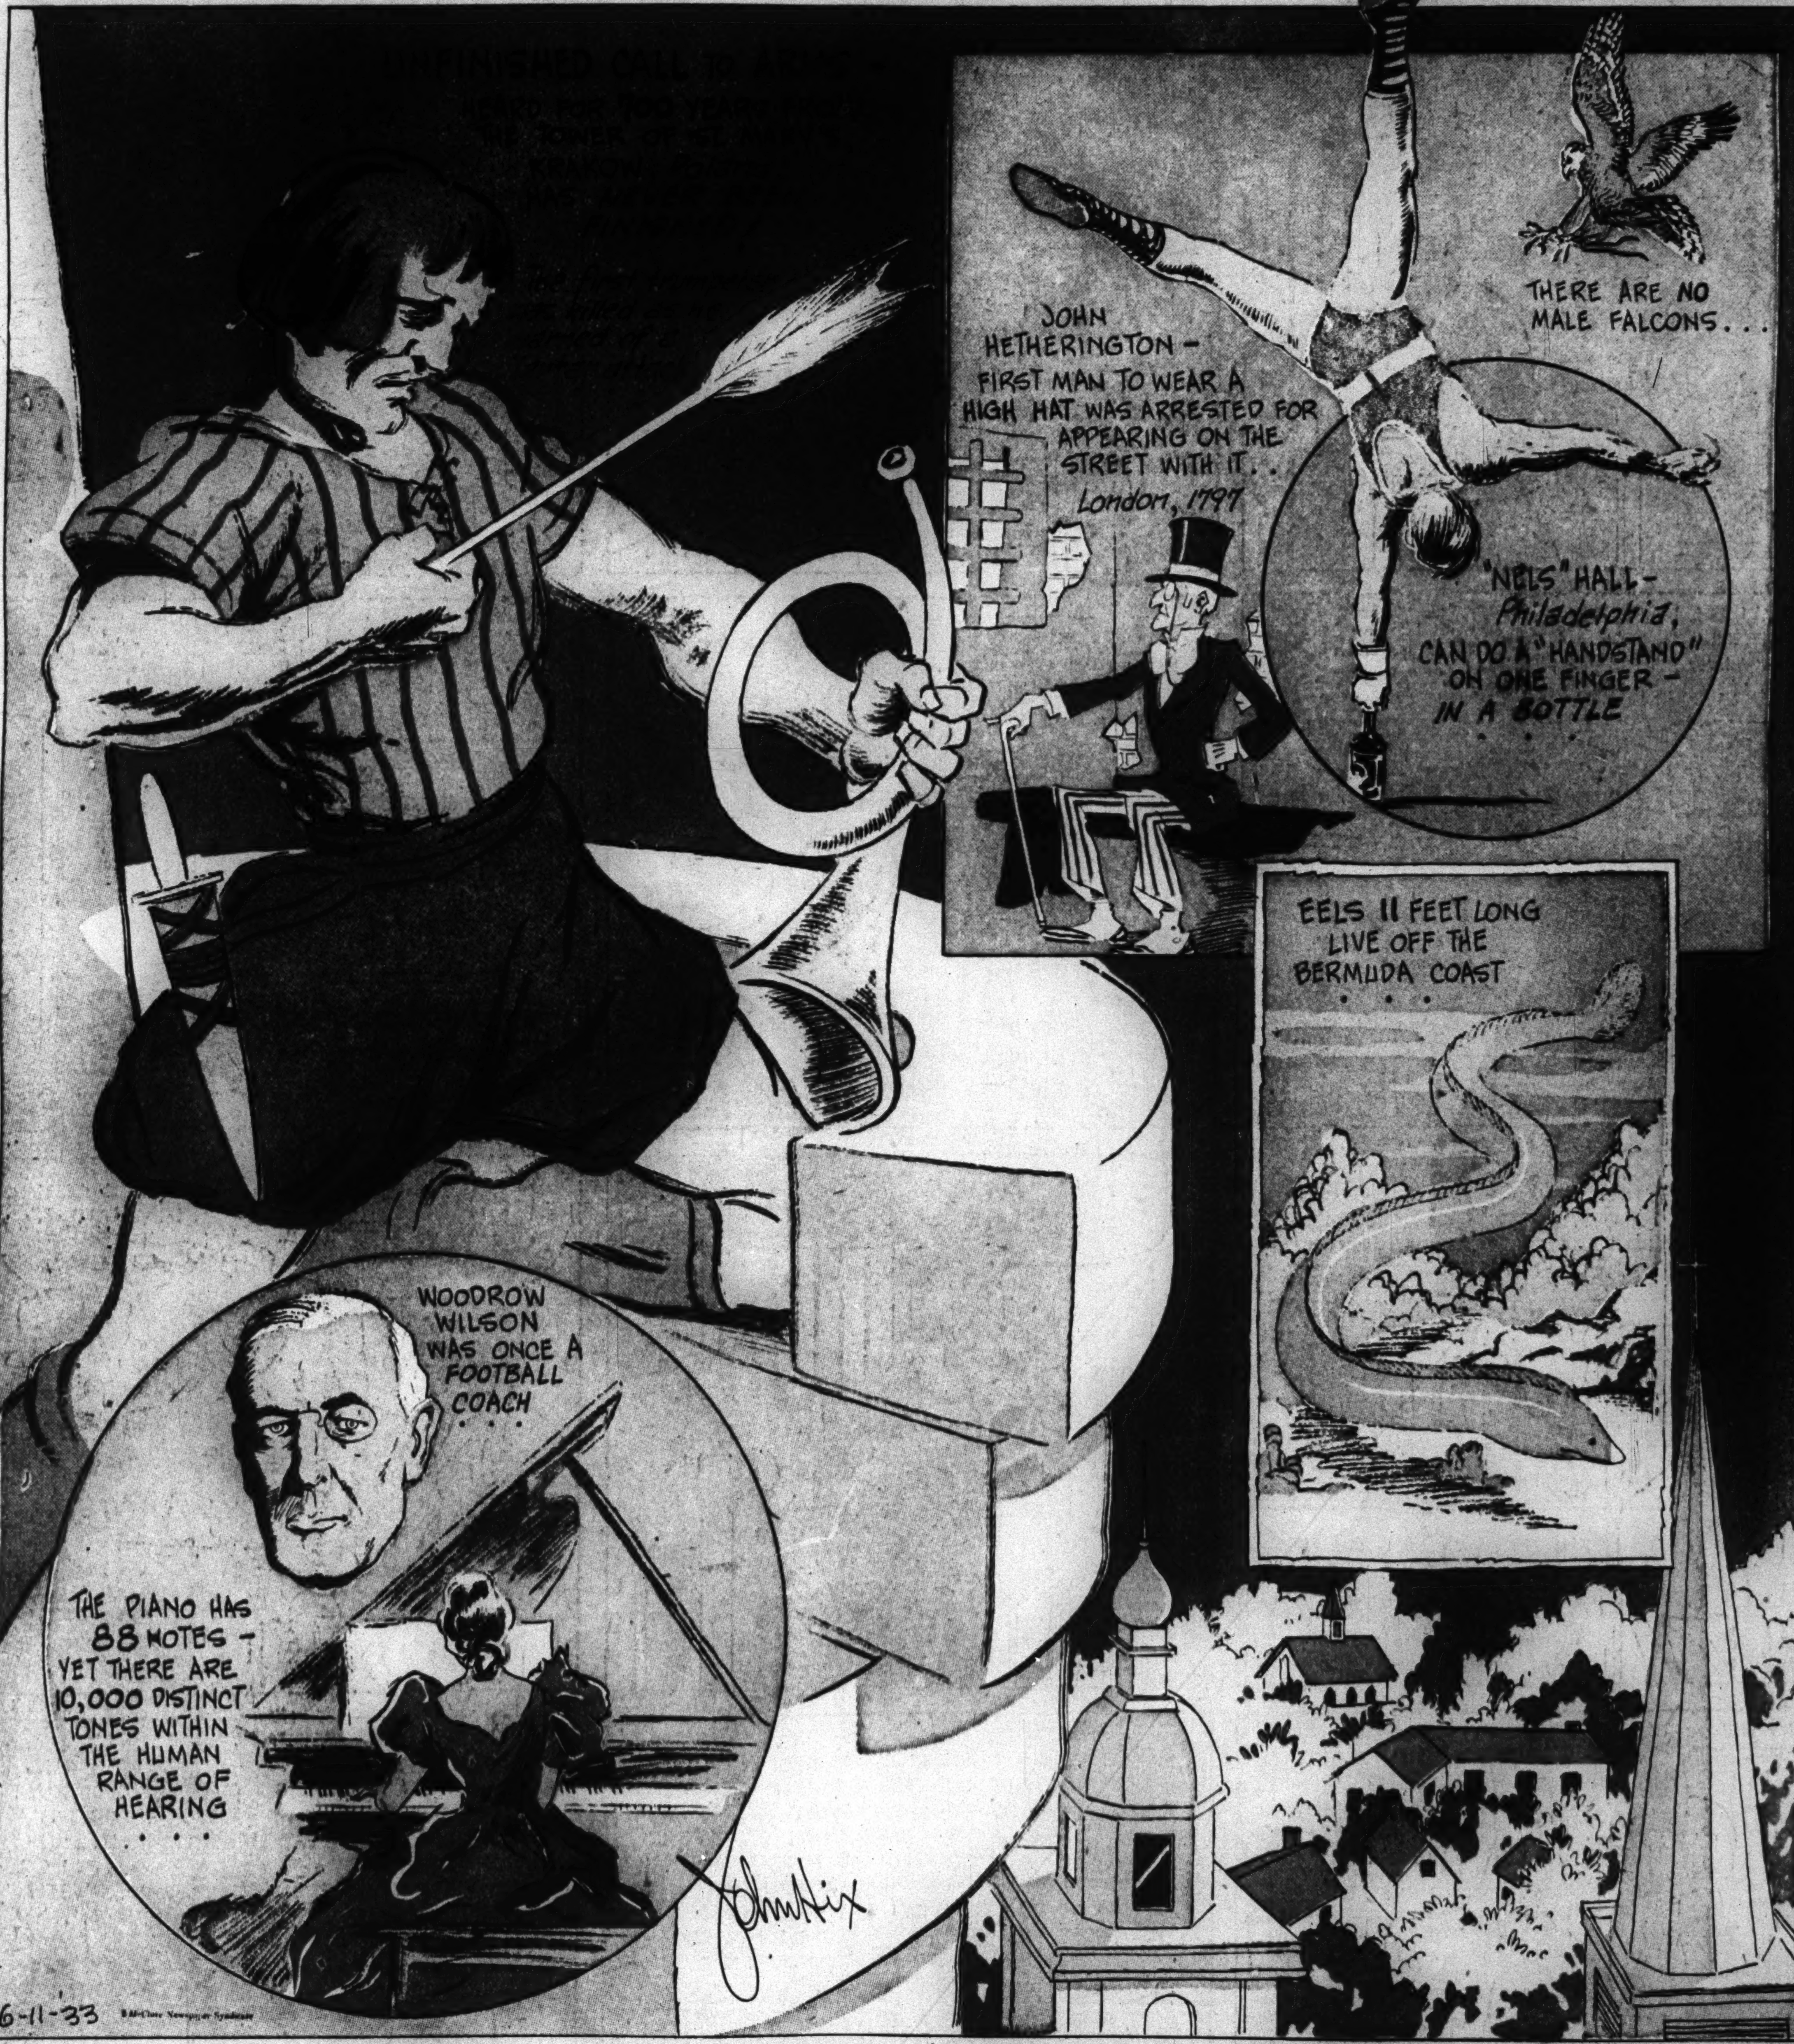
HOW MUCH FARTHER HAVE WE GOT TO WADE IN DIS WATER?
UNTIL WE'RE SURE IT'S SAFE TO GET OUT-YOU IDIOT.. COME ON AND KEEP QUIET!
BUT HOW DID THEY DO IT, WARDEN?
COME ON OUT INTO THE PRISON YARD-AND I'LL LET YOU FIGURE IT OUT — IT'S BEYOND ME!
ABOUT TWO O'CLOCK IN THE MORNING..THERE WAS A TERRIFIC EXPLOSION — THE ENTIRE PRISON WAS SHAKEN VIOLENTLY! WHEN THE SMOKE HAD CLEARED AWAY — THAT DAMAGE HAD BEEN DONE ---AND YOUR TWO PETS — STEVE, THE TRAMP, AND "STOOGE" VILLER WERE MISSING!
YOU SEE-THE EXPLOSION OCCURRED AT THIS POINT IN THE WALL WHERE WE WERE LAYING A NEW WATER MAIN. THAT PIPE WAS TO BRING THE NEW SUPPLY OF WATER FROM OUTSIDE INTO THE PRISON.
WARDEN-THERE'S A PECULIAR ODOR OF GASOLINE AROUND HERE-DO YOU NOTICE IT?
UM-- --UM--- WHY, YES-NOW THAT YOU MENTION IT.
WHERE ARE YOU GOING NOW, DETECTIVE?
LOOK! HERE ARE FOOT PRINTS AND THE MARKS OF AN OBJECT HAVING BEEN DRAGGED ALONG THE GROUND IN THIS DIRECTION-LET'S SEE WHERE THEY GO.
WHY-THAT'S THE SOUP KITCHEN-
YES-THE TRACKS LEAD RIGHT TO IT-- LOOKS LIKE THE DOOR'S OPEN TOO.
THERE'S NOTHING IN HERE BUT COOKING EQUIPMENT.... BUT..WE'RE NOT USING THIS PARTICULAR WING OF THE KITCHEN RIGHT NOW.
ALL THE MORE REASON WHY WE SHOULD INSPECT THE STEAM PRESSURE COOKERS.
OPEN THAT KETTLE!
GREAT SCOTT! IT'S HANLEY — ONE OF THE NIGHT GUARDS!
LET'S GET HIM OUT OF THERE-QUICK!
WHAT HAPPENED, OLD MAN?
ARE YOU ALL RIGHT, HANLEY?
HE'S PARTIALLY SUFFOCATED.
I WAS MAKING THE ROUNDS OF THE.. PRISON YARDS.. WHEN..OH..MY HEAD...MY HEAD...
...SUDDENLY-I SPIED TWO FIGURES-CARRYING SOMETHING IN BUCKETS...FROM THE SOAP FACTORY... ..IT WAS NAPTHA! THEY WERE POURING THE NAPTHA DOWN INTO THAT PORTION OF THE NEW WATER MAIN UNDER THE PRISON WALL! I STARTED TO HALT THEM WHEN ONE OF 'EM THREW A BUCKETFUL OF THE STUFF IN MY FACE---AND..THEN THEY MUST HAVE HIT ME ON THE HEAD.
THAT SUPPLIES THE SOLUTION, WARDEN. THEY MADE A TREMENDOUS BOMB BY BLOCKING OFF THE PORTION OF PIPE UNDER THE WALL-FILLING IT WITH NAPTHA-THEN IGNITING THE LIQUID, PROBABLY BY MEANS OF AN OIL-SOAKED CLOTH. UNBELIEVABLE? YES! BUT "STOOGE" VILLER AND STEVE, THE TRAMP, ARE NO ORDINARY CRIMINALS, WARDEN!
WHAT WILL BE TRACY'S NEXT MOVE??



Strange As It Seems

REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.

by JOHN HIX



The Unfinished Call of Arms was first sounded seven centuries ago from one of the twin towers of St. Mary's church, in Krakow, Poland, when a trumpeter climbed to its heights to call the townspeople to the defense of their city against an attack by the Tartars.

As he blew the warning. and as the first line of defense was hastily being formed, the Tartars' attack was opened. One of the invading bowmen sighted the bugler high on the tower—he shot an arrow. The trumpeter was killed before he finished his call.

In memory to the hero trumpeter, the hejnal, or morning song, has been sounded daily ever since, for 700 years, from the St. Mary's tower where he was killed. It is never finished—but choked off in the middle of the call, as was the first, by the Tartar arrow.

* * *

Strange as it seems, a male falcon never existed. Although "falcon," as commonly considered, is any of a breed of hunting birds which are tamed for gaming purposes, the falcon is, in fact, any of the female of the long winged hawks. The term falcon is a term of gender. The male of the species is the "tiercel" or "tarsel." The male is sometimes trained, but the female, or falcon proper, being a third larger and stronger, is more often used.

Although it appears to be a violation of a natural law, the spool, as shown, will actually roll uphill and wind up the string when the string is pulled. The spool, of course, must not slip on its edges. The string is fastened tightly about the center of the spool.
